West Grove boasts two live industries, and one that is not so live. The live industries interest all florists deeply; the other does not interest them just yet. West Grove is a small but extremely progressive town. The hotel proprietor and livery stable man meet you on the platform, agreeing perfectly with your estimate of the value of your time. With their assistance it is possible to lunch and reach your destination in an extremely short space of time.

The Conard & Jones Co. has a well appointed office and warehouse in a commanding position overlooking the nurseries. Robert Pyle, president of the company, carries on business in a set of offices that would be the envy of many a city man in their light and system. Large windows admit plenty of sunlight and fresh air. A set of books and card indexes are admirable in their simplicity and completeness. These cards are a valuable asset in the mailing business. Alphabetically arranged, they clearly and concisely state when and what each customer ordered and paid.

A half mile below the offices Antoine Wintzer presides over the greenhouses, filled with a splendid stock of roses in many, many varieties, and other plants too numerous to mention in detail. Propagating is the keynote of this establishment. Propagating is carried on in every season of the year; carried on in a way and success that is simply astonishing.

ing. The number of plants that can be produced from a given plant in a given time has been reduced to a mathematical certainty.

I will only give you one cultural note before closing this too brief description. Mr. Wintzer believes that the best results in the propagation of roses under glass are secured from stock that has been grown outdoors, and where the cuttings from such stock are put in sand in the same house; that is, are propagated under the same conditions under which they are grown.

Williamstown Junction.

William J. Muth, manager of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., suggested that REVIEW readers would like to know something about the splendid dahlias coming in from the Peacock Dahlia Farms. Through the courtesy of L. K. Peacock, the following notes were made on the field:

The Peacock Dahlia Farms comprise 15 acres of high, level ground, situated about eighteen miles east of the Delaware river in southern New Jersey. Fifty-five acres are devoted to dahlias, by far the larger portion to standard varieties of recognized value in the cut flower market. Mr. Peacock pointed out, with special pride, row after row of dahlias that were labeled and true to name. Care had been taken, he said, to keep the stock true and here were the results.

The tendency toward increasing the number of the best cut flower varieties was marked; an instance given was the filling of an order for 2,700 Sylvia in one day. A notable change in the development of the dahlia is the elimination of nearly all types except the decoratives and the singles, these types being the best for cut flower purposes. The cactus varieties, although beautiful, do not hold their heads erect—a serious fault in the dahlia.

Mr. Peacock is widely known as an introducer of novelties. In this class he has four aspirants of unusual merit. The first, named Mrs. J. G. Cassatt, is a superb variety of the decorative type, vigorous, free blooming, with a long stem and an immense flower of a deep, rich pink that might be described as a rose pink, though perhaps a few shades lighter, the petals being of the same beautiful color on both sides. The next variety, named Dorothy Peacock, is also of the decorative type; the charm of this variety is its color, a shrimp pink. The third, a new seedling, resembles the standard variety, Mrs. Clifford W. Bruton, but seems superior in size, form and color. Should this variety make good, it will be a great acquisition, as Mrs. Bruton has not always proved satisfactory, some growers claiming that it is deteriorating. The last is a clear single yellow, Century type, slightly shaded with orange, charming in appearance.

Mr. Peacock is changing his methods with regard to these varieties, using them for cut flowers only until their merit is recognized. His experience in distributing Jack Rose has taught him that this is the only way for an introducer to reap the benefit of his production. Commenting on the cut flower market this season, Mr. Peacock said that the prices had been better than ever before. When asked whether this was not due to shorter production, he replied that it was not so with him, production having fully equaled previous seasons. A small proportion of white is grown, the quality of the colored varieties yielding better returns. The singles have been found to be even more profitable than the doubles, on account of the high grade of the flowers.

Sydney Bayersdorfer celebrated his twenty-first birthday with a joyous freedom party at Kugler's on the evening of October 19. The London Flower Shop, W. B. Tabor, treasurer, was opened at 1609 Chestnut street October 16.

A. Lincoln Brown, of Cleveland, and Mrs. Brown, were in this city October 15 to 18. Mr. Brown, who was formerly with the Robert Craig Co., is now in charge of a private place, while Mrs. Brown conducts a retail flower shop in Cleveland. Their visit here was a sad one; they were attending the funeral of Mr. Brown's father.

D. D. L. Farson, Overbrook, Pa., was among the 2,000 visitors who attended the dahlia show of the Henry F. Michell Co. last week. This show was just in the nick of time, the last fine flowers of the season being staged and admired there.

A. B. Cartledge has given his new yacht, the Marguerite II, its initial cruise this week.

The monthly meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held October 19. Arrangements were perfected for the fall show next month.

J. Otto Thilow is the new chairman of the essay committee of the Florists' Club, under President Heacock, an admirable appointment.

Emil H. Gerschick has added orchids to his collection of flowering plants. Mr. Gerschick entertained his brother, a New Orleans florist, while here on his wedding trip.

The Market.

The local market was in good condition last week and the retail business took on a good aspect, which looks as though it would continue for the balance of the season. Naturally this is gratifying to all in the trade. There were numerous weddings and dinners reported among the leading retailers which used up considerable quantities of first-class stock. We are also expecting a good business this week, as the big horse show opened Monday, October 18 in the Coliseum.

Chrysanthemums are coming in freely now, but not as many as we would like to see. The prices are as yet stiff, but a big supply is expected this week. Carnations have been and are yet scarce and clean sales on these are reported for the last ten days. American Beauties have been plentiful in all grades. They are of good color and in great demand. In the smaller roses, white have the call. There are some fine Ivory and White Killarney in the market from J. F. Ammann. His My Maryland are also

Club Meeting.

The club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, October 14, in the old meeting hall in Odd Fellows' building. This being the first meeting for the new officers, all of them were present and the attendance was encouraging. President George B. Windler opened the meeting at 2 o'clock, with twenty-five members present. After the regular routine business had been transacted and the different committees had made their reports, the chairman called upon F. W. Brockman, chairman of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, for a few remarks on the coming flower show, to be given next month by the society. Mr. Brockman responded in his usual happy manner and made a good impression on the members, who at the close of his talk promised to assist the Horticultural Society in making its show a success. J. F. Ammann responded to the remarks of Mr. Brockman and became much enthused during his talk and pleaded that all the members unite and work for the success of the coming show. Ex-President Young also made an interesting talk regarding the success of the flower show. Mr. Brockman, before leaving, was given a vote of thanks for his attendance and was presented with a handsome bunch of dahlias by H. Jenne-mann, of Webster Park.

The president appointed a committee of three to attend to a display table of the Florists' Club at the flower show. The committee consists of W. C. Young, F. H. Weber and G. B. Windler, the president to take charge of the club's interest during the show. The trustees were instructed to prepare, for the next meeting of the club, a lunch for the members and visiting florists, who will be in the city attending the flower show, as the regular meeting takes place Thursday of the show week. Messrs. Bentzen, Ostertag and Schoenle will have charge of that part of the entertainment. The chairman instructed J. F. Ammann to prepare a paper for the next meeting on "What Do the Retailer, Wholesaler and Grower Derive from Flower Shows." Mr. Ammann accepted the task with much pleasure. The treasurer's report showed the club to be in good financial condition. The question box, as usual, brought out interesting discussions.

President Windler was much pleased with the first meeting over which he presided. The next meeting of the club will take place Thursday afternoon, November 11, at 2 o'clock.

Various Notes.

Swan Peterson, of Gibson City, Ill., spent a day with us last week, calling on the trade. Mr. Peterson is consigning to this market carnations, violets and roses, which are handled by C. A. Kuehn.

Tony Reising, representing L. Baumann & Co., Chicago, called last week on the trade in the interest of florists' supplies.

J. W. Dunford's place in Clayton was sold recently under a deed of trust. The place was bought in by Mr. Call, father-in-law of Mr. Dunford.

C. Young & Sons Co. report having a number of weddings last week. The fall bulb trade has been quite heavy with this firm, both locally and shipping.

Fred C. Weber had an attractive show window last week, displaying a lot of extra fine yellow chrysanthemums.

Adolph Brix is having considerable trouble with the heating system in his Mead avenue plant, and has a force of men at work, re-arranging the work of non-competent men.

Fred Ostertag was the chief decorator for his brother's big job at the Columbian Club last week. The bigger the job, the better Fred Ostertag likes it.

Miss Bell Miller is sending in a splendid lot of Carnot roses to C. A. Kuehn, which came in handy during the scarcity the latter part of last week.

George H. Angermueller is handling a big lot of fancy American Beauties from Heller Bros. The horse show this week at the Coliseum should use up a great lot of these and also many cut chrysanthemums.

W. C. Smith, of the Smith Wholesale Floral Co., says that California violets are coming in better each day, and that he will again handle the bulk of them that come from Kirkwood this season.

Kalisch Bros., at Delmar and Taylor avenues, are making a fine display of decorative plants and cut flowers in their big show house. E. A. Kalisch says business has been good.

Henry Berning is handling a fine lot of roses this season. He will also be well supplied with extra fancy cut mums of all varieties in season.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society is receiving some liberal press notices for the coming show in the daily papers. Chairman Brockman, of the executive committee, who appeared before the members of the St. Louis Florists' Club last week, succeeded in rounding up the members and all will lend a helping hand to make this year's show a grand success. NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week opens with a cold rain and a most uninspiring outlook for the cut flower trade. Saturday, October 16, was the only day of last week when business was at all satisfactory. The cold snap and the tingle of the frost seemed to put life into the trade and there was a general cleaning up after the many days of inactivity. All asters, dahlias, coleus and salvias have retired from view.

The flood of mums is rolling in from every side. Every retail window is a flower show now because of them. Prices have fallen, naturally with such heavy shipments, and only the largest and most perfect command a value at all in line with growers' expectations. With the chrysanthemums so abundant and orchids running them a close race, prices of the latter have also retreated so that the smallest of the retail stores now can safely make these a part of their window displays. Perfect orchid flowers of numerous varieties come in daily from many sources, several of the private greenhouses adding to the legitimate wholesale shipments to this market.

The best Beauties hover around 25 cents, but only for the fortunate few, and the rest drop at times to figures that are not worthy of honorable mention. So is it with the few top-notchers of Bride, Maid, Killarney and Richmond, while the rest wait upon the buyer with humility and quick acceptance. Carnations lost their advance during the summer spell last week and nothing sold above 2 cents. These rates hold this week and $1 per hundred will buy good stock in large lots. Possibly a cold spell may lift values a little before the week is old.

Lilies broke in two again and the best were selling at 6 cents Saturday, October 16. Valley joined the procession and came down, and violets hung their heads after the hot spell had done its deadly work on quality, and even the street merchants passed them by. The best sold at 40 cents per hundred. Most of the boxes were jobbed off and many thousands could not be sold at all. Some of the wholesalers looked up last year's record for the same week, and declared it was just as bad then, and from this historically correct assurance some consolation may be obtained.

Various Notes.

The big flower show of November 3 at the Museum of Natural History is the theme of conversation now in New York floricultural circles. If Secretary Nash can develop the publicity he seeks and the local florists manifest their loyalty, as now anticipated, it will be the greatest success in this line the city has ever known. The Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club make a strong team, and they can carry any load if they pull together. The fall shows begin in earnest next week on every side of us: at Madison, Wednesday and Thursday; at Glen Cove, Thursday and Friday; at Lenox, Tuesday and Wednesday; and at Elberon, N. J., Wednesday and Thursday. The following week the shows will be at White Plains for the Tarrytown Society, at Mount Kisco, at Hartford, Conn., and at Dobb's Ferry, N. Y. That will be about all until the Chrysanthemum Society of America exhibits at New York, November 10 to 12, at the American Institute.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Morgan left Saturday, October 16, for their home in New Orleans, after a visit at Kearney, N. J. Mrs. Morgan is the daughter of J. K. Allen.

Adolph Meyer, formerly with H. Warendorff, has opened a store at H. Hoffmeier's old location on Broadway and Eighty-second street, which he calls The Smart Set, the decoration scheme of which is entirely in white. Flower stores are numerous in this part of New York.

Edward Falkner, the street evangelist, is dead. He was a warm friend of the Hanft Bros., Charles A. Dards and other florists of the uptown section.

Philip Kessler is nursing an injured hand, received in a collision with a taxicab last week. It was a close shave for the athletic wholesaler.

R. G. Wilson reports a good sale for his handy corsage holder, which he exhibited at the Cincinnati convention. Mr. Hicks, formerly of Hicks & Crawbuck, is now bookkeeper for Mr. Wilson. The Japanese decoration in Mr. Wilson's windows is a most unique display.

John Zschorna, the florist who died of paralysis last week in Brooklyn, was for several years located at the corner of Nostrand and Jefferson avenues, and before that for ten years lived in Mexico.

Mr. Sharkey, many years bookkeeper for Thomas Young, Jr., has decided to try the retail business on his own account and has opened a store on Twenty-eighth street, near Fourth avenue, a good location.

Mrs. C. C. Trepel is at Mt. Sinai hospital, recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She is a popular lady and greatly missed in her management of the firm's Brooklyn headquarters at Losier's.

Aloysius Gross, the murderer of John Scott, was tried October 13 and 14 at Brooklyn and a verdict of manslaughter in the first degree returned. The verdict carries a sentence of twenty years in the penitentiary.

idea of the market's needs and supply is secured, harmony of prices and interests encouraged and fraternity in its most practical form exemplified to the mutual advantage of all the members of the association.

E. W. Fenger, of Irvington, N. J., has for some time been shipping his stock to Henshaw & Fenrich in the corrugated pasteboard boxes manufactured in Brooklyn by the Thompson & Norris Co. He says he finds they save express charges, are durable, making many trips before giving out, and he likes them better than any shipping box he ever has used.

Gottlieb Myer, on Madison avenue, has been busy of late. He had the family order at the funeral of Mrs. Ward McAllister. Wednesday, October 20, at the home of the bride and the Church of the Epiphany, he had the decorations for the Watts-Jackson wedding. In November the sister of Miss Jackson will be married to Mr. Goodsell, the nurseryman, and Mr. Myer will have the decorative work to do. The new yellow rose, which he handles exclusively in New York, he has named the Golden Beauty. The rose originated at Raymond, Miss., with Prof. C. S. North, superintendent of education there, and was called by him the Peary, but later changed to the Frederick Cook. What further trouble this will cause the pole travelers is a matter of conjecture, but of the beauty of the rose and its popularity Mr. Myer declares the proofs are all here, and no records are buried anywhere. It is a rich yellow, of strong stem and lasting quality.

Bowling for the fall and winter season begins this week in New York. Captain Berry has decided Wednesday evenings the best for the majority and this will not interfere with the matches of the club with Astoria and Flatbush.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

Horticultural Society Affairs.

A meeting of the Horticultural Society of New York was held at the American Museum of Natural History Wednesday, October 13. Fourteen new members were elected, including one life member. The election was also announced of T. A. Havemeyer as a vice-president. An interested audience listened to the lecture announced for the day, "Coniferous Evergreens; Their Use in the Landscape," by George V. Nash. The speaker illustrated his remarks with numerous lantern slides, some of them colored.

In a previous issue of this paper attention was called to the exhibition of this society to be held at the American Museum of Natural History November 3 to 7. The exhibition will open on the evening of November 3 at 7 o'clock, and this evening will be devoted especially to the reception of the members of the society, the museum and affiliated organizations. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday the hours will be from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m., with the exception of the hours between 5 and 7, when the museum will be closed to the public. On Sunday the exhibition will be open from 1 to 5 p. m. It is to be noted also that this exhibition is entirely free, no charge being made for admission.

It is hoped that all will appreciate the advantages offered by this exhibition, and that all who can will enter the competition. All are welcome as exhibitors, whether members of the society or not, and an invitation is extended to societies and individuals to participate. The secretary will be pleased to send a schedule to anyone on application. Address communications to George V. Nash, secretary, Horticultural Society of New York, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York City.

The management makes an especial request that entries be made early, so that space may be properly allotted, thus insuring a prompt placing of exhibits immediately on arrival.

Those who have visited the American Museum of Natural History are acquainted with the beauties of its interior and the excellent facilities offered by its spacious halls for exhibition purposes. To those who are not familiar with this building, a word of explanation may be welcome. The main entrance is on the ground floor, on Seventy-seventh street. A large foyer succeeds the entrance corridor. This foyer is oval in shape and is illuminated by numerous incandescent lights, and would make an ideal place in which to exhibit large specimen palms and other plants, and perhaps some of the larger specimens of chrysanthemums. All entering the museum pass through this foyer. Opening from this are three radiating halls, well lighted by ample windows, and well supplied with electric lights. Cases, placed transversely on either side of the broad central aisle, divide these halls into smaller compartments, in which may be placed individual exhibits or displays of a special nature. These cases are of elegant construction and will furnish a rich background to the exhibits. The halls are well ventilated, the temperature not too high, and the floors of stone, factors which go a long way in preserving in good condition the flowers exhibited. The excellent appearance of the flowers at the end of the exhibition held here last fall was remarked by all. There is ample space available, so that none need feel cramped for room, and all are invited to make their exhibits as complete as possible. If all interested in horticulture, both professional and amateur, will do their best, if each will take a personal interest in the matter, the exhibition will prove one of the largest and best ever given in this vicinity, and will do much toward awakening an active interest in horticulture, an interest which cannot but be of benefit to all.

A few changes have been made in the schedule as first issued. A special prize for a collection of vegetables has been received from Arthur T. Boddington, $15 for first, $10 for second. It has been decided to slightly change the requirements as to length of stems for cut chrysanthemums, the requirement now being that they shall be not less than thirty inches long, instead of three feet. WESTERN NEW YORK NOTES.

"It does one good to get away for a spell," remarked Alfred Patrick, of Auburn, N. Y., who, with his side partner, had just returned from New York city, where he had made an extended visit for the first time in many years. "I saw some wonderful sights and fine stock," he continued, "but our boys have done well in my absence; in fact, as well as I could do myself." Mrs. Patrick saw some choice funeral pieces, but the handsome wreath upon which she was at work at the time of my visit would be hard to beat—a simple but chaste arrangement of Bride roses, purple asters and Maidenhair fern, clustered upon a bronze galax base.

Mums are grown here in soil that has been used for the same purpose three seasons. It is dug out, sweetened and fertilized, and the way those mums just glory in it would delight the eye of the grower who is ever looking for new soil, which is oftentimes hard to get. Scarcity is not the reason here, as there is a big farm to draw upon, but the experiment is such a success that it is worthy of trial by all. Robinson is as early here as Polly Rose. Virginia Poehlmann, at the time of my visit, was fit to cut. Sinclair, Monrovia and Golden Glow are the trio of yellows.

Carnations here are fine. Whitmani fern will be in big demand this season, when grown as it is here. There is nothing on the market today that has such value; it is the retailer's standby. Among a batch of hardy flowers I noted Pentstemon Sensation, well named. It is a dazzler, and for cutting is most valuable.

G. Hicks & Son, of Auburn, make a specialty of single violets, which are always in demand and bring a good price. W. & T. Cass, of Geneva, N. Y., have rebuilt part of their extensive range and added two houses, each 20x125, for pot plants.

Smith & Gannett, of Geneva, N. Y., run a small dynamo which has furnished electricity for their entire plant and dwelling at a cost of about 3 cents per hour. "City advantages with rural comforts," remarked Mr. Gannett, who runs into town every morning with the cut for the store and to get the latest town topics, returning on an early car to keep his finger on the machinery—the secret of success.

Thomas Mansfield, of Lockport, N. Y., has everything in running order. Old Boreas does not catch him napping, as it has many of the craft just now. Why is it? Summer cannot last forever, and yet at the first blizzard many of our fellow craftsmen find the boiler has not been overhauled and repairs of some kind are needed, just at the time when much else requires doing. October Frost is a favorite here, the best mum in the collection.

The fall flower show at Rochester, N. Y., is sure to be a success. The boys are doing their best and much stock will be shipped in. Colin Ogston, of the Kimball Conservatories, is saving some of his best mums and they are "crackers," grown to single stem from a crown bud. It will take some great stuff to beat them. Soleil d'October is considered the finest early yellow, an incurved variety, a fine keeper and shipper.

The William Scott Co., of Corfu, N. Y., is keeping up the reputation for high grade stock established by the founder, who never tired of telling the boys how things should be done. The result of his training is seen in the well kept appearance of the plant here, in charge of Alec, who is often called upon for several shipments daily to Cold Springs, where William, Jr., has charge of the home place. To one so thoroughly acquainted with this spot as is the writer, it seems, upon entering, that one must meet the cheery greeting of our old friend, whose memory will be ever green and whose presence is felt by all who met him here. Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. O. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

WALTER P. STOKES, Philadelphia, has retired to Mount Pocono for his annual literary effort, the general catalogue.

HARRISON & SONS, seed growers at Leicester, England, are distributing this season a new pea called Lord Leicester, a cross between Gradus and Stratagem.

DIRECTORS of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League held a meeting at New York October 20 to discuss seed crops and other features affecting the season's business outlook.

PRETTY nearly all the big houses are well along on the general catalogues. No one wants to be late this year, and seedsmen are taking time by the forelock who never did it before.

SPEAKING of the seed season, D. H. Gilbert, Monticello, Fla., said: "Melon seed crops turned out very satisfactory, indeed, this year. The crops were harvested earlier than usual, and deliveries were made promptly, practically complete deliveries on all sorts."

THE report from Holland is that the tulip bulbs are pretty well cleaned up, but that demand of late has not been brisk, reorders not having been numerous. Planting for next season's crop began later than usual, but the stock has gone into the ground under fair conditions.

BULB business generally has been more than satisfactory, though in sections that had warm weather well into October the demand was late in starting. It looks as though there will be no surplus, houses that are well sold up and trying to buy in quantity on this side finding little stock to be had.

C. D. MCKAY, until lately a partner in the business of Watkins & Simpson, London, has now transferred his energies, and become a shareholder in the firm of Cooper, Taber & Co. Mr. McKay was connected with Watkins & Simpson for twenty-three years, the latter ten years as partner, and took a prominent part in the management, and is also well-known for his work and writings in connection with the so-called French gardening.

REAPPRAISEMENTS.

The customs authorities have announced the following reappraisements of merchandise of interest to the trade:

ONION SEEDS.—From T. M. Reid, Tenerife, exported July 7 to 14, 1909; entered at New York. File Nos. 52153, 52161, 52175. Invoice Nos. 4254, 1265, 5378. Findings of Walte, G. A.: Crystal wax; entered at $1, advanced to $1.25 per pound. White; entered at 80 cents, advanced to 90 cents per pound.

THE FREE SEEDS.

Even if clothes will be higher this winter and other prices were boosted by the patriotic action of Congress in passing the tariff bill, the lawmakers did not entirely forget the needs of the people. Overcoats may be beyond the general reach, but garden seeds will be free. Congress not only voted the usual gift to each of its members for distribution among his constituents, but increased it. Eleven million packages are to be sent to brighten the homes where it was necessary to cut down the supply of sugar. Each package contains five varieties of flower and vegetable seed, and is accom-

HAARLEM 1910 BULB EXHIBITION.

The Vastness of the Preparations.

Preparations for the great exhibition of flowering bulbs in Haarlem, Holland, are going ahead, and one of my reasons for again referring to the exhibition is to impress upon readers of the REVIEW the advisability of noting the date, so that they may plan their European trips accordingly. The exhibition opens March 23, 1910, and continues until May 12.

An international horticultural exhibition on a great scale opens in Brussels April 30, so that it will be possible to see both exhibitions. The distance between them is only three or four hours' travel by railway.

The Haarlem exhibition grounds cover about twenty acres and are now in the hands of two well-known garden architects, L. A. Springer and E. Goemans. Hundreds of beds of different shapes are already planted with bulbs, and the nurserymen of Boskoop and Aalsmeer are contributing conifers, rhododendrons, etc.

A Continuous Display of Blooms.

The exhibition will be divided into three distinct periods, and as one class of bulbs goes out of flower—that is, those planted in the autumn—another set of bulbs in bloom will take their place, and thereafter a third set, thereby maintaining a continuous display of hyacinths, tulips, narcissi and other bulbs. The surroundings will be planted with early flowering shrubs.

Two large buildings for the exhibition of forced flowers are being erected, each 120x165 feet. These are surrounded by hundreds of beds, now being planted. Crossing a rustic bridge to another part of the grounds, a splendid view of the whole is obtained, including a large rock garden filled with early flowering plants.

Aid From the Government.

The Dutch government is financially supporting the exhibition and intends to erect a large building in the interests of agriculture, where appliances and products will be on view, and in close proximity there will be a postoffice for postal work, telegrams and telephones.

Restaurants, band stands, etc., are also in course of construction, all blending with the general scheme of decoration. The bulb growers and nurserymen of Holland are supporting the exhibition and contributing freely from their fields and nurseries toward what will undoubtedly be the largest and most representative horticultural display ever seen in Haarlem.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Meeting of Executive Committee.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society held a meeting in New York city, and it was decided to issue a second edition of the supplementary schedule for the exhibition of 1910, to be held in the American Museum of Natural History, New York city, with the list of additional special prizes that have been offered.

President Poehlmann urges the New York people to do their best in both growing stuff and in making prizes of such character that they will outdo what was offered at Chicago. Vice-president Pierson responds that if it is possible they will put up such a show in New York as will attract the attendance of tens of thousands of people because of the beauty of the show, its surroundings and extent, and every effort should be made to get a list of special prizes that would tempt efforts upon the part of the best growers of all kinds, amateur or commercial, to show up what they can do. New York city is the greatest rose market in all America. Part of the work of the American Rose Society, as stated in its by-laws, is "to increase the general interest in the cultivation and to improve the standard of excellence of

A House of Horseshoe Brand Giganteum, size 6/8 inches. These bulbs had been in cold storage six months before they were planted

Did you know that it costs more to grow a good quality of lily bulbs, or did you think they all cost the same in Japan, and that the difference in price here was attributed to cut-priced seed bazaars in their scramble to increase that particular branch of their business?

It requires from three to four years to bring a seed bulb to exportable size. The longer a grower must fertilize and cultivate his bulbs, the more costly. Now, if a bulb be planted near the top of the soil, it will round out to marketable size quicker than if planted deep down in the ground; but by hastening that growth much of the vitality of the bulb is exhausted and it generally proves defective in flowering results. Therefore bulbs planted properly cost more to produce than those mushroomed to size a year earlier by the hot sun pouring down on them in the fields.

Good seed bulbs, planted deep, well cultivated and matured, are the kind that throw a strong stem and produce results that are a profit to the florist. Still some buyers prefer to pay less for their bulbs and trust to luck, rather than pay the difference in price and trust to good bulbs.

Good Giganteum bulbs ready for immediate shipment. Order your Cold Storage Giganteum now for shipment during 1910.

Not how cheap

the rose for all the people, and to make it especially useful to amateurs."

It was resolved at the meeting of the executive committee to hold a meeting of the Rose Society November 3, 1909, at the horticultural exhibition to be held in New York at the Museum of Natural History, to take up such matters as may be of interest to the Rose Society.

Encouragement to Home Amateurs.

October 12 there assembled before the Union Free School of Fishkill Landing, N. Y., a company of over 500 to listen to the report of a home garden committee, consisting of the Rev. Dr. MacCullum, W. J. Pralatowski, and Frank Tully, the street commissioner.

For six months this committee had been overlooking the gardens of the village, one of which was that of Mrs. Amelia Lefevere, a colored woman, who had a front yard devoted exclusively to roses and so well kept that it attracted the general attention, and as an encouragement for home amateurs, the American Rose Society at its meeting in Cincinnati voted a silver medal to be awarded in recognition of this excellent example of amateur work. When the medal was presented to her, the whole company cheered most lustily and nothing that occurred was of more public interest than this particular act.

The committee also made mention of two children's rose gardens which were really a credit to anyone. One was Minnie Meyers, and the other Day Burnham, a girl and a boy. This sort of work is productive of much usefulness.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Another horse show was held in Louisville, and is history now. Some of the best stock in the country was shown, likewise some of the swellest gowns and quite a few fancy flowers. Some of the florists claim this to be the best horse show, from the florists' standpoint, ever held here, while others are not inclined to think it was any better than the rest. On the whole, everything proved quite satisfactory. The call was for strictly first-class stock and this grade cleaned out every day. To help matters, we had two frosty nights the first part of the week and all outdoor stock was put to the bad, with the exception of a few dahlias which were protected with canvas.

American Beauties sold well and were about equal to the demand. My Maryland and Killarney were used up as fast as they came in and the prices were good. Good carnations were at a premium all through the week. Yellow and white mums also cleaned out well each day. Violets had a good call, but the quality is poor and a few of the stores refused to handle them, depending on orchids and valley, which were fine and sold well. Orchids and valley were the principal flowers used in corsages. Gardenias had a good many calls, but were rather scarce.

The funeral of Senator Lindsey, which was held at Frankfort, helped business the latter part of the week, as quite a bit of work was sent from here.

Various Notes.

Jacob Schulz furnished the bouquets for a big wedding last week. The bride carried a shower bouquet of several hundred valley. The three maids carried from day to day. The quality is fine. Brides and Maids are plentiful. Killarney and Richmond are in fair supply. Golden Gates and Uncle Johns are becoming more abundant. There is some Rhea Reid grown here, but the growers seem to like Richmond the better of the two, though the store men like Reid. Beauties are still in fair demand.

Carnations are more plentiful and the quality is improving, but there are not nearly enough at present to meet the demand. Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and Perfection take the lead in quantity. Though the other varieties are looking fine, they are not producing nearly as many blooms. Victory and Beacon are coming more plentifully every day now, but still the supply is away below the demand.

Valley is in fair demand and there are some few calls for orchids. Smilax and asparagus sell fairly well and there is a good supply. Violets are in only fair quantity; the quality is improving right along.

The Market.

Market conditions remain about the same as reported last week. Stock is no more plentiful, but business seems to have picked up considerably, thus making a better outlook.

Monday, October 18, was a particularly good day, there being a steady flow of customers in many of the stores all day long.

White chrysanthemums are now coming in in larger quantities, principally the Clementine Touse, Kalb and Midge. In yellow we have Halliday, Golden Glow and Monrovia, while Pacific is about the only available pink at the present writing. However, a week of good, favorable weather should give any amount of mums, as the buds are all ready to burst open, with a little encouragement from the sun.

Various Notes.

Miss Amanda Taepke was married Wednesday evening to Bert Haberkorn, a well known young contractor in this city. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents and was quite an elaborate affair. Several hundred friends and relatives saw the happy young people start on life's journey. The bride is well known to the florists, hav-

Albert Stahelin, of Redford, is the latest florist to add an automobile to his stable. He recently purchased a four-cylinder Winton car and hereafter Stahelin's carnations will receive an auto ride to the Detroit market, whenever the weather permits.

Club Meeting.

A well attended meeting of the Florists' Club was held Monday evening, October 18, and the name of Chas. Distelrath was proposed for membership.

The subject of the evening was a discussion of fall preparations for Easter and many took an active interest in the proceedings. The drift of the talk was that we should have more variety in plants for Easter. It was suggested to the growers that instead of growing only roses and carnations, they go into plant growing to a small extent, as this market needs more good plants.

Mr. Brown thought it would be a splendid plan if the growers and retailers got together at times and had a good heart-to-heart talk. He complained about the practice of some growers who sell plants cheaper to grocers at Easter and other holidays than to retail florists.

Wm. Dilger blamed the modern greenhouses to some extent for the condition of the plant market. He says that the first thing a new grower thinks of is carnations, then perhaps roses, and there he stays, because the way the houses are usually built nowadays makes it a hard problem to grow a variety of stock. His suggestion was to have a few small houses or even lean-tos, as the temperature can then be regulated to suit the different plants. Mr. Dilger also advised the florists to read more. "Read the trade papers," said Dilger, "if you want to keep up to date, but do not only read the news items but study the cultural articles."

Albert Pochelon did not agree with Mr. Dilger in regard to the greenhouses. He called attention to the fact that the best plant growers in the east have the most modern houses.

In answer to "what variety of mums make the best pot plants," it was said any variety can be grown successfully in pots.

All those who answered the question, "To what extent has sterilizing soil benefited you?" were of the opinion that, if anything, the sterilizing only tends to take the life out of the soil. Sterilizing soil, however, helps seed to germinate.

Vegetable Forcing.

VEGETABLE FORCERS MEET.

A Successful Convention.

The second annual convention of the Greenhouse Vegetable Growers' Association was held in the Lyceum theater at Ashtabula, O., last week and was a success in every particular. There were about seventy-five present when President E. A. Dunbar called the convention to order Tuesday afternoon and introduced Mayor Cook to make a speech of welcome, after which Mr. Dunbar read his address covering the year's work. Among other things he said:

"There may be some lines of work in the world that must be conducted secretly. If greenhouse vegetable men have had such ideas in the past, they are fast discarding them, for we realize that the real issue is, how shall we best supply what the consumer desires?"

"First, we must get acquainted with each other, clear across the country, east and west, north and south, and a committee must be appointed to locate us, to secure the data of the amount of glass and the crops produced. We must also see to it that the consumer makes our acquaintance. It is not sufficient that our vegetables drift into his kitchen from an unknown source. Our publicity committee must get busy and inform these customers regarding the capital, labor and skill that go into the product so freely offered. We have not begun yet to solicit the patronage of the public with printers' ink—that one argument properly handled should double our present sales.

"Second, we must study our market. There is an old saying that a crop well grown is half sold. That would indicate that a buyer exists, especially for a good article. And we have most of us been in the business long enough to know that it doesn't pay to raise a poor crop of anything. If the buyer is waiting for fancy stock, why should we hesitate to show our neighbor how to produce it?"

"The people at large are gradually finding out that a mixture of our products with their diet is really what nature intended, and once they get the habit they soon find they cannot afford to pass us by. We must bear in mind that our customers are growing in numbers very fast; that the world is ready to welcome something new; that something to eat out of season will appeal to all good lovers, and that they don't mind the price if they get value received.

"However, the nature of our products is such that we cannot place them in elevators or cold storage, subject to a higher market. The market price varies, high or low, governed by the law of supply from day to day. It is not a question of the consumer buying everything in sight because it is cheap. He is willing to pay, say, 20 cents for a pound of lettuce or tomatoes, which is all he needs. A surplus on the market cuts the price in two, but the customer takes only one pound, which is all he needs. The balance is dumped and the grower has lost in proportion as he exceeded the demand. Now, the solution of this undesirable condition, as far as the grower is concerned, is to increase the number of consumers. Right here our national association will be of great value to us, in indicating, limiting and distributing the quantity of one vegetable to be produced from time to time out of season.

"Fifteen years ago there were scarcely more pounds of lettuce grown under glass than there are tons of it today. As it became known that it could be successfully grown and sold, the supply rapidly increased, until today we have plenty, and tomorrow we must try out some of the other vegetables, which our program committee has arranged for us to hear about. We should never again see lettuce sold as cheap as it was last spring. I believe that I am correct in the statement that the single crop that produces the largest returns in the state of Massachusetts is cucumbers under glass."

The state vice-presidents' reports showed the industry in a flourishing condition.

Treasurer M. L. Ruetenik reported receipts for the year as $357 and expenditures $195.41. The secretary's report showed a membership of about eighty-five.

The secretary was voted $100 for his services the past year and the same sum for the year to come.

Officers Elected.

The following officers were elected: President, C. W. Waid, New Carlisle, O. Vice-president, Franklin De Kleine, Grand Rapids, Mich. Secretary, Samuel W. Severance, Louisville, Ky.

Treasurer, M. L. Ruetenik, Cleveland, O. The by-laws were amended to permit the executive board to designate the time and place of the annual meeting.

The report of the committee on publicity was read by S. W. Severance. C. W. Waid reported for the committee on crop and market conditions.

A committee, consisting of B. H. Thorne, W. H. Thompson and H. B. Friez, was appointed to draft resolutions and later brought in a report expressing the thanks of the association to all who had contributed to the success of the convention, and especially the greenhouse vegetable growers of Ashtabula, whose labors had been unremitting.

Papers Read.

Among the papers read were: "Some Pointers for Market Gardeners," by J. S. Brigham, Bowling Green, O., who said every gardener ought to have glass; "Forcing Rhubarb," by W. R. Lazenby, Ohio State University, who detailed methods that have brought good results; "Cauliflower," by T. L. Brown, South Manchester, Conn., read by C. W. Waid, a paper that brought out considerable discussion; "Fall Tomatoes," by M. M. Miesse, Lancaster, O., who said the closest attention is required to get profitable results; "Celery," by B. H. Thorne, Wooster, O., who described several interesting experiments with celery; "Radishes," by C. W. Waid, New Carlisle, O., who opened an interesting discussion; "The Importance of Uniformity in the Varietal Character in Vegetable Seeds," by W. W. Tracy, Washington, D. C., whose address was rather technical; "Diseases of Greenhouse Vegetables and Their Prevention," by A. D. Selby, Wooster, O., who spoke at considerable length; "From Farm to Family Fresh," by H. B. Fullerton, Huntington, N. Y., who used a stereopticon to show how it is done on Long Island; "Local Organizations," by F. De Kleine, Grand Rapids, who said there is real money in them; "Lettuce," by C. H. Gallup, of Ashtabula, who said Grand Rapids is the money-maker; "Soils," by Prof. Gemson, of Michigan Agricultural College, who said on the soil depend the results.

The trades' display was in the auditorium of the city hall, under the direction of J. H. Rice, of Ashtabula. Among the exhibits were greenhouse material, carrying devices, window glass, greenhouse paints, ventilator apparatus, pipe hangers, steam traps, gutters, flower pots, straw mats, formaldehyde preparations, boiler parts, chemicals, watering apparatus, etc.

Hospitalities.

On the afternoon of October 13 the visitors were entertained by the Ashtabula Automobile Club, about seventy-five machines being available for a trip about the city, including a tour of inspection through the many large and well ordered vegetable growing establishments.

A banquet was held on the evening of October 13 in the parlors of the Congregational church, the repast being prepared and served by the ladies of the church. About 125 attended. The tables were decorated with lettuce. E. A. Dunbar presided and called on many speakers, among them Franklin De Kleine, Grand Rapids; H. F. Thompson, Massachusetts; A. D. Selby, Wooster, O.; J. S. Brigham, Bowling Green, O.; J. H. Rice, Ashtabula; A. A. Pickett, Ashtabula; R. P. Reidenbach, president of the Ashtabula Chamber of Commerce; P. J. Foley, Chicago; R. L. Watts, State Agricultural College, Pa.; Thomas Deworth, Canada; W. W. Tracy, Washington, D. C.

PACIFIC COAST.

THE Seattle Exposition closed October 15. It attracted an attendance of 3,500,000 people and President Taft.

TWO RIVERS, WASH.—John Melzer is engaging in the florists' business here and has just completed his first greenhouse, 25x100 feet. He is an experienced florist, having learned the trade in Germany. He is located close to the Columbia river and says the climate is well suited for outdoor flowers and vegetables, as there are usually bright, warm days until about the first part of January.

SEATTLE.

The Market.

With the closing day of the exposition at hand, people are settling down to the fall social season, which opened with a string of fancy dinners, luncheons, card parties and the like, with several large weddings. Consequently business is far better and smiles again appear on the florists' faces.

Stock is coming in nicely, with the exception of the asters, which are now getting smaller at every cutting. Violets are to be seen in the stores and everybody on the streets seems to be wearing them. Consequently the falling off in the sweet peas was not a hardship, as the violets were the only flowers worn, with the exception of the orchids, the demand for which is far above the supply. Mums are now of good quality and, although only a few are to be had, fancy prices prevail and they will certainly be the popular flower again this fall, as they sell rapidly even at the high prices. Calla lilies and gladioli, although scarce, are rather a dead weight and every day are crowded a little more to one side, to make room for the more showy blooms.

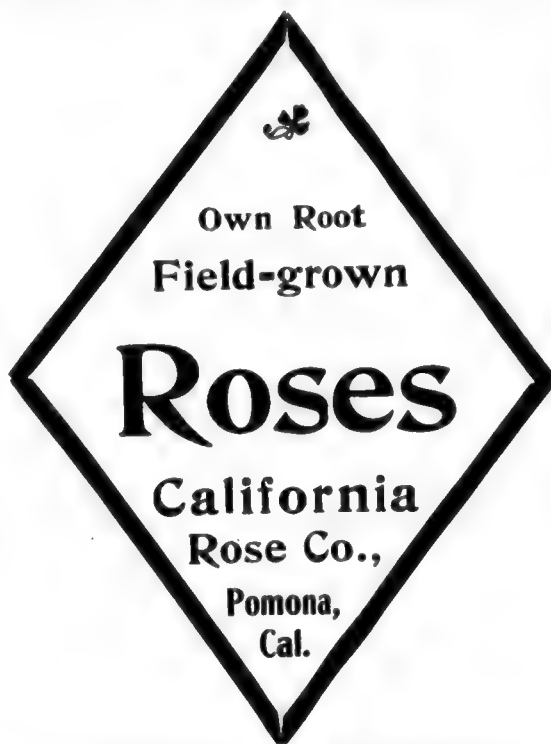

Outdoor Brunner roses are still to be had, but are being rapidly replaced by indoor stock, which is still a little better, but of fair quality and medium length of stems. Richmond, Kate Moulton and Bride are probably the best at the present time.

Autumn foliage, which in color and quality is superior to most things in this line, can be had in quantities and the florists are using it to great advantage, not only in decorating the stores but at the various social gatherings.

Various Notes.

Martin Reukauf, with Bayersdorfer & Co., called on the trade last week. Mr. Goodfriend, representing Wertheimer Bros., also was in town.

Mr. Johnson, formerly with the Wood-

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Business has been fairly good here since the last writing. There is plenty of stock, especially in mums and carnations, although no great oversupply, as the demand keeps up. The visit of the President to our city helped, as there was an array of baskets, bouquets, etc., ordered by the different clubs and schools for presentation to him. Almost all the florists were benefited more or less.

Various Notes.

ber 11, in the Shrine auditorium, in honor of the visit of our President. The decorations were elegant. There were eighty tables with a large centerpiece of roses on each, also boutonnieres for each guest and there were 800 of them. The ceiling was festooned with smilax and Asparagus plumosus, with thousands of electric lights intermingled. The Roth-Reymond Floral Co. secured the order.

The Angelus Florist decorated the auto the President occupied while in the parade through the principal streets. They used yellow mums exclusively; it took eighty dozen of them and they certainly made a fine showing. Morris Goldenson had the order for hanging baskets, composed of geraniums and Asparagus Sprengeri, which were hung on the arms of the street lamps and added considerably to the general street decorations. The Redondo Floral Co. had about all they could take care of, receiving a number of good orders for baskets and bouquets for presentation to the President.

Two new stores have been opened in the last few days. One is styled the Broadway Floral Co. and is located at 442 South Broadway, being the first flower store on that thoroughfare. Mr. Litzenberger, formerly manager of Wolfskill's, is one of the proprietors, and Herbert Wolfskill the other.

Mr. Manasco has opened a store in the Auditorium building, occupying part of the candy store. This is his first venture in the retail end of the flower business, as he was formerly a grower of mums and roses.

Curtett & Gillemot have leased a store on Seventh street, near Broadway, and expect to open in a few days. Mr. Gillemot has had previous experience in this business in Paris. Mr. Curtett is quite a well-known business man of Los Angeles and they will no doubt make a success of it. C. E. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The excessive heat of several weeks' duration has passed over us and has been succeeded by much cooler weather, with indications of approaching winter. In a general way it might be said that flowers are easier than they have been for the last month. The commencement of the chrysanthemum crop gives the retailers an abundant opportunity to make good window displays at a fair cost, and brightens up everything wonderfully. Carnations are slightly more plentiful than they have been at any time this fall. The prices remain about the same as in the last few weeks, with no indication of a rise in the near future. Roses are in much better color and form. A few good Beauties are shown, really the first we have had since early summer.

Violets are used more profusely than last week. The price remains at the same figure. Sweet peas, gladioli, dahlias and asters are practically over for the season.

Business continues to improve and, from present indications, we are likely to have a good fall trade.

Various Notes.

O. Bertensen, of Chicago, is in San Francisco, with the intention of locating here permanently.

J. Schmidt, representing C. C. Morse & Co., has been interviewing the local dealers in the Bay towns in the interest of his house. He reports everything booming in the wholesale line.

Carl Ludwig will take a trip to the various eastern cities next month. He expects to be absent from California for about four weeks.

The florists who handle bulbs claim that this season is the best they have experienced in many years. Daffodils, narcissi and tulips seem to be in the best demand.

J. J. Kegley, for many years manager of Gill's Floral Depot, of Oakland, who has been absent visiting in various eastern states, will arrive home early in November. G.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Peter Zuger, who for eight years has been the head gardener at Elizabeth park, and under whom the flower beds and greenhouses have acquired a widespread reputation, has resigned and will go into business for himself as a florist and nurseryman at the Cheney farm in South Manchester.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y., Geo. O. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

THE nut growers had their annual convention last week and many nurserymen attended.

PHLOXES, with those who have the named varieties, good, clear colors, are finding a first-class demand, both for immediate delivery and for spring planting. The phlox is now come to be an important item with both nurserymen and florists.

THE season now about at an end has proved an excellent one with most of the peony specialists. While few big plantings have been made, such as went out a few years ago, the retail demand for small lots for use on home grounds has greatly increased.

BARNEY D. SCARFF, of Tippecanoe City, O., was instantly killed October 8 by a Big Four train at Brown's crossing, near Troy. He was formerly interested in the nursery business and was president of the Miami County Horticultural Society at the time of his death.

J. H. PROST, recently appointed to the newly created office of city forester at Chicago, is doing good work. He has not only issued some plainly written and well illustrated bulletins, but is going about lecturing to women's clubs and business men's organizations, etc., and creates a favorable impression for the man and his work wherever he goes. He will lecture on trees at the flower show in November.

SOME of the nurserymen who favored the advance of rose plants from 2½ to 4 cents, are surprised to find that such seeds as French crabapple, which were dutiable at thirty per cent under the old law, are 10 cents per pound under the new tariff. Because it results in the unexpected advance of cost of the cheaper grades of seed, the matter is referred to as a "joker." But, to judge by western sentiment, there will be opportunity to iron out all these little wrinkles in the bill before so very long. The last tariff law stood for twelve years, but the present one always was and probably always will be in disfavor with a large part of the rank and file of the party that passed it and it won't be long before another revision is demanded.

THE MAILING PLANT TRADE.

It is estimated by some directly interested in the subject that at least ten millions of packages containing plants and bulbs are sent through the mails each year.

The unavoidable crowding in the mail-sack, with the subsequent crushing and breaking of plants in their packages when the sacks are piled one upon another, has been a source of serious annoyance and loss to the grower, as well as to the purchaser of the stock. How to overcome this trouble has been the subject of much thought and considerable experimenting on the part of the shipping departments of many of the large houses in this branch of the trade.

A package for plant mailing, to be satisfactory, must combine the following qualities: Lightness, to keep down the mailing cost; strength, to resist outside pressure, so that tender plants may not be crushed and ruined in transit; moderate cost, in the interest of the plantsman's profit. Many of the growers who do a mail order business have tried out and are using a mailing tube made specially for the plant trade by the Standard Manufacturing Co., of Coatesville, Pa.

NUT GROWERS' MEETING.

The eighth annual convention of the National Nut Growers' Association, just held at Albany, Ga., was one of the largest and most successful in the history of the organization. The membership roll was increased fully thirty per cent, and the financial condition permits the publication of the proceedings without delay.

The officers elected are as follows: President, J. B. Wight, Cairo, Ga.; first vice-president, J. B. Curtis, Orange Heights, Fla.; second vice-president, H. C. White, De Witt, Ga.; secretary, J. F. Wilson, Poulan, Ga.; treasurer, M. B. McNeely, Little Rock, Ark.

The convention goes to Monticello next year.

NOVELTIES IN ROSES.

August Rolker & Sons, New York city, the American representatives of Levavasseur & Sons, of Orleans and Ussy, France, have sent to the REVIEW a colored picture of three of this year's rose novelties offered by the French firm. The Messrs. Rolker also enclose with the picture the following description:

"Our W. Rolker saw these roses in full bloom at Orleans this summer, toward the end of July, and he was surprised at the brilliant display of their coloring. Rose Orleans is of a bright pink, well covered with large flower heads. Its foliage is a healthy green. The plants are about twenty-four inches high and of striking appearance. A cross between Baby Rambler and an unnamed polyantha seedling, this rose promises to outshine the Baby Dorothy Perkins. It is reported a very free and

"Mrs. Taft is a cross between a Baby Rambler and a Crimson Rambler, with the bright coloring of the latter plant; possibly more intense in color; said to be likewise constant in the color, and in all respects far superior to the old Baby Rambler. Both of the foregoing novelties should prove popular acquisitions for pot growing, as well as for outdoor bedding.

"Joan of Arc is a white colored Baby Rambler, of which it is a seedling, with smaller foliage, but pure white flowers."

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The dark, cold weather of the last week has made a decided shortage of all cut flowers. There were not enough carnations to half supply the demand, all orders being cut in two. The shortage caused roses and mums to advance in price, and the market was well cleaned up each day. Outdoor flowers are a thing of the past—the recent frosts did the trick. Violets are arriving daily. The quality is fine for this month, and they sell readily. Valley is good and meets with ready sale.

Various Notes.

C. A. Bramley, of Superior avenue, reports a heavy run of funeral work last week.

Lars Anderson, of Rocky River, is sending a fine cut of mums and carnations to the Cleveland Cut Flower Co.

Smith & Fethers have had some large wedding decorations recently. They are showing some novelties in baskets in their window of late that are beautiful and attract much attention.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. is receiving daily shipments of eastern violets and Beauties that are fine and are meeting with good demand.

Peter Nichols, of the Arcade, has added another business to many others, this time a tailor shop in the same building.

Albert Albrecht, of Prospect avenue, reports trade picking up. His call for Beauties has been heavy. B.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

"Fair business," is the verdict of the florists of this city concerning the week just closed. There were few funerals of any importance and few weddings. Frosts were reported in the low lands in the suburban districts early in the week, and these cut off dahlias and asters that were still in the open. There has been a good call for violets and roses, and both are in plentiful supply and good quality. Mums are coming in more plentifully and command good prices.

Various Notes.

Arthur Zirkman, with M. Rice & Co., of Philadelphia, was in the city October 15 and 16.

Mr. Greene, representing Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was a caller on the trade October 18.

HILLSBORO, OHIO.

There is not much going on in the flower business. Every now and then we get a little order, sufficient to remind us that we are still in the business. At this date, October 11, the outdoor flowers are in fine shape and there is no sign of frost. Everybody gets flowers from his own garden, and the poor country florist is wishing that Jack Frost would come.

Simon J. Hider cut his first mums October 9, and he thought that in a week or ten days from that time he would have mums for everyone that wanted them. His stock, both of mums and carnations, is of fine quality.

The Hillsboro and Highland County Exposition was held October 5 to 7, and it is certain that the people of this vicinity have never seen a finer display of everything in the florists' line. The weather was as favorable as anyone could wish. Simon J. Hider was the winner of the society's silver medal for the best display of flowers, ferns and palms. His exhibit contained twenty-three varieties of ferns, ranging in size from 2-inch to 10-inch, and also seventy-five to eighty different kinds of plants. His exhibit, he says, might have looked insignificant to some of the brother florists in the large cities, but as the effort of a florist out in the hills, in a town of only 4,000 or 5,000 people, it should be considered as evidence that the florist is strictly up-to-date. S.

WINONA, MINN.

E. Kirchner & Son, of the West End Greenhouses, have in the last year or two enlarged the houses until they now cover 15,000 square feet. At present they are building a retarding house of reinforced concrete and steel, with a foundation and floor several feet below the level of the ground.

The greenhouses of Fuhlbruegge Bros., at Fifth and Kansas streets, have been placed in good condition for winter and the outlook there is good.

Some improvements have also been made at the greenhouses of Mrs. Siebrecht, in the east end.

G. A. Foss, at the Woodlawn Greenhouses, has not found it necessary to make much change in his houses this summer, as his range was largely rebuilt a year ago.

OLNEY, ILL.—The Wilson Florists' Co. has sold out and John A. Wilson has removed to Salem, Ore.

BRYAN, O.—Eli Wonsetler is rebuilding the south section of his greenhouses and is extending the width eight feet to the south.

Traveled to Boston, Mass., in Feb., 1909, and scored 87 points; 89 points at Springfield, Ill., in March, 1909. Never scored less than 85 points. PORT DOVER, ONT.

Thos. A. Ivey & Son, Ltd., the Brantford florists who established a branch here less than a year ago, are certainly to be congratulated on the rapid progress they have made here in that short time. Their new greenhouses already cover nearly an acre, and comprise three trussed houses, each 25x300. There is a substantial boiler-house, 30-50, which contains three boilers, with a total capacity of 300 horse-power, besides a gas engine for the operation of machinery used in making packing boxes and cases. These box machines are on the upper floor of the boiler-house.

The houses are equipped with an excellent watering system, including a ten horse-power engine, which pumps the water directly from Silver Lake into the greenhouse mains. The benches are of cement construction and are planted with roses, carnations and general stock. A fact of prime interest and importance is, that natural gas from the Port Dover wells is used to furnish the power for the plant throughout.

AUGUSTA, GA.—R. C. Berckmans is superintendent of the horticultural and floricultural department of the Georgia-Carolina fair to be held here November 8 to 13 and a feature of which will be a large chrysanthemum show.

ANDOVER, MASS.—Warren L. Johnson has built a new office, installed a new Lord & Burnham 7-section boiler, constructed new cement benches and made other improvements. Perhaps it is scarcely necessary to add that he considers the outlook promising.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

The first snow flurries of the season were seen October 12. The weather is quite cold now. Palms, porch boxes, baskets and vases have all been taken in from the verandas and from the cemetery. The sudden cold snap caught some of the florists unawares.

The chrysanthemum is king among flowers at present. Beauties and lilies have been forced into the background since the mums have been with us. Cosmos and snapdragons are seen under glass and are in fine condition. In good potted plants there are seen at present Gloire de Lorraine begonias, Primula obconica, valley and mums.

Various Notes.

Mrs. A. G. Laver and her son, Boyd, and Mrs. D. Boyer, the mother of Mrs. Laver, are on a trip to Washington, New York and other cities in the east.

R. Shoch, representing M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, was in the city October 12, and M. J. Beatus, of Dayton, O., called on the florists October 13.

The Baur Floral Co. has a fine window display of cattleyas and valley.

The law faculty of the University of Pennsylvania has conferred a merited honor on G. Henry Baur, of Erie, by electing Mr. Baur a member of the staff of the University of Pennsylvania Law Review, a monthly magazine issued in the interests of the university. The honor was conferred in recognition of the excellent work done by Mr. Baur last year. He has also been elected secretary of the University of Pennsylvania debate committee. G. H. Baur is one of the firm of the Baur Floral Co.

Hon. James S. Sherman, vice-president of the United States, Senator Oliver and Congressman J. J. Fitzgerald were the guests of Erie, October 14. They came to be present, upon invitation, at the annual Chamber of Commerce banquet, held at Scott's hall that evening. A dinner was given in their honor at the Erie club, a luncheon at the beautiful residence of Mrs. Charles Strong, and a banquet at Scott's hall. Both Mr. and Mrs. Sherman were entertained by Mrs.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

A decided drop in the temperature, accompanied by flurries of snow, the first of the week, put the final touch to the outdoor stock, and many belated hydrangeas and ornamental plants were badly frozen before they could be got to shelter. Dark weather prevailed the entire week, and as a result stock became scarce again and the demand greater.

Various Notes.

There are forty-five florists in Minneapolis now, and it seems as though the project of a chrysanthemum show here next year ought to be boomed and made a success. J. Jorgenson, A. J. Smith and E. Nagel are the committee now formed to get together facts and engineer the finances of the project. Another committeeman is needed and he will be secured this week.

Oscar Carlson is cutting some Richmond and Killarny that are fine flowers. He is also cutting a good crop of carnations and single violets. He has all his bulbs in and is now off on a trip to "the merry hunting grounds."

O. C. Swanson had the decoration for one of the weddings of the season. It was principally a white wedding. White mums, palms and cathedral candles were used in the church, and at the house a mound of valley for the table, with white mums, lilies and white roses throughout, kept up the color scheme.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. has a fine stock of new palms and some azaleas that will be ready for Christmas.

Miss Whitted has just purchased a new delivery auto, a Wilcox, one of the finest on the market and peculiarly adapted to the florists' business. The sides are glass, and Miss Whitted finds the first week's trial highly satisfactory. Business is good here. Stock is scarce, but good. M. E. M.

HOPKINSVILLE, KY.—Wm. F. Snyder met with an accident on the evening of Tuesday, October 12, while closing and adjusting a ventilator on the roof of his new show house, on Main street. In some way he lost his balance and broke through the glass, cutting his wrist so badly as to make it necessary to take ten stitches in the wound and tie some of the tendons.

Facts Worth Learning

 Look, brother mine! Listen to what the Philadelphia hustler, GODFREY ASCHMANN, the great foreseer, has to say. He never goes wrong. He predicts prosperity. It is now knocking at your door. Are you prepared for the rush?

TESTIMONY FROM MICHELL.

 I personally visited Mr. Aschmann's greenhouses September 21, 1909, and found that the Araucarias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Boston, Whitmani, Scottii, Amerpohlii, Todeaoides ferns, Rubber Plants, Kentias and Arecas are indeed A No. 1. Have never seen his greenhouses filled with plants as good as they are now.

F. J. MICHELL, of the firm of Henry F. Michell Co., 1018 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 6, 1909.

Mr. Godfrey Aschmann, 1012 W. Ontario St., Philadelphia, Pa.

 Dear Sir: I enclose my check. Please receipt and return the bill. The Begonia Gloire de Lorraine (6-in. pots) came to hand in perfect condition and are very nice plants. I will have my gardener see other gardeners, including Mr. Heinz, and invite them to take a look at them and give them your name. I appreciate your promptness and the good quality of the plants. Very truly,

Greenhouse Heating.

GREENHOUSE heating experts agree there is no better investment, in the average case, than a good, big, deep boiler pit; especially deep.

If your heating apparatus does not work as it should, describe it as minutely as possible and the REVIEW will give you, in this column, the benefit of the advice of a practical heating engineer.

THOSE growers who did not stock up with fuel—and not all are forehanded—are finding some irregularity in the shipment of their fuel supply, for the coal business has enjoyed a boom in the last few weeks that has disturbed arrangements. Car shortage is one of the difficulties the shippers have to contend with and in the opinion of well informed jobbers the trouble will last another thirty days at least. Don't let your coal bins get too low before you order.

HOUSE FOR MUSHROOMS.

Will one run of 1½-inch pipe, placed at both sides and at the ends, be enough for a mushroom house 12x40, and six feet four inches high, in northwestern Pennsylvania? Will the expansion tank work satisfactorily if placed right above the boiler, and will an 8-gallon tank be large enough? Our heater has a 1½-inch opening for the flow. T. J.

Such a building will require at least a 2-inch flow, but this can be fed from the 1½-inch opening in the boiler by using a fitting to reduce the 2-inch pipe to 1½ inch, using only a close nipple in the boiler. You should have a 50-gallon expansion tank, connected with the main return close to the boiler by a small pipe, say ¾-inch, and the tank should be elevated eight or ten feet above the highest point in the system. C.

HEATING PROPAGATING HOUSE.

What is the best and cheapest way to heat a greenhouse about 15x20, which I have put up beside my dwelling? It is intended principally for geranium cuttings. I have no other greenhouses near it. I have a potting shed attached to one end, and, though I never heard of its being done, I thought of trying to heat it with a stove in the shed, or in the dwelling house itself. Would this work? What would you suggest? I am located in a pretty cold climate. B. A. K.

I doubt if you will be able to maintain a satisfactory temperature in your propagating house by using a stove. A small hot water heating plant would, it seems to me, be preferable to anything else for such a place. If the greenhouse is a lean-to attached to the dwelling, the heater might be located in the cellar of the house. It is often a greater problem to heat economically a small plant of this character than a large one. C.

A KENTUCKY HOUSE.

I have my house ready for the pipes and should like your opinion. The house runs east and west and is 17½x100 feet, eleven feet four inches to the ridge and four and a half feet high at the sides, with eighteen inches of glass in the south side. I am thinking of putting in one 2-inch flow and five 2-inch returns on each side, as I have solid beds. Or would it be better to put in one 3-inch flow under the ridge and five 2-inch returns on each side? With the expansion tank on the roof of the shed, over the boiler, I believe I would get more pressure by the first method. I intend to have a closed expansion tank. Can I connect it with the return near the boiler, or what is the best way? I want to get all the pressure I can. Please explain how to put up a closed tank and how to use it without any danger. I can get 1¼-inch pipes much cheaper. Would you prefer them to 2-inch? I intend to use a boiler, 30x42. Will that be large enough? I am located in Kentucky and should like 55 degrees in zero weather. We cannot go into the ground more than two feet, but by using a closed tank I think I ought to get good circulation. O.

If you cannot put the top of the boiler below the level of the returns on the sides, then you will get best results by using the single overhead flow—the 3-inch flow. The only way to increase the pressure in your system is by elevating the expansion tank. Connect the tank with the main return close to the boiler and place the tank twelve or fifteen feet above the highest pipe in the house. This will give you eight or ten pounds of pressure; thirty-three feet will give fifteen pounds. I would not advise the use of 1½-inch pipe for hot water on 100-foot runs; 2-inch will be all right. The next larger size of boiler would be better. A 30x42 is rated to carry 600 to 700 feet. You have a little over 600 feet, which is a full load for the boiler. It is cheaper to run a larger boiler than to drive one at almost its full capacity all the time.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The warm weather was broken suddenly by cold rains and at last a heavy snowfall. As a result, stock is scarce. Mums are becoming much more plentiful and are considerably lower in price. Carnations improve slowly and at the present time are scarce. Roses are good, especially Beauties, which always sell well at this time of the year. Dahlias are all frozen; we saw the last October 16. Cosmos sells well in bunches of twenty-five.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held October 12 and, while not largely attended, there was plenty of interest. The regular business of the club was attended to in quick fashion, and then everybody listened to the paper by W. A. Adams, on cheap sales. Considerable comment was passed after the reading, which was a help to everybody present. Another matter of much importance was also brought up, and that was the flower show proposed for the coming fall. President Slattery was given a few days in which to select the committee whom he wished to act. The show was such a decided success last year that everybody is anxious for another.

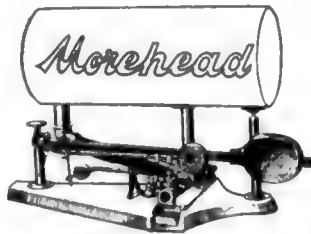

C. F. Guenther, of Hamburg, has added to his range again, putting up two new houses. The stock is all in tiptop shape and, as usual, he is sending the best of roses to the market.

The Buffalo Cement Co. has erected two houses on its property in North Main district and has leased the same to Mr. Webber. The houses were built by the King Construction Co.

James Higgins, lately in the employ of Miss Rebstock, has left Buffalo to take up a similar position in Pittsburg. His place was filled by Mr. Gibson, of the same city.

Announcements were received from the Lenox Flower Shop, announcing the formal opening October 16. The store was decorated in elaborate fashion, the feature being a large Buffalo in the window to celebrate the exhibition then going on in the city. The conservatory, which is in the rear of the store, was arranged effectively with foliage plants.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

J. C. Hatcher, of Amsterdam, N. Y., has purchased the greenhouses and stock owned by the late John H. Starin, at the beautiful estate in Fultonville. Some idea of the extent of the purchase can be got from the fact that fifty two-horse loads of material have been removed to Mr. Hatcher's place at Hoffmans, leaving about one-half yet to follow. Several grand old specimens of phoenix and kentias cannot be removed, owing to their size and the cost of removal. It seems a pity that they could not find a home in some of our park conservatories. At the Hoffmans place a house 200 feet long is planted with the new asparagus, which is entirely distinct from the old tenuissimus, being of a darker color, quite dense and much more lasting. By cutting out the center string, the plant is caused to make vigorous side shoots, continuing thus the entire season.

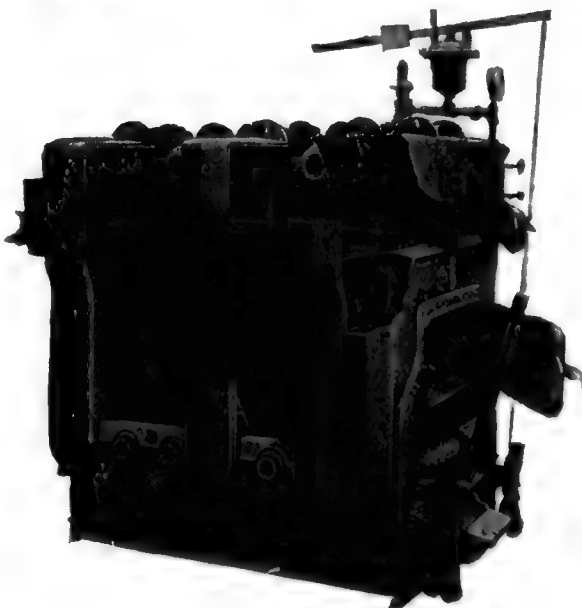

A. J. Binley, of Glens Falls, N. Y., is enlarging his office and rebuilding two houses, making a snug show house. He reports an excellent season.

H. L. Crandell, of Glens Falls, is an optimist. Besides, his stock is in fine shape and will find a ready sale.

Watkins & Son, of Sandy Hill, N. Y., have a large patronage, especially in funeral designs. Miss Watkins is the artist and was making a pretty door

Indian summer weather now prevails at Utica, N. Y. I found Harry Mathews sitting outdoors making cuttings of S. A. Nutt geraniums, most unusual at this season of the year. They propagate tens of thousands of bedding stock. The veteran, William, was away in the mountains, superintending the loading of his famous osmunda roots, which orchids revel in. He would appreciate the pair of wooden shoes that a kind-hearted frater from the land of the Half Moon recently sent the wife of one of our leading fellow craftsmen. Unfortunately, for the donor, he did not get the correct size of the good lady's feet, and as the shoes are several sizes too large her indignation is in proportion. MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The nice, summer-like weather up to October 10 took a sudden change, as if by command of our weather man, and by Tuesday, October 12, all outdoor stock received a killing frost, thus putting an end to all dahlias and other cut flowers. The whole week was chilly and cloudy, clearing receipts so that everything on hand was easily disposed of. The demand for roses was good and supply likewise. Mums, such as Glory of Paderborn, Golden Glow, Halliday and October Frost, have made their appearance in limited quantities, thus opening the mum season. They were rapidly sold and there was also a brisk demand for violets, all orders being easily filled. Violets have also made their debut, but the quality, as yet, is lacking, although they sold for $1 per hundred. Carnations have been a sore trial, to the wholesalers at least, for with a week of dark weather they were such a scarce article that not nearly enough could be obtained, though they brought $3 to $4 per hundred. It seems that a good many carnation growers had quite a good cut during the month of September, increasing the shortage at this time; but then, every day from now on will bring an increased supply of mums, which will help out considerably. Smilax is more plentiful than of late and, with plenty of other green goods, the market in that line is well fixed.

Various Notes.

Robt. Zepnick, 147 Lincoln avenue, reports an increase in sales of Boston and Whitmani ferns since folks have settled down for the winter.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., who had their hands full with the recent fall openings, report business quite satisfactory for the last fortnight.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. reports shipping trade good, except that being obliged to cut the shipments on carnations caused some bad feeling.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. also finds out-of-town business in a blooming condition. They have commenced to bring in quite a few mums from their own greenhouses.

As the time for the fall show draws nearer, the meetings of the executive committee seem to last longer, it being midnight, October 18, before they adjourned. Premium lists and entry blanks are being mailed this week. H. V. Hunkel, 462 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee, is chairman.

Otto Sylvester, Oconomowoc, Wis., was a caller last week. Ten years ago he was violet king in this part of the country, but, as was the case with many other growers, they went back on him. Now, after several years' intermission, he has planted one house, and if they prove satisfactory he will plant more extensively another season. E. O.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

This city had so much baseball and other excitement last week that one scarcely thought of the flower business. However, it moved along in the usual way, with just about enough stock coming in to take care of the business.

The weather has been quite cool for October. Almost everything outside should be gone, but every day someone bobs up with dahlia and cosmos. The end, however, is certainly near.

Stock of all kinds is plentiful, especially Beauties, lilies and violets.

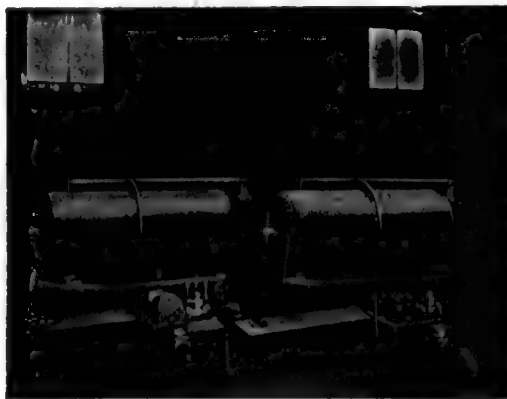

Various Notes.

The retail stores are making fine window displays. Last week Mrs. E. A. Williams had a display of yellow dahlias arranged in baskets and hampers. These, with ferns and yellow crotons, gave an effect when viewed from the street that might have opened the eyes of some people in the trade, as to the use of dahlias.

David Fraser, gardener for H. C. Frick, opened his houses to the public on Sunday, October 17. Chrysanthemums were the principal flowers. Thomas Jenkins, gardener for A. R. Peacock, also opened his houses for the benefit of the public. Chrysanthemums, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, cyclamens, primulas and orchids were on view. The arrangement of these in the various houses was beautiful and was appreciated by the many visitors. Pittsburg millionaires, at least, are not afraid to divide some of their good things with the common people, as anyone is welcome to visit their houses while their show is at its best.

Superintendent George Burke, of the Schenley conservatories, and his foreman, John Jones, are busy getting their display into shape for the big chrysanthemum show, which will be held next

The Situation in Mums.

There is a little complaint about the chrysanthemums opening slowly. Fewer plants have been grown under glass. No doubt the indoor plants make a better finished flower, but the cost of growing them is much higher and the general demand is for a flower costing from $2 to $3, which can be easily grown outside. Orders will be sent to other markets for high grade flowers, or by florists who do not grow them at all. Underbudded chrysanthemums for bunch stuff and filling are scarce. The Holtz varieties, which are grown for that purpose, require higher ground than the Robinson.

Various Notes.

J. Schackai, who has 12,000 plants of chrysanthemums, reports his crop good, losing only a few flowers for want of drainage.

Xavier Grillot had some trouble with one of his beds, but still will cut a fair average. M. M. L.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The big storm which swept over the south September 20 partly wrecked the big horticultural hall in Audubon park, doing damage of more than $20,000. The right side of the building collapsed and many valuable plants were destroyed. B. D. Waller, the head gardener, was badly cut by flying glass.

BERNARDSVILLE, N. J.

A well attended meeting, held in the Old Schoolhouse, at this place, on Saturday, October 9, was the beginning of a new society, to be known as the Bernardsville Horticultural and Agricultural Society.

Officers were elected unanimously, as follows: President, William Elias; vice-president, Thomas Harrison; treasurer, E. S. P. Bretherton; secretary, J. H. Rainsbury; corresponding secretary, J. F. Anderson.

There is no reason why, in the near future, with such capable officers, Bernardsville should not have one of the best societies in Jersey, especially if all the meetings are as well attended as the first one. The object of the society is advancement in the science of horticulture and agriculture, and to get acquainted one with another. J. F. A.

ALBANY, N. Y.

One of the most enterprising and successful florists in this part of the state is Fred A. Danker. His store, at 40 Maiden lane, was opened by him twelve years ago. It is thoroughly up-to-date, with white enamel fixtures, plate glass mirrors and many devices for the care and display of his stock. He grows his own flowers at 744 Central avenue, where he has a modern plant of nine greenhouses, covered by 25,000 square feet of glass. The houses are used to their full capacity, but Mr. Danker owns fifty acres surrounding the old Danker homestead and here the number of plants grown is increased as rapidly as his business demands. He is an authority on floriculture, is a member of the Albany Florists' Club and chairman of the committee of the Albany flower show.

Not far from Mr. Danker's store is another attractive and popular establishment, The Rosery Flower Shop, at 76 Maiden lane, of which E. F. Meany and E. P. Tracey are the proprietors. The store is fitted in green, and has large plate glass show windows, in which at all times an unusually fine display is to be seen. The members of the firm are both popular young men, natives of this city, who, before engaging in business for themselves in 1907, had several years' experience in this line of business. The firm recently adopted the National cash register check system.

Fred Keller came here from Brooklyn last May and bought the old established greenhouses of R. W. Zobel, at Troy road and Garbrance lane. Mr. Keller has given his entire attention to horticulture for twenty years, and has a good knowledge of botany as well as the practical details of the business. He is a member of the S. A. F. and of the Albany Florists' Club. His greenhouses are covered by 10,000 square feet of glass and he has two acres of ground for the culture of hardy outdoor stock.

E. S. Hazeltine's store, at 32 Central avenue, is a good example of the high-class west end places of business, which compare favorably with the downtown establishments. Mr. Hazeltine's stock is always fresh and attractive. He is regarded as one of the most progressive citizens of the west end.

In connection with the Hudson-Fulton celebration, two florists of this city, F. A. Danker and Harry G. Eyres, had elaborate and artistic floats in a street parade. Mr. Danker's float, representing an old Dutch garden, with a windmill, was admired for its quaint beauty and picturesque effect. Mr. Eyres' float,

WASHINGTON.

The Florists' Club, at a recent meeting, adopted a resolution protesting against the selling of flowers by street peddlers, the claim being made that most of the stock of the street sellers is stale. It was decided to communicate with the wholesalers and request them to discontinue supplying the orders of the sidewalk vendors. The club awarded a certificate of merit to F. H. Kramer for the production of a new yellow dahlia, which he has named Irene Kramer.

AUTUMN TABLE DECORATION.

In his autumn table decorations Charles Henry Fox makes liberal use of fruits, in the early season combining them with dahlias in bright colors and, after the dahlias have passed, employing chrysanthemums in their stead. Many of the decorations by Mr. Fox are of the daring character. Not every florist could overturn the receptacles used on the table and still produce an effect which would be satisfactory to his customers, especially if that customer chanced to be of the older aristocracy.

FERNS, DECORATIVELY SPEAKING

Their Neglected Possibilities.

In the ordinary design, ferns are either given a place as constructive material in the background or are employed in "feathering," as it is termed. There is a more important place than either of these for the fern plant or the cut fronds, and one which is as important as any occupied by the specimen flowers. They should be just as much a part of the art of a piece as the flowers themselves. Sometimes they will adorn the piece decoratively, while the flowers serve as a background for them. The practice of scattering ferns promiscuously over a piece is as crude as that of blindly dotting flowers and colors over its surface. Use as much thought and plan in placing the ferns as is consumed in properly placing the flowers themselves.

A Good Color Scheme.

Because they lack giddy coloring is no reason for their being assigned a minor position in a design. We search for soft, daintily tinted flowers, without half appreciating our greens. The coloring of a single adiantum plant is a study in itself. The darker green of the mature fronds changing to the tints of the young growth, streaked by the dark stems, is seen in viewing the plant from above. Looking upon it from below, there are the transparent dark and light fronds, embroidered with the velvety spores and supported by the fairy ribs of brown. Good color scheme, eh? Next time you have a chance, work this out in a new decorative scheme.

Speaking of promiscuously scattering dots of color on ferns through a piece, there might be times when this would be creditable designing, but as a rule it is not intended as a part of the design plan, but goes in hit or miss. On a large, solid pillow or a fabric drapery, knots of flowers or foliage may be set on as the decoration. In a case like this, fern fronds, scattered about either conventionally or irregularly, make a picturesque design.

Ferns in Centerpieces.

No secondary value need be placed upon fern fronds or plants as a feature of the piece. They can be used as the principal decoration or as a part of it. Instead of throwing the fern fronds in anywhere in a centerpiece of flowers, break the outline of the piece somewhere by a patch of fern fronds to represent a growing plant, and permit no other ferns in the piece unless it is a very large one. In the latter case repeat the fern patch somewhere else, out of view of the first one. If green is needed with the flowers, use their own foliage.

In another centerpiece border the entire edge with a fringe of adiantum, pteris or fancy nephrolepis fronds. In another, where there is a group of flowers distinct from the majority used, emphasize that group and bring it out in relief by surrounding it with a group of such ferns as are best suited to its style, and use them nowhere else in the piece.

A Mantel Decoration.

An entire centerpiece of ferns, or a mantel banked, is an acceptable break in a decoration heavy with flowers. Fill the mantel shelf with closely set groups of fronds, to resemble plants. From some point over one end of the mantel suspend a fern ball or a group of fern balls, or a nice specimen Boston fern. From below the mantel shelf, at the opposite end, hang a similar fern ball or basket so that it just comfortably misses the floor, and you have something worth looking at and lingering over. At one of my best luncheons I used a centerpiece of Adiantum Farleyense, with fronds of the same for favors. No rare flowers would have taken better or been more highly appreciated.

As a part of the principal decoration of a piece and to emphasize a group or spray of flowers, let the fronds be planted as though growing from the same spot as the flower stalks, and be a part of the imaginary plant.

As the "whole thing" in the bouquet for a maid of honor or bridesmaid in a green and white wedding, adiantums do shine. A hatful, a shower bouquet, an armful or a muff, are all dainty and graceful. See that they are not all used too long-stemmed, else they will drop out of place.

Whole designs can be made from any variety of adiantum, from the heavy, rich fronds of the Farleyense to the dainty gracillimum, either with a cluster of flowers or with ribbon only. A spray of brilliant foliage with a ribbon rosette might well adorn such a piece.

An All-fern Base.

The base of a standing design can be handsomely made of all ferns. Any variety of nephrolepis is suitable for this purpose; often unshapely or one-sided plants just fit the base. Here is where square bases, rather than round ones, are serviceable, the square ones giving more space for the ball of soil if a plant is to be used. Or a base of about half ferns and half flowers is good, only do not divide the arrangement abruptly. Blend from one to the other by streaking or blotching lines of one color into the mass of the other.

One large fern with long fronds at one side, banked in below and around the rest of the base by smaller ferns of a different kind, makes a pleasing base. If the fern plant cannot be spared and its wiry stem and tough foliage when the flowers are entirely gone. There is no other material, even if we include long-stemmed specimen flowers, that makes a more graceful and appropriate setting for a funeral design than an arrangement of fern plants or fronds. Even the common wood ferns, which are bought by the thousands for the cheapest work, can be grouped in this way to resemble graceful fern plants.

Covering a Fireplace.

To fill in a fireplace, stem them in groups and plant in sphagnum, as described above. The sphagnum should be packed on a wire frame, fitted to the fireplace. A frame need not be made; anything that can be adjusted to the shape of an arch will serve the purpose. After being covered with ferns, it will resemble a little hillside with ferns growing on it. Being rather perishable, these ferns should be plunged in water and al-favors, planted upright in a flat-outline funeral piece while the piece is being mossed, as borders for flower baskets, or as dainty touches in window decorations where bare spots need something and you don't know just what. Larger ferns, of long-leaved habit, are much needed in large baskets for funerals, store openings or ordinary display work. Often they serve in a double capacity here, for their decorative qualities and to make up for a scarcity of flowers.

Filling a Fernery.

The filling of ferneries should be as carefully looked after as any fine designing about the store. Too often it is left to a boy, and his accomplishments in this line will rival those of a milliner's apprentice. A slightly taller specimen, of light weight and fine cut foliage, is usually best for the center. Lower, but not too bushy plants may be grouped about the edge, and those on the outside edge should be rather airy and long, and tipped slightly outward to cover the edge. About three varieties are enough for an ordinary sized fernery. Attractive combinations are holly-leaved fern and Asparagus plumosus; another, an assortment of pteris ferns; another, aspidium and Asparagus plumosus, or an all adiantum if shapely; full plants can be had in the smaller sizes.

Wherever flowers are acceptable, the same can be said of ferns. Many specimens of potted ferns are sent to the sick room instead of perishable blooming plants or cut flowers, and even the frail adiantums outlast any flowers.

When flowers are scarce, have an entire fern window around and within a grotto of rocks, with a little water in sight if possible. Ferns, whether potted or cut, are of prime value decoratively anywhere and at any time.

When standing under the lower fronds of the great brakes of the North Pacific coast you will admire their beauty and grace more than their size and will more than ever enjoy their tiny relatives of the hothouse and woods.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

A WREATH WITH SHOWER.

One of the notable funerals at Waterbury, Conn., was that of Monsignor William J. Slocum. It called for an elaborate display of floral work, among which was the piece shown in the accompanying illustration, the work of Mrs. Floto, of Saxe & Floto. The wreath was made of white chrysanthemums and pink roses, the base of longiflorum lilies, and the shower of white chiffon into which have been tied large white carnations, from which the stems had been cut. A broad white ribbon attested to the fact that the emblem was "From the Greeks of Waterbury." That the design pleased its purchasers is shown by the fact that they had it photographed, and the satisfaction of the customer is the one real test of the quality of any work.

KERR'S WEDDING DECORATION.

While church weddings calling for elaborate decorations may be common in the large cities, in places like Houston, Tex., where the Robert C. Kerr Floral Co. put up the decoration illustrated in this issue, such an event is rare enough to attract special attention. Nothing so elaborate had ever before been seen in Houston, although the southern cities are plenty of cut ferns of any kind are to be had, make your plants, so to speak. Stem two or three to a pick or match stick, flaring them in opposite directions; tip out and group them closely in the sphagnum.

coming more to the front year by year in the matter of using flowers for receptions, weddings and other social events.

In this decoration Mr. Kerr used 700 large Timothy Eaton chrysanthemums, 300 palms and ferns and 600 yards of Japanese string fern for festooning. In the illustration the full number of chrysanthemums does not show, because the camera stood so close to the front that the lens did not take in the bunches of mums along the ends of the pews on the aisles at the right and left.

Mr. Kerr did his best on this decoration, not only for the money he received and the satisfaction of his customer, but because he appreciates that every time flowers are used liberally at a function of this character, it leads, if the work is well done, to other orders from people, who, seeing, approve. There is something in every such order beyond the mere price to inspire the florist to give the best that is in him.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Appointments.

President Valentine has made the following appointments:

As representatives of the S. A. F. to the National Council of Horticulture, J. Otto Thilow, Philadelphia, Pa.; Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich.

Committee on badge for life members, W. J. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind.

On conference committee with the American Seed Trade Association, Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y. The other members of this committee are, ex-officio, J. A. Valentine and F. R. Traendly. After January 1, the additional members will be F. R. Pierson and J. A. Valentine.

Retail Dealers' Delivery Association.

By order of President Valentine a meeting of the retail florists of the United States and Canada is called for Friday, November 5 next, at 2 p. m., at the Chicago Flower Show in the Coliseum building.

Letters received by President Valentine from retail florists in various parts of the country indicate that there is a general desire for an association of this kind, properly organized, and this meeting is called hoping that a large number of retail florists will get together, discuss the matter in all its bearings, and complete a preliminary organization which shall go forward and work out the details in such a way as to put this much needed project on a safe and effective basis.

In order to expedite matters and save delay at the meeting, it is desired:

First—That all retailers interested who will be unable to be present will write the undersigned expressing their views fully, such letters to be turned over to the meeting.

Second—All retailers interested are urgently requested to enclose with the above letter copies or forms for such telegrams as they customarily send or receive in such cases, with a view to preparing a suitable cipher code for telegrams.

Third—A special statement to be sent of the difficulties experienced at the present time in transacting such business by each individual, so that the new organization may have full information to work from and be able to make the new system at once safe, sure and speedy.

CHICAGO PREMIUM LIST.

The final list of premiums for the annual exhibition of the Horticultural Society of Chicago has been issued and those wishing copies may obtain them by addressing J. H. Burdett, secretary, 1620 West One Hundred and Fourth place, or George Asmus, manager of the show, 416 Atlas block, Chicago.

The list does not vary to any great extent from those employed by the society in previous years. The premiums are liberal in all classes, sufficient to attract the best stock the country produces. The totals in the different sections are as follows:

Cut chrysanthemums.....	$448.00
Chrysanthemum plants.....	755.00
Miscellaneous plants.....	770.00
Cut orchids.....	100.00
Roses.....	824.00
Carnations.....	354.00
Violets.....	25.00
Valley.....	40.00
Private gardeners' exhibits.....	295.00
Seedlings.....	50.00
Retail exhibit.....	660.00

Total$4,221.00

From the standpoint of the public the special feature of the show is expected to be the retail booths, on which the competition is limited to twenty and for which four classes are provided. These booths are to be judged daily, originality of design, quality of stock, accessories and general effect to be considered in the order named. The prizes will be awarded to the booth scoring the highest average for the six days.

NAMES OF PLANTS.

Please name the enclosed specimens of ferns, giving their English and Latin names. Each leaf is marked with a number and I have duplicates of each. I also would like to know what is the Latin name for Christmas cherry, Christmas pepper and Golden Leaf. B. F. C.

The ferns, some specimens being badly shriveled and hard to determine, as near as can be made out are: No. 1, Pteris adiantifolia; No. 2, Pteris albo-lineata; No. 8, Lastrea (Nephrodium) lepida; No. 9, uncertain, but probably Pteris tremula; No. 10, Pteris internata.

The Latin name of Christmas or Jerusalem cherry is Solanum Capsicastrum. The Christmas and other peppers are all varieties of capsicum. The plant known as Golden Leaf, I do not know. Send specimen leaves and I will be better able to name it. C.

of flowers or with ribbon only. A spray of brilliant foliage with a ribbon rosette might well adorn such a piece.

An All-fern Base.

The base of a standing design can be handsomely made of all ferns. Any variety of nephrolepis is suitable for this purpose; often unshapely or one-sided plants just fit the base. Here is where square bases, rather than round ones, are serviceable, the square ones giving more space for the ball of soil if a plant is to be used. Or a base of about half ferns and half flowers is good, only do not divide the arrangement abruptly. Blend from one to the other by streaking or blotching lines of one color into the mass of the other.

One large fern with long fronds at one side, banked in below and around the rest of the base by smaller ferns of a different kind, makes a pleasing base. If the fern plant cannot be spared and its wiry stem and tough foliage when the flowers are entirely gone. There is no other material, even if we include long-stemmed specimen flowers, that makes a more graceful and appropriate setting for a funeral design than an arrangement of fern plants or fronds. Even the common wood ferns, which are bought by the thousands for the cheapest work, can be grouped in this way to resemble graceful fern plants.

Covering a Fireplace.

To fill in a fireplace, stem them in groups and plant in sphagnum, as described above. The sphagnum should be packed on a wire frame, fitted to the fireplace. A frame need not be made; anything that can be adjusted to the shape of an arch will serve the purpose. After being covered with ferns, it will resemble a little hillside with ferns growing on it. Being rather perishable, these ferns should be plunged in water and al-favors, planted upright in a flat outline funeral piece while the piece is being mossed, as borders for flower baskets, or as dainty touches in window decorations where bare spots need something; if you don't know just what. Larger ferns, of long-leaved habit, are much needed in large baskets for funerals, store openings or ordinary display work. Often they serve in a double capacity here, for their decorative qualities and to make up for a scarcity of flowers.

Filling a Fernery.

The filling of ferneries should be as carefully looked after as any fine design in the store. Too often it is left to a boy, and his accomplishments in this line will rival those of a milliner's apprentice. A slightly taller specimen of light weight and fine cut foliage is usually best for the center. Lower but not too bushy plants may be grouped about the edge, and those on the outside edge should be rather airy and long, and tipped slightly outward to cover the edge. About three varieties are enough for an ordinary sized fernery. Attractive combinations are holly-leaved fern and Asparagus plumosus; another, an assortment of pteris ferns; another, aspidium and Asparagus plumosus, or an all adiantum if shapely; full plants can be had in the smaller sizes.

Wherever flowers are acceptable, the same can be said of ferns. Many specimens of potted ferns are sent to the sick room instead of perishable blooming plants or cut flowers, and even the frail adiantums outlast any flowers.

When flowers are scarce, have an entire fern window around and within a grotto of rocks, with a little water in sight if possible. Ferns, whether potted or cut, are of prime value decoratively anywhere and at any time.

When standing under the lower fronds of the great brakes of the North Pacific coast you will admire their beauty and grace more than their size and will more than ever enjoy their tiny relatives of the hothouse and woods.

GERTRUDE BLAIR

A WREATH WITH SHOWER.

One of the notable funerals at Waterbury, Conn., was that of Monsignor William J. Slocum. It called for an elaborate display of floral work, and which was the piece shown in the accompanying illustration, the work of M. Floto, of Saxe & Floto. The wreath was made of white chrysanthemums, pink roses, the base of longiflorum lilies and the shower of white chiffon which have been tied large white cautions, from which the stems had been cut. A broad white ribbon attested the fact that the emblem was "From Greeks of Waterbury." That the sign pleased its purchasers is shown by the fact that they had it photographed and the satisfaction of the customer is the one real test of the quality of work.

KERR'S WEDDING DECORATION

While church weddings calling for elaborate decorations may be common in the large cities, in places like Houston, Tex., where the Robert C. Kerr Floral Co. put up the decoration illustrated in this issue, such an event is rare enough to attract special attention. Nothing so elaborate had ever before been seen in Houston, although the southern cities

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Novelties.

Every year the inquiry comes, with flowering time, "What's new?" The public, in its eternal craving for something different, is always interested in the new things and it is by the novelties every year that we measure the step of progress. The usual list of novelties is in order and, by present indications, we will have some beautiful varieties to add to our list.

The varieties illustrated, Mrs. A. R. Peacock and Mrs. William Wincott, are both American seedlings and were certificated by the New York Committee of the C. S. A. as No. 1 and No. 2, on Saturday, October 16, the former being also certificated by the New York Florists' Club October 11. It is a Beatrice May seedling and greatly resembles that variety in form and color, and while it will not, perhaps, make so deep a flower, it has excellent foliage right up to the flower, and the lack of that is just the fault of Beatrice May.

Mrs. William Wincott, certificated as No. 2, is best described as an improved Mrs. W. B. Chamberlain. It will never be a big flower, but it is perfect in form and habit, and as a commercial pink it will come right behind Pacific and will always give an evenly colored flower.

The Australian Section.

In the Australian section the best thing so far open is R. F. Felton. This is a yellow with the glorious sheen of Golden Wedding and is even deeper in color than that variety. We have larger yellows, notably F. S. Vallis, Mrs. George Hunt and others, but there is not in the whole range of yellows a variety with the color of R. F. Felton. It has received certificates and medals galore in Australia and England, but, best of all, it does well with us here and every bud is producing a perfect flower. It is evidently a poor propagator, but that seems to be its only fault and I predict a large call for this variety wherever it is shown.

Mrs. David Syme is a winner and is here to stay, by present indications. It is making an enormous flower on the lines of Mrs. H. Weeks and has the foliage right up to the flower. Mrs. Syme took the gold medal in Melbourne in April of this year, as being the best seedling in sight, and we may confidently look for great things from this variety, as history has shown that the best things in Australia are the best ones here also, climatic conditions being so similar.

Gladys Blackburn is a very large flower and seems to come equally well on almost any bud. It is a true Japanese, all the petals reflexing as with Mrs. Knox, and overlapping each other with the greatest regularity. "Well groomed" describes this variety exactly. Nay, gentle reader, I did not say "Wells" groomed. That is mere persiflage and this is a serious article. The color of Gladys Blackburn is a pale buff.

Hetty Wells is one of the most beautiful flowers I have ever grown. It is not large, but it has the most exquisite shadings of old rose and apricot, with a golden tip to each petal. A natural, free growth seems to suit this variety best, and it will probably find its way as a pot variety.

Keith Luxford is rather necky, though the flower is carried erect easily enough, as the stem is good and stiff. The color is entirely distinct, being a ruby red, and every petal reflexes so that the color shows evenly all through the flower. It is not specially large with me, but the color is so striking that everyone should grow it for exhibition purposes.

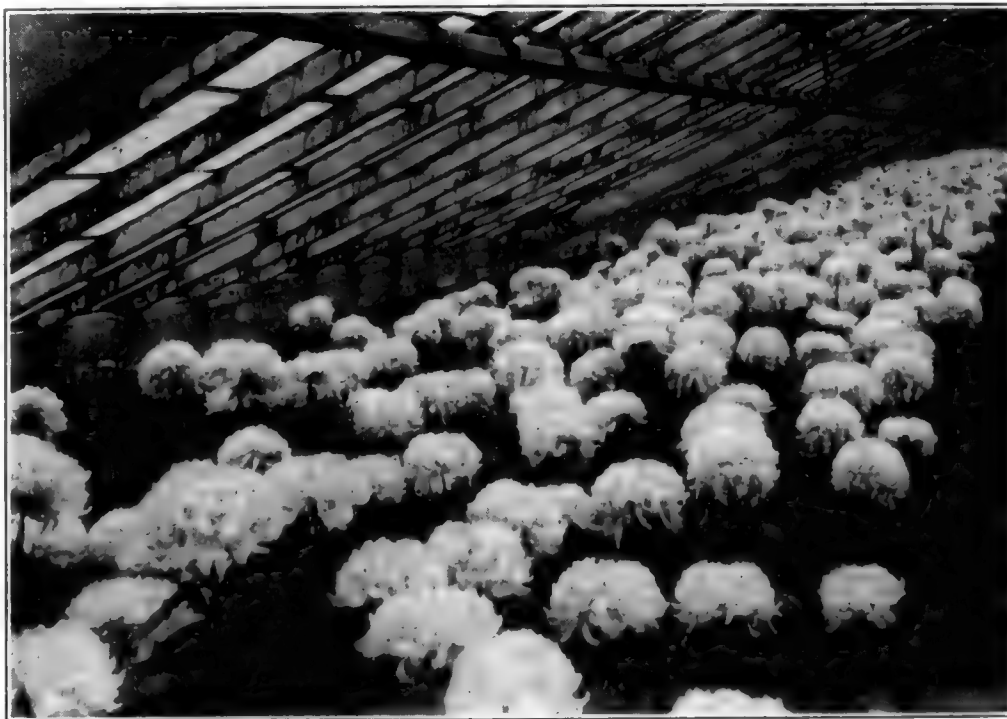

W. Hotston is first-class in every particular and one of the kinds that will stay with us. The color is rosy cerise and the whole appearance of the plant only the reverse. True incurved sorts, such as this, do not attain to the dignity of exhibition flowers where the scale gives thirty-five points for size, but they comprise the bulk of the commercial kinds and are the kinds most largely handled in consequence.

Exhibition flowers as a whole have suffered less from damping this year than any year for some time past, and next week, with shows opening in Madison, Lenox, Glen Cove and other places, will see the finest lot of flowers staged that have ever been set up in America. Our growers are getting better versed every year and the varieties are certainly far ahead of anything we had even a year or two ago. CHARLES H. TOTTY.

VIRGINIA POEHLMANN.

Of all the new chrysanthemums which have gone out in recent years, none has made a greater hit than Virginia Poehlmost inviting. Stiff stem, heavy foliage well up to the flower, make up an ensemble that will be liked by every grower.

Mrs. H. Stevens is another exhibition flower that will make its way. The color is difficult to describe, as several shades intermingle. Golden salmon bronze, it is called by Wells, and perhaps that term expresses the color as well as anything. These colors are seldom seen in the wholesale markets, but as varieties in collections at a show they are brilliant and telling and, in fact, indispensable.

W. J. Higgs is the only incurved in the Wells-Pockett set this year. The color is crimson, with mahogany reverse, and being an incurved, it naturally shows mann. It was first sent out in 1908 and succeeded so well wherever it was grown that the call for stock of it last spring was ahead of the supply. This season the variety has done equally well, so that next spring there undoubtedly will be another increase in its planting.

Virginia Poehlmann originated at the establishment of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., in 1905, as a sport from Mme. Sahut. It pleased August Poehlmann so well he named it for his daughter. It is pure white, a large, solid flower of such form and substance that it is a fine market variety, an extra good shipper. It is early; about October 15 to 20. But its special merit is that it is an "easy doer"; everybody grows it well and gets the even crop shown in the accompanying illustration, made at the establishment of Komitsch & Junge, Secaucus, N. J.

The parent variety, Mme. Sahut, was a Calvat sort, imported and distributed in 1904 by Smith & Son and the E. G. Hill Co. It is white, edged with pink. It is not a tall-growing sort, usually about three feet when the crown bud is taken.

THRIPS ON MUMS.

Inclosed you will find a mum leaf with spots on it. There are little insects on the leaves and, on putting one's finger near them, they jump and are gone. The insect is about one-sixteenth of an inch long and very narrow. What remedy would you suggest? M. G.

The insect is easily identified as thrips. If the buds are not yet showing color, one or two good sprayings on the under side of the leaves, with a sprayer that works in such a manner as to direct the flow of water upward, will clean them out. If M. G. had read these notes earlier, he would have noted this instruction before.

A solution of nicotine or Aphine, applied as directed, will kill these thrips, but M. G. must use it carefully or it may discolor the flowers. C. H. TOTTY.

THE MRS. KELLEY MUM.

Mr. Totty and Mr. Schiller have both spoken in glowing terms of Gloria and President Taft, and none too highly, but nothing has been said of the late yellow, Mrs. Kelley, sent out at the same time by Mr. Smith.

When it comes to Mrs. Kelley, we say "Hats off!" It is grand in shape, color, stem, size of bloom and everything that goes with it. Gloria and President Taft cannot hold a candle to it. With us, Gloria, President Taft and Mrs. Kelley all showed color at the same time. Gloria and President Taft are gone, but Mrs. Kelley will not be fully open for two weeks yet. They were all taken from terminal buds. We are growing Bonnafon, Golden Eagle and Colonel Appleton. but they are not in it with Mrs. Kelley. E. L. JOHNSON.

COST OF METERED WATER.

Would you please ask some of your subscribers who are using metered water for growing roses how much they use per 100,000 square feet of glass per annum, and what it costs them per 1,000 gallons. The parent variety, Mme. Sabut, was a Calvat sort, imported and distributed in 1904 by Smith & Son and the E. G. Hill Co. It is white, edged with pink. It is not a tall-growing sort, usually about three feet when the crown bud is taken.

THRIPS ON MUMS.

Inclosed you will find a mum leaf with spots on it. There are little insects on the leaves and, on putting one's finger near them, they jump and are gone. The insect is about one-sixteenth of an inch long and very narrow. What remedy could you suggest? M. G.

The insect is easily identified as thrips. If the buds are not yet showing color, one or two good sprayings on the under side of the leaves, with a sprayer that works in such a manner as to direct the flow of water upward, will clean them out. If M. G. had read these notes earlier, he would have noted this instruction before.

A solution of nicotine or Aphine, applied as directed, will kill these thrips, but M. G. must use it carefully or it may discolor the flowers. C. H. TOTTY.

THE MRS. KELLEY MUM.

Mr. Totty and Mr. Schiller have both spoken in glowing terms of Gloria and President Taft, and none too highly, but nothing has been said of the late yellow, Mrs. Kelley, sent out at the same time by Mr. Smith.

When it comes to Mrs. Kelley, we say "Hats off!" It is grand in shape, color, stem, size of bloom and everything that goes with it. Gloria and President Taft cannot hold a candle to it. With us, Gloria, President Taft and Mrs. Kelley all showed color at the same time. Gloria and President Taft are gone, but Mrs. Kelley will not be fully open for two weeks yet. They were all taken from terminal buds. We are growing Bonnafon, Golden Eagle and Colonel Appleton, but they are not in it with Mrs. Kelley. E. L. JOHNSON.

COST OF METERED WATER.

Would you please ask some of your subscribers who are using metered water for growing roses how much they use per 100,000 square feet of glass per annum, and what it costs them per 1,000 gallons. I am up against that query a little in selecting a town in Utah for my greenhouses, and I shall appreciate any replies you will get for me.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Schizanthus.

Schizanthus plants are something of a novelty at Christmas, and, as many purchasers are constantly looking for something a little out of the common, a nice batch of these in 6-inch pots, well flowered, should sell easily. Azaleas, poinsettias and Lorraines are the great Christmas staples among blooming plants, and anything different is always acceptable. These early schizanthus plants are now in a bright house, kept freely ventilated, and have recently had a few short, thin stakes placed in the pots to keep the plants intact. For early use S. Wisetonensis is much the best sort to grow, owing to its dwarf habit and floriferousness.

Schizanthus plants are quick to fill their pots with roots and want rather frequent applications of manure water to keep them of a good color. Twice a week is not too often to afford it. These plants are singularly free from insect pests, but mildew will overtake them speedily if they are sprayed overhead and grow in a cold, draughty house. We like to pinch the plants to keep them stocky. This pinching must now be discontinued where the plants are wanted in flower early. The present is a good time to make a sowing of seeds for Easter flowering. Either drop two or three seeds in small pots, or scatter thinly in flats and pot off as soon as of sufficient size. Always grow schizanthus as near the glass as possible. Tall, lanky plants are not wanted at any price. A dry, freely aired house, not over 50 degrees at night, is what they need.

Shamrocks.

In something less than four months the selling time for shamrocks will have arrived, and after this date it is too late to make any extra sowing or sowings and secure good plants. A violet house temperature grows good shamrocks. It is a mistake to give them a warm house, for in such they become spindling and are an easy mark for thrips. On the other hand, an excess of water on the leaves is liable to start mildew. A happy medium is one in which the little seedlings make fairly rapid headway. Pot them off before they get crowded in the flats. Soil such as you would use for carnations or roses will do nicely for them.

Amaryllis.

The foliage is gradually disappearing from the amaryllis plants, which have been kept on the dry side now for a month. Let them have a dry, airy house while any foliage remains on them. Afterward they can be stored in a shed on shelves until the time for repotting and starting them arrives. We do not like to rest the amaryllis too cool; 45 to 50 degrees is better than a lower temperature. Seedlings which have not yet flowered should not be rested until after they bloom. It is a common practice for growers to rest even the young seedlings of the current year's raising the same fall. It takes three years to bloom the amaryllis under this plan, while it will often flower in eighteen months or even less when not rested. A good plan with seedlings is to plant them in a bench containing four to five inches of good soil and leave them there until they flower.

Hydrangeas.

Frosts will have blackened the foliage on hydrangeas kept outdoors. If the plants were rather dry at the root, the leaves would be less affected. Those kept moist, with green, sappy shoots, are killed quickly and care must be taken or the buds will be destroyed also. We like to keep the plants out as long as safety will allow, but covering is necessary on sharp nights. If drier conditions are maintained at the root, the foliage will gradually fall and the wood at the same time take on that russet brown color which we always like to see, for such plants we know will force well. It is now a good plan to lay the plants in pots on their sides to insure drier root conditions. Let them be in the sunniest possible place, and in case of a warm spell happening along, it is easy by using the hose to counteract too sudden drying off, which would cause shriveling.

Pansies.

Pansy plants which are intended to winter outdoors should be transplanted right away, if this is not already done. Some large growers sow rather thinly and do not transplant. The extra labor is well paid for, however, in the increased vigor and stockiness of the plants. Where the seedlings are to be wintered in coldframes, the sash should not be placed on them until the weather becomes quite severe, after which time a light mulch of dry leaves should be given. In the case of outdoor plants no covering should be given until the ground freezes. The winter loss should be small, provided the land has a good slope to prevent water standing, and the mulch can be held over the plants more especially during March and early April, which is the critical time with outdoor grown pansies.

Bulb Planting.

The ground is now in capital condition for bulb planting, and the work of setting out tulips, narcissi, hyacinths, crocus, etc., should be well advanced. For another full month this work can be done and excellent results follow, but the latter part of October is a particularly good time for it. The bulbs, when in the soil, will speedily make roots, while in boxes or bags they fritter away much of their vitality. Leave the planting of Spanish iris until November, as these start into growth quickly when placed in the soil. It pays to pulverize the soil thoroughly for bulbs, and always avoid the use of any but thoroughly rotted animal manure.

Winter Geraniums.

Plants of geraniums are not so often seen at Christmas as could be wished. There is surely nothing finer at that season than a bushy scarlet or crimson zonal geranium, a plant which appeals to everyone and which will continue to flower in the dwelling house when poinsettias are leafless and Lorraines have dropped all their flowers. There is no need now to pinch off any more flower stems. A few plants in bloom will probably sell at Thanksgiving, and the balance should be in first-class shape for the last holiday in the year.

Avoid the overuse of liquid stimulants. These will give a healthy looking but overgrown and soft plant, one which will not flower nearly so well as those which have had occasional top-dressings with some highly concentrated and reliable fertilizer. A night temperature of 50 degrees, full sunshine, plenty of fresh air and careful watering will build up the plants wonderfully in the next few weeks.

Coreopsis Grandiflora.

Lift a few plants of Coreopsis grandiflora and put them in 6-inch to 8-inch pots, according to their size. Stand in a coldframe, where they will soon become established in the pots. Started in gentle heat early in January, these give a fine lot of flowers for cutting in spring, and as the flowers can be cut with long stems, keep well in water and are popular at the stores, the plants will be found to pay well. Another plant which can be forced in the same way is Doronicum plantagineum, the form Harpur Crewe being perhaps the best.

NOT THRIPS, BUT LEAF-SPOT.

I find something working on my carnation buds which I take to be thrips. In this house I have carnations, Asparagus Sprengeri, Chinese and obconica primroses and geraniums. Would fumigating with hydrocyanic gas injure any of the above plants?

There are several cigar shops in my town and I can get all the tobacco stems I want free. Would any of these plants be affected by fumigating with tobacco stems? Also let me know if I could make a liquid of tobacco stems to use as a spray to exterminate these pests, and how it should be prepared. G. C. H.

The specimens forwarded showed no signs of thrips, but had several spots of the common leaf-spot disease. This is no doubt what your trouble is. To rid your plants of this disease, you must adopt different methods than you suggest in your letter. Pick off all the spotted leaves. Then spray your plants with Bordeaux mixture, as directed on the cans. Dust the walks and under the benches with lime. Paint one of the steam pipes with a mixture of lime, sulphur and water. Give all the ventilation possible and keep your plants in a vigorous growth. They will soon outgrow the trouble if these suggestions are followed carefully.

None of the plants you mention will be injured by hydrocyanic acid gas, should you have occasion to use it, providing, of course, that you do not make it too strong. But it is not needed in this case.

Regarding the tobacco stems, my advice would be not to use them. It is not a question of the cost of tobacco stems. We can get free of cost all we could use, but would not think of using them for fumigating or for spraying. No up-to-date grower would think of using them for this purpose. When used for fumigating, the smoke takes the brilliancy out of all the colored plants. It leaves a rank, offensive odor in the house, which is retained by all the blooms for at least two days, making the blooms unsalable. When fumigating, the houses must be closed up tight, often causing the temperature to run up too high, and this, when coupled with the strong tobacco smoke, will often burn tender growth.

Years ago we used to make a liquid for spraying by steeping the stems in hot water. This liquid, however, will stain both foliage and blooms, and is not satisfactory.

Contrast this with the nicotine preparations offered nowadays. These, when diluted properly in clear water, make a spraying material which will not spot the whitest flower or injure the most delicate leaf (except violets; never put them on violets). You can spray early in the morning, either before or after picking the flowers, preferably after, and no blooms are made unsalable thereby.

Spraying can be done regularly, and all insects kept in subjection. This could not be done formerly, with the tobacco stem fumigating. In those days it would be put off from day to day on account of having to cut blooms, until the grower would wake up to find his plants carried away by the pests.

We would indeed be sorry to have to go back to using tobacco stems for fumigating. A. F. J. B.

A BED OF SHASTA.

The accompanying illustration shows a bed of the new white carnation, Shasta, in the greenhouses of Baur & Smith, Indianapolis. A point of interest to growers will be that the picture shows the style of solid bed that has replaced raised benches in this establishment. The plank walls are filled in with cinders to a height that brings the stock up to a level where it is easier to work than it would be on the ground, and the usual amount of soil is used on top of the cinders, which provide the drainage.

The bed illustrated was planted during the first week of August and contains 1,800 plants. The photograph was made October 1. This bed is being grown for blooms, not for cuttings. There is another house on the place in which 8,000 plants are being grown for cuttings. Propagation will begin about November 1. It is stated that over 40,000 cuttings already have been sold.

STARTED IN A ROOFLESS HOUSE.

We are thinking of erecting a carnation house next summer, about 20x75 feet, and think of putting up the framework and benches early in the spring, but not putting the glass on until fall. Our idea is to plant the young carnations directly into the benches in the spring and let them grow there during the summer, exposed to the open, and then early in the fall put on the glass. We think by this plan we can control conditions better, for if we have excessively rainy weather, as we did last summer, the benches will dry out faster than the field, and if it is dry we can use the hose. This plan will save considerable work in the fall, in planting into the house from the field. We propose to prepare a sod and manure compost at once and have it ready for the benches by the time frost is over in the spring.

What do you think of this plan. In answering, you must remember that here, in North Carolina, we have pretty hot weather in the summer. R. E. G.

After considering your case carefully, I believe I would modify your plan somewhat. To begin with, you must bear in mind that if you plant your carnations where they are to flower, the proposition is quite a different one than where you are to transplant them during the early fall or summer. In this case it will matter but little how fast they grow or how large the plants are by fall; in fact, the larger they are, the better. It will not matter even if they should be somewhat softer than you would want to have them in case you had to lift them. The fact that you will not need to disturb the roots makes all the difference in the world.

If your soil has a good natural drainage I hardly think that it could rain enough to injure your plants, barring storms, etc. On the other hand, you must take into consideration that a raised bench will dry out much faster in the open than it will inside a greenhouse. You would have trouble in keeping them watered enough to get a good, strong growth.

So, taking all these things into consideration, I would advise you to construct your beds as we do ours here, which would prove safe from either too much rain or too much drying out.

If you prefer to use concrete, which is used so much these days in greenhouse construction, you can build up side walls three inches thick and eighteen inches high. It would be better to make them two inches thick at the top and four inches thick at the bottom.

We use pecky cypress boards and red cedar posts here, and we like them better than concrete. The posts are about 2x4 inches and are thirty-six inches long. Half of this length is set in the ground, leaving eighteen inches above to nail the boards to. The boards are nailed against the inside of the post, so that the soil does not touch the post and no strain is on the nails, the boards being pressed against the posts instead of away from them.

Fill in with cinders to within four inches of the top and then fill level full with good bench soil, to set the plants in. If you can build these beds this fall, it will help you considerably to get your plants out in good time next spring. We have worked this plan here with splendid success and can recommend it in your case.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The Charles Knopf Floral Co., Richmond, Ind., registers Carnation Admiration; parentage, a seedling crossed with Enchantress; color light pink, lighter than Winona; size three to three and one-half inches; height ideal, with no surplus grass, every shoot going right up to flower; stems as long as Enchantress and hold the flowers up at all times of the year; easy to handle either from the field or planted inside.

amount to? All the way from $50 to $125 per month.

Again, as to the growers; they have not the same amount of responsibility, but what is their pay, compared to that for other kinds of work? The rose and carnation grower, pot plant man and others—what do they get? Wages all the way from $40 to $65 per month, though they work, on an average, from ten to twelve hours per day, and lots of them every Sunday, and if they are wanted, even on their way home, must deliver cut flowers and plants.

Lack of Appreciation.

The grower wears out on an average two pairs of rubber boots and aprons, costing anywhere from $15 to $20 per year. He takes, besides, all kinds of abuse if things go wrong. Some men will undertake to marry on these small wages, and when lots of the greenhouse employers know they have a married man, how they will "rub it into" him! I have seen it time upon time, the poor fellow straining every nerve to please, knowing full well that he can not retaliate, or his name is "Dennis."

Judging from the whole of my experience as an employee and my associations with the florists' business, I do not think there is another class of men who have so much to go through for so little compensation, considering all they endure from the time they start as young men learning the business until the time when they themselves become managers.

Even when a man has obtained a position as manager, for the amount of hours, worry and self-sacrifice, what does he get? If he has the interest of his place at heart, can he say at any time that he is free? No, not even when he goes to bed; his last thought is his greenhouse: "Will the man left in charge be faithful?" Every man who has had charge of a place, no matter how small, knows the exigencies of such a charge, and I myself could write for hours of the disadvantages a man in such a position is under, and what he has to contend with, often with little satisfaction as to his progress under the proprietor.

Finding a New Position.

Doubtless many will say, "We would not stay in such a place." That's the trouble; it might be jumping from the "frying pan into the fire." We are not situated like men of other trades. An engineer, for instance, can pack up his tools and go to the next company and start right in where he left off, perhaps, but a man in the florists' business has a different proposition. You can tell by the way a mechanic handles his tools whether he is a man with a knowledge of his trade, but our business is entirely different. It takes time for a man to show what he can do. On account of the greenhouse surroundings, the business may be entirely different from that of the house in which the man was previously employed, and it takes months to show his ability. Of course, we can all make a fair estimate of a man in the first few days, but when it comes to the growing, the producing of the goods, that counts, and a man has to have time to show what he can do.

Then, again, when a man gets past fifty, unless he has a few dollars put by, if anything happens to cause him to change his position, who wants him? He is looked upon as a back number, and one feels sorry for the poor man pushed around by everybody. He would have

THE EMPLOYER

AND EMPLOYEE

TWO SIDES TO A QUESTION.

The Minnesota State Florists' Society recently had an interesting debate on the relation of employers and employees in the flower business, introduced by the two papers printed in this issue. The REVIEW does not wish to be understood as indorsing the ideas of either speaker, but rather would go on record as of the opinion that in no industry in this broad land are the employers more fair-minded, kindly and considerate in their dealings with their men; in none is there a more loyal, more faithful or more deserving body of employees; nor is there any business under the sun that more grips the interest of those engaged in it, or which offers such abundant opportunities for the employee to make a start for himself and become, in time, an employer. The great majority of those now in the business began at the foot of some other man's payroll.

AN EMPLOYEE'S VIEW.

[A synopsis of a paper by A. J. Smith, of Minneapolis, Minn., read before the Minnesota State Florists' Association, October 19, 1909.]

About six weeks ago I went to St. Paul and called upon some of the florists, and in one place I broached the subject of our society, and requested the party to come to our meeting. The reply I received was, "Oh! The Florists' Society! What do they care about us? It is all very well for those 'boss' florists to get together and talk about prices, and try to better their positions. All they care for is to get our dues. Why don't they discuss matters about the poor fellows who do the work ten, twelve, and often more hours per day in the greenhouses, for a little sum of money that just enables them to live? What do any of those 'boss' florists care about us, who have to do what we do, get stiff and all used up with rheumatism and other ailments, by working in the houses and handling the hose? And oftentimes, when overheated, in the winter we must step out into the deep snow from a temperature of 60 degrees to 25 or 35 degrees below zero to fit in glass broken with the weight of the snow or some other misfortune, or to fetch in flats of bulbs or make other calls. It is hard on any man's health to stand such sudden changes. Then, in the summer time, when the heat is just about all one can stand outside, we have to stay under the glass with the sun beating down hard enough to set the benches on fire, with wheelbarrow and basket, doing the heavy work of filling the benches with soil, rushing the work along, getting the plants set in time for another season."

Wages and Physical Comforts.

How few places have even the common necessities to keep a man healthy and clean! How many men working in the greenhouses know what it is to go from a temperature of 60 degrees in the winter to a poor apology of a toilet room outside, simply a few boards nailed together? As for a place to wash his hands, sometimes you will find a dirty, rusty old sink in some dark corner of the shed, and as for wiping his hands and face, how few supply towels! He must use his apron or a piece of paper.

From a money point of view, what does he get? Take any other line of trade, that of masons, bricklayers, carpenters, etc., are they not all better paid than the florist? And what has a mechanic got to endure compared with a florist? What brain work does it take for a bricklayer, stone mason or carpenter, after he has got the thing learned, compared to a florist? Look at our hours; do they stop at ten? Not by a little. Many a time, both summer and winter, have I and many others been obliged to leave our beds and make a hurried run out to the greenhouses to save our employers' plants or his houses from suffering. Again, on Sundays, as well as week days, do we get any rest? Even if we are not on every Sunday, we have to make the rounds of the houses 365 days in the year.

Then in the spring and during the holiday season, I know I am no exception with reference to the calls from the first part of March until the end of June, every day in the week, month in and month out. And for all that, what will the wages been much better dead than alive. You have seen such cases; so have I. And how many are there who have worked for others in our business who have been able to save any great amount out of what they have been able to earn, to provide for a rainy day or old age?

Is There Money in the Business?

Now, I know the cry of almost every employer: "We would be delighted to pay more, but there is nothing in the greenhouse business. We are not making anything; the men we employ make more than we do." Well, let us see. [The speaker here referred to a number of the establishments that have added largely to their investment in glass in the last few years.] If time would permit, I could tell of thousands of dollars so invested in the greenhouse business from Maine to California. Now, employers, what can you say? If there is no money in the florists' business and you are not able to pay living wages to your men, how are you able to do all this? You certainly must lack in mental ability, to put your valued money into a business which is giving you no returns. I know sometimes you think you ignorant, but we are not quite so lacking, for, if you did not pay us we would not stay long in your employ.

Why Not Raise the Prices?

Again, if you are not able to pay more and draw more intelligent young men into the florists' business, so you would be able to get brain as well as brawn, why don't you get together and raise the price of your products? Are we responsible if you try to cut each other's throats by paying $22 per thousand for tulips and selling them for $20 per thousand, and other things in proportion? Has not everything else advanced? Do you not pay more for the juicy porterhouse steak you eat? We men used to be able to buy steak for 10 cents per pound; now we pay 16 cents, and find it hard to get much of that at our rate of wages. If you make no money in your business, get together, advance the prices.

If you are selling roses at $1 per dozen, charge $1.50, but do not forget the poor fellow who is growing the goods. Share a little with him; he is not as bad as some of you think. You know he is a man the same as yourselves, with blood in his veins, of the same color, and as a general thing it takes but little to make him feel good. As a rule, they are a jolly lot of fellows, and you would be surprised at the result if you should say to your grower, "Bob, your stuff is looking fine; you have the best looking house of carnations in the city." It would act like magic. So, if you are not able to pay more in money, be at least kind and considerate in small matters, and you will find that you will gain.

In closing, I would urge every employee to be faithful and upright in his conduct toward his employer, and to every employer I would suggest that you do your best to gain the confidence and good will of your employees, remembering that your success in business depends upon those to whom you pay your money. Let them see that you are interested in their welfare, and that it is on their faithfulness the success of your business greatly depends.

AN EMPLOYER'S VIEW.

[A synopsis of a paper by August S. Swanson, of St. Paul, Minn., read before the Minnesota State Florists' Association, October 19, 1909.]

I am expected, in this paper, to give the employer's view of the employee. Now, I hope no one will take offense from what I may say. I may perhaps handle this delicate question without gloves, but remember my remarks are not aimed at individuals. My intentions are to explain existing conditions, and I think I am as well fitted to do this as any one, because, even though at present I am classed among the employers, it is not so long since, and I well remember it, when I belonged to the other class, the employees, in which class I spent twenty years of my life, starting at an early age to learn not only to work, but how to work.

Well, this subject affects us all most directly, as it opens up for discussion the ever interesting help problem, a problem which seems, year after year, to be becoming more and more serious; yes, sometimes I think myself it is becoming a conundrum without a solution.

The reason, as I see it, is this: Our business or profession, whatever name you may give it, occupies such a peculiar position that we cannot proceed with the same speed of progress or development as any of the other trades or professions. When I look back only as far as I remember, forty years ago or a little more, it is really overwhelming what changes have taken place in the industrial world. I well remember when most clothes were woven by hand, by simply manual labor, and well I remember also when the farmer cut, not only his grain, but even all his hay by hand; and even the threshing out of the grain was done wholly by manual labor, not to speak of any other industries, in which we all know there has been really marvelous development, almost wholly on account of their being able to take advantage of the great discoveries and inventions in the line of power, other than manual, that nature has provided.

A Peculiarity of the Business.

Now we live in a period which has, we may say, revolutionized the industrial world, until today there is hardly a thing made or produced in which the steam or electrically driven machine has not played a most conspicuous part, and done, if not all, the greater part of the work formerly done by manual labor.

Yet, as you well know, we, as an industry, have not been able to take advantage of these truly wonderful developments going on all around us. When I look back, I find we are doing the work practically in the same manner as when I first started to work, the only difference being that we worked harder and kept at it longer, twelve to fifteen hours a day being customary.

As I see it, these great changes that have taken place have had their effect on human beings as well. Men do not look upon labor the same way as we did when I started to work. That is why today, among the many problems confronting us for solution, the hardest one to solve is the help problem, the question of honest and efficient help. I use the word "honest" advisedly, because I do not consider that I am treated honestly when I make an agreement to pay so much money for so much help, and the other party just gives me so much of his time, regardless of whether that time is worth anything to me or not.

Earning One's Wages.

We have all had our experience with the man who tries to accomplish as little real, useful labor as possible during working hours; the one who loafes as soon as the boss is absent, or the one who seems to find his greatest delight in hindering others in their work by a lot of foolish and questionable conversation. This fellow seems to be afraid that some one else might be doing something useful. And there is the one who seems to take pleasure in destroying or losing all the tools on the place, and when anything is lost or destroyed through his carelessness, says, "Oh, what is the difference? The old man has lots of money and he can stand it." This I have heard time and time again.

For these classes of employees I have little sympathy, patience or regard. I do not think they are entitled to any more respect than the sneak thief or pickpocket, who will steal your purse when you are not looking. Such a person is not capable of filling any position of trust, and still, that is really what we expect of every employee. It does not matter what the work is, whether at the potting table, the work of handling the hose, or any of our simplest operations, the employee who does not care how the work is done when the boss is not around is not earning his wages, I don't care how much or how little he is paid. He is not trustworthy, and no one is very apt to give such an employee a position of responsibility.

A Distinction in Dishonesty.

It is right here, at this point, that I discover we are behind the times, because we are old-fashioned enough to expect other people to look at this question in the same light as we do; they do not. A man nowadays is so accustomed to machine power that he has almost become a part of a machine himself, and when seeking employment he never thinks about getting paid for the amount of work he performs or the manner in which he performs it. No, he simply sells you so much of his time for a certain sum. And there, you see, we are at a disadvantage, because we have no machine to run the man, compelling him to turn out so much work every hour the machine is working.

An instance which illustrates this theory plainly happened the other day. A young fellow whom I had in my employ a short time, but whom I discharged for being lazy, some time afterward came back and returned me $1 which I had overpaid him. This shows that while he was too honest to accept pay for any more hours of time than he had actually given me, still he did not consider it any dishonesty to waste as much as possible of this time for which I was paying him.

I really sometimes wonder what is going to become of our business in the future. Where are the young men who are willing to give up their time and learn this business for the small inducements there are in it? For, we must admit it, the pay is miserable when we consider what is wanted.

Fitness for the Work.

In the first place, a young man expecting to make a living out of this business must be well equipped with not only a strong, robust physical condition, but he must also be sound mentally; he must have brains and be prepared to exercise, use

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

There was a marked increase in the flower business last week, owing to the death of several prominent people. B. F. Barnes, postmaster of this city, who died of heart failure, was buried on Saturday. Mr. Barnes at one time was private secretary to President Roosevelt and was recently made a master Mason. He was buried with full Masonic honors. The funeral of Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard caused quite a scarcity of choice stock on Sunday morning. She was quite prominent in Washington society.

Various Notes.

On Tuesday, October 12, William Marche was married to Miss Augusta, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Schellhorn, of Anacostia, D. C. The wedding took place at the home of Mrs. Noll, Miss Schellhorn's grandmother, who lives in Anacostia. After the ceremony the party drove to the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Gude, where they were given a reception fit for a king. Mr. and Mrs. Marche have the best wishes and congratulations of the craft.

Among other notable events of the week was the marriage of Fred W. Gust, of the Washington Florists' Co., and Miss Britannia K. Peter, also of this city. This party on Saturday, October 16, stole away to the city of Baltimore and were quietly married. On Monday morning Mr. Gust was found at his post, wearing a broad smile which we hope will be everlasting.

Many attractive windows were to be seen last week. Those of Geo. C. Shaffer and William Marche were notably good, the designs in them representing the opening of the various schools and seminaries. The one at Shaffer's had a large gateway opening into the seminary grounds, with the inscription "Seminary" worked in rustic letters over the gateway. The window at Marche's represented "Scholarship," and showed a ship made of Killarney floating under a banner of welcome, the background being pennants of all descriptions, the whole producing a beautiful effect.

The attraction at the Washington Florists' Co. this week was a rustic window, the floor being covered with green moss, with an old-fashioned zigzag rail fence the entire length of the window, covered with wild roses. The background was a large bank of yellow chrysanthemums and oak foliage, with oak foliage on the ceiling.

The windows at Gude's were quite effective, with arrangements of roses and chrysanthemums.

The branch of the Pennock-Meehan Co. in this city has proved to be quite a success. Its manager, Mr. Schnell, is kept quite busy handling the large shipments of chrysanthemums that come into this market.

We had with us this week representatives of two of the leading florists' supply houses, M. Rice & Co. and Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia. W. F.

DECATUR, ILL.

A disastrous hail storm passed through this district October 23. The estimated damage in this county, by wind and hail, was $100,000. At Mr. Bommersbach's greenhouses the storm broke 1,200 panes of glass, besides doing great damage to his smokestack. C. W. Harrold reports that there was no glass broken at his place, though he could have scooped up shovelfuls of hail close by. The I. T. S. shops were blown down and ten men were injured, some of them fatally. Most of this occurred about 3 p. m. Later in the afternoon there was another hurricane, which blew down a tree within ten feet of Mr. Harrold's establishment, but did no harm to any of his buildings. INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business continues good, funeral work being quite a factor. Mums are in full blast now and are moving fairly well. Roses and carnations are improving daily. Orchids and valley are in fair supply. Some home-grown violets, mostly the California violets, are to be seen, but not enough to go around. There are some good pot mums to be seen, but they are not moving the way they should.

Various Notes.

Hartje & Elder have sent in the first sweet peas of the season. They are not cutting them in any great quantity, however. This firm is also showing some good pot mums.

Baur & Smith are sold out entirely of field-grown carnations. This firm enjoyed a large business in this line this year.

John Elsner is having a strenuous time these days. Street improvements, sewer assessments and cement sidewalks are the cause of his troubles.

On account of the election, the regular monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association will be postponed until the second Tuesday in November.

Visitors last week were: A. M. Sanders, with McGregor Bros., Springfield, O.; Mr. Willson, with A. L. Randall, Chicago; and Mr. Duvall, with the Pine Tree Silk Mills Co., Philadelphia.

E. A. Nelson, after spending the summer in a camp on Eagle Creek, has returned home. Mr. Nelson says he had the time of his life this summer, hunting, fishing and entertaining company—mostly company.

Thieves entered the store of John Rieman this week and thoroughly ransacked the place. They evidently thought that Mr. Rieman left his money in the store at night, as the place looked as though a cyclone had struck it the next morning. They had emptied every drawer and case in the store and it took Mr. Rieman all of the next day to straighten things out again. They did not want anything but money, as there was about $500 worth of ribbon which they did not touch. Lucky for Mr. Rieman that he keeps his money in the bank.

A. Wiegand & Sons have as fine a lot of pot mums as has been seen around here for some time.

Miss Elsa Bertermann, daughter of John Bertermann, and Arthur Hotchkiss, of Ely, Minn., were married at the Bertermann home last week. Mr. Bertermann is getting quite proficient in leading a daughter to the altar, as this is the third one to have been married in the last eighteen months. H. L. W.

On account of elections throughout the state November 2, the monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association will be postponed from November 2 to November 9. The time is 3:30 p. m.

OBITUARY.

Percy Jones.

The illness of Percy Jones, whose condition had been reported from week to week in the REVIEW during the last month or more, terminated fatally at the University hospital, Chicago, at 2:15 a. m. October 23. While not unexpected, because of the serious nature of his disease, the announcement of his death was a shock to those who were associated with him in the Chicago market, where the pause brought realization that here had been a strong and steadfast character, and that his passing meant a personal loss to many where business intercourse had ripened into friendship.

Several weeks ago Mr. Jones was confined to his home for a few days by a kidney trouble that seemed to yield readily to treatment. Then incautious over-exertion brought him to death's door and he was hurried to the hospital for an operation on the kidneys. This was successful and he was on the point of returning to his home, expecting to be at business within a few days, when pleuropneumonia set in and was the direct cause of death.

Samuel Percy Jones was born in Canada, March 7, 1862. His father was a minister, who removed to Illinois while his boys were young. Emerged upon manhood, they found employment with the Northwestern railroad, where Arthur Jones is now cashier of one of the departments. Percy went into the freight traffic manager's office and for sixteen years worked to such good purpose, from the company's point of view, that it refused to accept his resignation when his health broke down, but carried him on the payroll for six months after he removed to Josephine, Ala. Mr. Jones lived for twelve years on the shore of Perdido Bay. It was during this time, just before the outbreak of the Spanish war, that he engaged in the lumbering business with the late Sol Garland, Sr., the Des Plaines florist, one of whose daughters he had married before removing south. This venture did not succeed, and, after spending two years in St. Louis in the real estate business, Mr. Jones returned to Chicago, intending to go back to rail roading.

It was Sol Garland, Jr., who caused Mr. Jones to change his plans and start a wholesale commission flower business, in October, 1903. Mr. Garland was then arranging to sell his own stock at the Flower Growers' Market in Chicago, and proposed that instead Mr. Jones open for himself with the Garland shipments as a nucleus. The result, Mr. Garland stated October 23, has been eminently satisfactory to himself, as well as it was to Mr. Jones. For the last four and one-half years he has acted as manager of the Flower Growers' Market, where his business was located, and none of his business associates will feel his loss more keenly than those identified with this particular enterprise. He was a thorough business man, prompt to the minute in meeting his obligations of whatever character, firm, impartial, of few words, and so little given to going about that those of the craft who did not visit his place of business knew him scarcely at all; but to those who penetrated the barrier of his reserve he displayed kindness of purpose and warmth of friendship.

Mr. Jones had no children, but he assumed the guardianship of Henry Van Gelder, for the last few years associated with him in the business, which will be continued under Mr. Van Gelder's management. Mrs. Jones is the sister of George, Sol, Frank and Warren S. Garland and of Mrs. Fred Wittbold.

The funeral was held Monday, October 25, from the residence at 219 Austin avenue, Oak Park, interment being at Park Ridge. There was a large attendance, many in the trade being present or represented. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. The pallbearers from the trade were John Sinner, George Walther, Charles Klehm and Harry Clifton.

The Garland family was doubly bereaved last week, Josephine Garland, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Garland, having died at the family home at Des Plaines on the day preceding the death of her uncle. She was 23 years of age and had suffered for nearly two years with anæmia. Mrs. George M. Garland is the youngest sister of Mrs. George Wittbold. Besides the parents, there are two brothers, Harry, who is associated with his father in the greenhouse material business, and Will, the youngest of the family. The funeral was held at the home at Des Plaines, Sunday, October 24, burial being at Maine cemetery, Park Ridge.

Emanuel Sutermeister.

The news of the death of Emanuel Sutermeister, of Milton, October 21, will come as a shock to many of his hosts of friends. His genial good nature made him the friend of everyone, and few faces will be more missed in flower circles in Boston. The deceased gentleman was born in Boston in 1851. He early acquired a love for flowers, first finding employment with L. Davenport, of Milton. In 1890 he started in business on his own account and had for many years made a specialty of bulbous stock, which he grew particularly well.

Mr. Sutermeister had for a long time been identified with the Boston wholesale flower market and for some years and up till the time of his death was a director of the Boston Co-operative Flower Growers' Association, operating the Park Street Market. Though not identified with the S. A. F. or other societies, he occasionally visited the conventions and took a keen interest in all pertaining to their welfare.

During the last few years the deceased had had several illnesses, and on one occasion broke his leg, which incapacitated him from duty for some time. His last illness came on quite suddenly October 21 and it was deemed best to move him to the Emerson hospital, Forest Hills, for a possible operation. The operation was performed, but he never rallied from it and passed away at 10:30 p. m. the same day. The cause of death was pancreatitis, or inflammation of the pancreas.

Mr. Sutermeister is survived by a widow and a grown-up son and daughter. His son, Edwin, is a chemist at Madison, Wis., only moving there a few days prior to his father's death.

The funeral services were held at the late home of the deceased, October 24, the Rev. R. Stebbins, of the Unitarian church, Milton, officiating. In spite of the inclement weather, there was a large gathering of friends who had come to pay their last tribute of esteem. Floral tokens were numerous and beautiful, each of the wholesale flower markets and many in the trade being among those contributing. The board of directors of the Park Street Market and many members from the wholesale markets were among the mourners. The employees of the deceased acted as pallbearers.

Patrick J. Keller.

Patrick J. Keller, one of the best known of the old established nurserymen in the vicinity of San Francisco, Cal., died suddenly of heart failure, in Oakland, October 14. Mr. Keller established himself in the nursery and florists' business in that town in 1875. He was located for many years close to the Mountain View cemetery and afterwards moved to a large tract in the town of Piedmont, where he continued raising stock for many years. This land becoming too valuable for nursery purposes, Mr. Keller finally retired from active labors in that line and devoted himself to improving this property, on which he built many houses and stores. He is survived by a widow and eight children.

Mrs. Benjamin B. Smalley.

Mrs. Zelia E., wife of Benjamin B. Smalley, of Everett, Mass., passed away at a Boston hospital Saturday afternoon, October 9, after a few days' illness. Mrs. Smalley had seemed to be in the best of health, when she was taken down with a carbuncle. As it did not yield quickly to treatment, she was removed to the hospital. She was a native of Cutler, Me., and with her husband had resided in Chelsea, Mass., for many years previous to taking up their residence in Everett. She was a member of the Baptist church and also a member of Faith Rebekah Lodge and N. E. Order of Protection.

Funeral services were held at her late home, 18 Franklin street, Everett. A profusion of beautiful floral tributes, the like of which had not been seen in that city for many years, was a touching testimonial of the high esteem in which she was held. Besides her husband, she is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Ethel Simpson, of Everett, and a son, B. J. Smalley, of New York.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

D. R. Herron, of Olean, N. Y., is adding three houses, 22x150 feet, six and one-half feet to the gutter, twelve feet to the ridge, of King construction, with cement walls and pecky cypress benches. He will give these a good trial, and if they produce the goods, which it is believed they will, a big range will be erected upon the same lines. Quantities of stock are grown and sold annually through the medium of the REVIEW. He has a grand batch of Bostons for the holidays.

Mrs. J. H. Johnson, of Olean, reports a rather quiet season, but with several orders in sight for society functions. No doubt she will get the usual share of patronage this coming season.

It was a dull day when I called on Geo. L. Graham, of Bradford, Pa., but he has a happy faculty of making everything look bright. A run through the houses showed stock in fine shape, with lots of bloom in sight. There is a strong smell of oil in the air, but both plants and flowers seem to delight in it.

B. A. Bartlett, at Greenhurst, is a heavy shipper to Buffalo, chiefly of carnations and greens.

Thomas Russell is increasing his plant at Brooklyn Heights and is likely soon to have the largest greenhouse area in this vicinity.

Daniel Offerle & Son, of Warren, Pa., spent part of the summer months in building a show house, 40x50 feet, of cement and iron—an elegant job, done by their own employees. M.

After the ceremony the party drove to the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Gude, where they were given a reception fit for a king. Mr. and Mrs. Marche have the best wishes and congratulations of the craft.

Among other notable events of the week was the marriage of Fred W. Gust, of the Washington Florists' Co., and Miss Britannia K. Peter, also of this city. This party on Saturday, October 16, stole away to the city of Baltimore and were quietly married. On Monday morning Mr. Gust was found at his post, wearing a broad smile which we hope will be everlasting.

Many attractive windows were to be seen last week. Those of Geo. C. Shaffer and William Marche were notably good, the designs in them representing the opening of the various schools and seminaries. The one at Shaffer's had a large gateway opening into the seminary grounds, with the inscription "Seminary" worked in rustic letters over the gateway. The window at Marche's represented "Scholarship," and showed a ship made of Killarney floating under a banner of welcome, the background being pennants of all descriptions, the whole producing a beautiful effect.

The attraction at the Washington Florists' Co. this week was a rustic window, the floor being covered with green moss, with an old-fashioned zigzag rail fence the entire length of the window, covered with wild roses. The background was a large bank of yellow chrysanthemums and oak foliage, with oak foliage on the ceiling.

The windows at Gude's were quite effective, with arrangements of roses and chrysanthemums.

The branch of the Pennock-Meehan Co. in this city has proved to be quite a success. Its manager, Mr. Schnell, is kept quite busy handling the large shipments of chrysanthemums that come into this market.

We had with us this week representatives of two of the leading florists' supply houses, M. Rice & Co. and Bayersorfer & Co., of Philadelphia. W. F.

DECATUR, ILL.

A disastrous hail storm passed through this district October 23. The estimated damage in this county, by wind and hail, was $100,000. At Mr. Bommersbach's greenhouses the storm broke 1,200 panes of glass, besides doing great damage to his smokestack. C. W. Harrold reports that there was no glass broken at his place, though he could have scooped up shovelfuls of hail close by. The I. T. S. shops were blown down and ten men were injured, some of them fatally. Most of this occurred about 3 p. m. Later in the afternoon there was another hurricane, which blew down a tree within ten feet of Mr. Harrold's establishment, but did no harm to any of his buildings. INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business continues good, funeral work being quite a factor. Mums are in full blast now and are moving fairly well. Roses and carnations are improving daily. Orchids and valley are in fair supply. Some home-grown violets, mostly the California violets, are to be seen, but not enough to go around. There are some good pot mums to be seen, but they are not moving the way they should.

Various Notes.

Hartje & Elder have sent in the first sweet peas of the season. They are not cutting them in any great quantity, however. This firm is also showing some good pot mums.

Baur & Smith are sold out entirely of field-grown carnations. This firm enjoyed a large business in this line this year.

John Elsner is having a strenuous time these days. Street improvements, sewer assessments and cement sidewalks are the cause of his troubles.

On account of the election, the regular monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association will be postponed until the second Tuesday in November.

Visitors last week were: A. M. Sanders, with McGregor Bros., Springfield, O.; Mr. Willson, with A. L. Randall, Chicago; and Mr. Duvall, with the Pine Tree Silk Mills Co., Philadelphia.

E. A. Nelson, after spending the summer in a camp on Eagle Creek, has returned home. Mr. Nelson says he had the time of his life this summer, hunting, fishing and entertaining company—mostly company.

Thieves entered the store of John Rieman this week and thoroughly ransacked the place. They evidently thought that Mr. Rieman left his money in the store at night, as the place looked as though a cyclone had struck it the next morning. They had emptied every drawer and case in the store and it took Mr. Rieman all of the next day to straighten things out again. They did not want anything but money, as there was about $500 worth of ribbon which they did not touch. Lucky for Mr. Rieman that he keeps his money in the bank.

A. Wiegand & Sons have as fine a lot of pot mums as has been seen around here for some time.

Miss Elsa Bertermann, daughter of John Bertermann, and Arthur Hotchkiss, of Ely, Minn., were married at the Bertermann home last week. Mr. Bertermann is getting quite proficient in leading a daughter to the altar, as this is the third one to have been married in the last eighteen months. H. L. W.

On account of elections throughout the state November 2, the monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association will be postponed from November 2 to November 9. The time is 3:30 p. m.

OBITUARY.

Percy Jones.

The illness of Percy Jones, whose condition had been reported from week to week in the REVIEW during the last month or more, terminated fatally at the University hospital, Chicago, at 2:30 a. m. October 23. While not unexpected because of the serious nature of his disease, the announcement of his death was a shock to those who were associated with him in the Chicago market, where the pause brought realization that here had been a strong and steadfast character, and that his passing meant a personal loss to many where business intercourse had ripened into friendship.

Several weeks ago Mr. Jones was confined to his home for a few days by a kidney trouble that seemed to yield readily to treatment. Then incautious exertion brought him to death's door and he was hurried to the hospital for an operation on the kidneys. This was successful and he was on the point of returning to his home, expecting to be at business within a few days, when pleuro pneumonia set in and was the direct cause of death.

Samuel Percy Jones was born in Canada, March 7, 1862. His father was a minister, who removed to Illinois while his boys were young. Emerged upon manhood, they found employment with the Northwestern railroad, where Arthur Jones is now cashier of one of the departments. Percy went into the freight traffic manager's office and for sixteen years worked to such good purpose, from the company's point of view, that it refused to accept his resignation when his health broke down, but carried him on the payroll for six months after he removed to Josephine, Ala. Mr. Jones lived for twelve years on the shore of Perdido Bay. It was during this time, just before the outbreak of the Spanish war, that he engaged in the lumbering business with the late Sol Garland, Sr., the Des Plaines florist, one of whose daughters he had married before removing south. This venture did not succeed, and, after spending two years in St. Louis in the real estate business, Mr. Jones returned to Chicago, intending to go back to trading.

It was Sol Garland, Jr., who came to Mr. Jones to change his plans and start a wholesale commission flower business in October, 1903. Mr. Garland was then arranging to sell his own stock at the Flower Growers' Market in Chicago, and proposed that instead Mr. Jones open himself with the Garland shipments as a nucleus. The result, Mr. Garland states, has been eminently satisfactory to himself, as well as it was to Jones. For the last four and one-half years he has acted as manager of the Flower Growers' Market, where his business was located, and none of his business associates will feel his loss more keenly than those identified with this particular enterprise. He was a thorough business man, prompt to the minute in meeting his obligations of whatever character, firm, impartial, of few words, so little given to going about that the of the craft who did not visit his place of business knew him scarcely at all; to those who penetrated the barrier of his reserve he displayed kindness of purpose and warmth of friendship.

Mr. Jones had no children, but he assumed the guardianship of Henry A.

Gebler, for the last few years associated with him in the business, which will be continued under Mr. Van Gelder's management. Mrs. Jones is the sister of George, Sol, Frank and Warren S. Garland, and of Mrs. Fred Wittbold.

The funeral was held Monday, October 25, from the residence at 219 Austin ave., Oak Park, interment being at Park Ridge. There was a large attendance, many in the trade being present or represented. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. The pallbearers from the trade were John Sinner, George W. Sinner, Charles Klehm and Harry Clifford.

The Garland family was doubly bereaved last week, Josephine Garland, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Garland, having died at the family home at Des Plaines on the day preceding the funeral of her uncle. She was 23 years of age and had suffered for nearly two years with anæmia. Mrs. George M. Garland is the youngest sister of Mrs. George W. Wittbold. Besides the parents, there are two brothers, Harry, who is associated with his father in the greenhouse material business, and Will, the youngest of the family. The funeral was held at the residence at Des Plaines, Sunday, October 24, burial being at Maine cemetery, Park Ridge.

Emanuel Sutermeister.

The news of the death of Emanuel Sutermeister, of Milton, October 21, will come as a shock to many of his hosts of friends. His genial good nature made him the friend of everyone, and few faces will be more missed in flower circles in Boston. The deceased gentleman was born in Boston in 1851. He early acquired a love for flowers, first finding employment with L. Davenport, of Milton. In 1890 he started in business on his own account and had for many years made a specialty of bulbous stock, which he grew particularly well.

Mr. Sutermeister had for a long time been identified with the Boston wholesale flower market and for some years had up till the time of his death was a director of the Boston Co-operative Flower Growers' Association, operating in the Park Street Market. Though not identified with the S. A. F. or other societies, he occasionally visited the conventions and took a keen interest in all pertaining to their welfare.

During the last few years the deceased had several illnesses, and on one occasion broke his leg, which incapacitated him from duty for some time. His illness came on quite suddenly October 21 and it was deemed best to move him to the Emerson hospital, Forest Hills, for a possible operation. The operation was performed, but he never rallied from it and passed away at 10:30 p. m. the following day. The cause of death was pancreatitis, or inflammation of the pancreas. Mr. Sutermeister is survived by a wife and a grown-up son and daughter. His son, Edwin, is a chemist at Madison, Conn., only moving there a few days prior to his father's death.

The funeral services were held at the home of the deceased, October 24, Rev. R. Stebbins, of the Unitarian church, Milton, officiating. In spite of inclement weather, there was a large gathering of friends who had come to their last tribute of esteem. Floral tributes were numerous and beautiful, each from the wholesale flower markets and many in the trade being among those contributing. The board of directors of the Park Street Market and many members from the wholesale markets were among the mourners. The employees of the deceased acted as pallbearers.

Patrick J. Keller.

Patrick J. Keller, one of the best known of the old established nurserymen in the vicinity of San Francisco, Cal., died suddenly of heart failure, in Oakland, October 14. Mr. Keller established himself in the nursery and florists' business in that town in 1875. He was located for many years close to the Mountain View cemetery and afterwards moved to a large tract in the town of Piedmont, where he continued raising stock for many years. This land becoming too valuable for nursery purposes, Mr. Keller finally retired from active labors in that line and devoted himself to improving this property, on which he built many houses and stores. He is survived by a widow and eight children.

Mrs. Benjamin B. Smalley.

Mrs. Zelia E., wife of Benjamin B. Smalley, of Everett, Mass., passed away at a Boston hospital Saturday afternoon, October 9, after a few days' illness. Mrs. Smalley had seemed to be in the best of health, when she was taken down with a carbuncle. As it did not yield quickly to treatment, she was removed to the hospital. She was a native of Cutler, Me., and with her husband had resided in Chelsea, Mass., for many years previous to taking up their residence in Everett. She was a member of the Baptist church and also a member of Faith Rebekah Lodge and N. E. Order of Protection.

Funeral services were held at her late home, 18 Franklin street, Everett. A profusion of beautiful floral tributes, the like of which had not been seen in that city for many years, was a touching testimonial of the high esteem in which she was held. Besides her husband, she is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Ethel Simpson, of Everett, and a son, B. J. Smalley, of New York.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

D. R. Herron, of Olean, N. Y., is adding three houses, 22x150 feet, six and one-half feet to the gutter, twelve feet to the ridge, of King construction, with cement walls and pecky cypress benches. He will give these a good trial, and if they produce the goods, which it is believed they will, a big range will be erected upon the same lines. Quantities of stock are grown and sold annually through the medium of the REVIEW. He has a grand batch of Bostons for the holidays.

Mrs. J. H. Johnson, of Olean, reports a rather quiet season, but with several orders in sight for society functions. No doubt she will get the usual share of patronage this coming season.

It was a dull day when I called on Geo. L. Graham, of Bradford, Pa., but he has a happy faculty of making everything look bright. A run through the houses showed stock in fine shape, with lots of bloom in sight. There is a strong smell of oil in the air, but both plants and flowers seem to delight in it.

B. A. Bartlett, at Greenhurst, is a heavy shipper to Buffalo, chiefly of carnations and greens.

Thomas Russell is increasing his plant at Brooklyn Heights and is likely soon to have the largest greenhouse area in this vicinity.

Daniel Offerle & Son, of Warren, Pa., spent part of the summer months in building a show house, 40x50 feet, of cement and iron—an elegant job, done by their own employees. M

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.
THE REVIEW brings results.

MANY a business finds itself potbound because more effort is made to make sales than to collect and conserve the proceeds.

Now is the time to advertise your stock plants of chrysanthemums. Some varieties will sell better than others, but somewhere there will be florists who want just the particular variety you have, no matter what it is.

THE schedule of prizes offered by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society for its annual exhibition, November 9 to 12, has been issued. Copies may be procured by addressing David Rust, secretary, Horticultural hall, Philadelphia.

OTTO G. KOENIG states that since the issuance of the final premium list for the St. Louis show, November 9 to 12, a local jewel house has offered a beautiful silver cup for the best 100 American Beauties, same to be staged the first day of the exhibition, November 9.

W. WELLS, the famous English chrysanthemum grower of Merstham, England, sailed from Liverpool October 23 to be the guest of C. H. Totty, at Madison, N.
J., for several weeks. He will act as judge at the exhibition of the American Chrysanthemum Society in New York
November 10.

C. L. WASHBURN says that while the flower business did not feel the depression so severely as did most lines of trade in 1907 and 1908, it is sharing to the full in the return of prosperity to other industries. In other words, the florists' business is showing a notable increase this season and is better today than it ever was in autumn.

A CALL TO ORGANIZE.

Believing there is need of united action among growers of outdoor flowers, especially the gladiolus, dahlia and the hardy plants, I should be pleased to meet, November 5 and 6, at the Chicago flower show, any and all who are desirous of organizing for mutual benefit. The west needs a good, strong working organization for these interests.

E. S. THOMPSON.

Benton Harbor, Mich., October 26.

IT PLEASES US TO PLEASE YOU.

There is no greater satisfaction to a business man than to know that, while he is making a living for himself, he is pleasing those who patronize him. A publisher prizes nothing higher than sincere words of approval, for the standing of a publication with its readers is the key to the success of the business:

Enclosed is my check for another year of the Review, as I should be lost without it. I find the Review the best paper published in the florists' line, as it gives volumes of information to the men sailing in the craft. I for one have obtained many points from it, and no doubt all who read it have done the same.—Rudolph Kaiser, Annapolis, Md., October 19, 1909.

A VOICE FROM THE EAST.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

Kindly discontinue my advertisement of violet plants, as the stock is all sold. Send bill and I will mail check, for the Review does its work well.—Richard Langle, White Plains, N. Y., October 21, 1909.

SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

There will be a meeting of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, held in the Museum of Natural History, New York, November 3, at 7 p. m., to discuss the future of the society and other important business. All who are interested are invited to attend.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

As last week progressed the supply of stock increased in all lines and the market became much easier in tone at the latter end of the week than it was at the opening. While prices eased off, the increased supply permitted a greatly increased volume of business and the week went on record as excellent from almost every point of view. The greatest change was in the chrysanthemum supply, demand and prices. The supply increased to several times what it had been at any other time this season, and while the demand increased, prices became weak; it was a buyer's market on mums. Roses became sufficiently plentiful so that prices weakened, and even carnations, which have been a real shortage, became sufficiently plentiful for the demand.

This week opened with last week's conditions accentuated. The chrysanthemum season is at its height and the market is overloaded. Prices, which have thus far this season averaged rather better than last year, have fallen off to the point where growers are making complaint. Even the best of stock feels the pressure of the large receipts, and for the smaller grades cheap prices must be made to move the large quantities. One depressing factor is the failure of the Halliday crop this year. The flowers of this variety are coming flat and opencentered and the buyers who need good stock cannot use them. The result is that they must be sold at the cheapest of figures to the stores where quality is not the first consideration. There is some doubt as to what caused the Halliday to fail to turn out its usual fine flower, but it appears that the variety was so early this year that the growers did not take the bud they usually do, and the later bud proved a flat failure. White mums recently have been selling better than yellow, just the reverse of the case earlier in the season. There are many large orders booked for shipment to New Orleans the latter part of this week, but they all are at cheap prices; the All Saints' day demand calls for quantity rather than quality. Pompons are in larger supply and are selling well.

Roses of all varieties are much more abundant than a week ago. The special long-stemmed stock is particularly plentiful; short roses command a premium, compared to the specials, because the demand for shorter is strong and the supply lighter. This is especially true of white. Killarney continues the best selling rose, but a call for good Bridesmaid has developed which is hard to meet, for many more Killarney than Maid are being grown this year. Both Killarney and My Maryland are to be had with stems three feet long and some equally good Mrs. Jardine are seen, though in nothing like the same quantity. Richmond has become fine and is selling better. Beauties, like other roses, are much more abundant than a week ago and are cheaper in price.

The supply of carnations is probably at least double what it was a week ago and, while there is as yet hardly what could be called an adequate supply, still there are carnations for all who call for them. The demand has noticeably fallen off because of the prices which it has been necessary to ask; the prices were so high, considering the quality of the stock, that buyers turned to something else. It will now be necessary to educate them to the fact that carnations again are plentiful, of good quality and at ordinary prices.

The receipts of eastern violets fell off sharply last week and prices have advanced. There has been another little flurry in valley, which is a periodical occurrence, but Easter lilies are more abundant. Cattleyas have become plentiful. Sweet peas are in limited supply.

Green goods of all kinds are in large supply, especially smilax strings.

Wietor's New Interest.

N. J. Wietor is president and general manager of the Kildust Kemical Kompany, recently incorporated with an authorized capital stock of $50,000. The company has a factory and offices at 24 West Kinzie street and within a few days will be turning out Kildust by the ton. It is a dust absorbing sweeping compound that gives every indication of having an enormous sale. When sprinkled on the floor before sweeping, the most vigorous handler of the broom fails to raise a particle of dust. While Mr. Wietor is at the head of the concern, and deeply interested in its success, he will not give it his time, the office being in charge of Bert Griffin, whom many florists know, with the manufacturing end in the hands of another member of the concern.

Employees' Ball.

The fourth annual reception and ball given by the Wholesale Florists' Employees' Club took place Wednesday evening, October 27, at Columbia hall and was a most emphatic success. The hall was handsomely decorated, the plants coming from the George Wittbold Co.

About 100 couples participated in the grand march and every person present spent a most enjoyable evening, dancing continuing until 1 o'clock. The officers of the club are: President, H. W. Rogers; vice-president, George F. Poehlmann; secretary and treasurer, J. C. Enders. The other members of the club are: Otto Goerisch, Max Ringier, William Lorman, John Ziska, M. Fink, Charles Zapfe, Harry Manheim, Joe Strauss, F. J. Krauss, F. S. Ayers and T. Matchen, and the entire membership was on duty as reception committee.

Club Meeting.

There was another good turnout of members at the weekly meeting of the Florists' Club October 22. Flower show preparations were about the only subject under discussion. George Asmus, who is both manager of the show and president of the club, occupied the chair. It appears that the progress on show preparations leaves little to be desired. A splendid show is assured. It previously had been voted that instead of a banquet, the club entertain the visiting florists at a stag party in the Coliseum annex. The date was set for Thursday evening, November 4, and plans presented by Chairman Ed Enders were approved. All visiting florists are cordially invited. Any living within fifty miles of Chicago are counted as belonging to the locals and will be charged $1 each for their tickets, the same as all club members. F. Lautenschlager, A. Zech and Wm. the visiting ladies on the night of the stag. J. B. Deamud was appointed chairman of the privilege committee and Frank Johnson was added to the committee on flower booth.

The following applications for memberships were received: A. Miller, A. Bergland, Albert Erickson, D. A. Robertson, John Schollsmann, Harry Frank, Jr., Andrew Skafgard and E. G. Johnson.

A. C. Brown, of Springfield, was a visitor at the meeting and made a short talk.

Various Notes.

E. C. Amling says that he knows just where President Taft is, swinging around the circle, without looking at the newspapers. He can tell it from his orders. Since the president got back into the shipping radius there have been Chicago flowers wherever the President dined.

Frank Oechslin has recently received two carloads of azaleas from Belgium and already has some of them started for Christmas.

C. A. Samuelson's force of decorators went to Riverside last week to do the work in church and home for Ned Washburn's wedding. Bassett & Washburn supplied over 500 Virginia Poehlmann mums.

Miss Martha C. Gunterberg is the latest addition to the list of wholesalers receiving Rhinebeck violets.

Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was in town last week on his way home from a trip to the Pacific coast. He had not been in his house since the S. A. F. convention, but expects to be back here and at Milwaukee for the flower shows.

Mrs. H. F. Port, widow of former florist at Maywood, has removed to 3213 West Harrison street, where she will open a flower store.

A. L. Randall and family have returned to the city from their summer home in Michigan. Mrs. Randall is recovering from the effects of her recent fall there.

Kyle & Foerster report the presence in the market last week of Alpha Elberfield, of Kansas City. Mr. Elberfield is one of the largest buyers of stock in Chicago.

Louis Wittbold says the Geo. Wittbold Co. is figuring on adding largely to its stock of cattleyas. They have lately cut quite a few more than they needed in their own store and have sold them through C. W. McKellar.

F. C. Struvy, one of the veterans among the retail florists of Chicago, and who is now proprietor of two first-class stores here, expects soon to retire from business and return to his home state, California, where he owns a fine farm. Mr. Struvy has many friends in Chicago who will be sorry to see him leave. He is offering his fine stores and Chicago property for sale and intends to wind up all his business here before leaving for the west.

warehouse company makes a charge of 50 cents for opening up. The charge is 50 cents whether one case comes out, or whether 100 cases come out. Consequently the jobber, to break even, must charge 50 cents extra when orders are only for a single case. If a jobber stored 100 cases and took them out one at a time to fill orders he would have to pay $50 in addition to the monthly fee per case for storing.

The Flower Growers' Market closed October 25 at 11 a. m. for the day, because of the funeral of its manager, Percy Jones. It is expected John Sinner will be the new manager.

George Pieser, of Hoerber Bros., has been visiting the greenhouses at Des Plaines, and says the way Frank A. Benthey has the ground shoots coming up means some splendid long stock just when prices will be tallest. The firm has ordered some new style corrugated boxes made by the Thompson & Norris Co., Brookville, Ind., for shipping its stock to the city store in. The boxes are waterproofed by a new process.

George Fisher, who makes his headquarters with Bassett & Washburn, is a busy young man these days. He does the local buying for the H. A. Fisher Co., Kalamazoo, and two or three other large users of stock from this market.

August F. Poehlmann says that the exact number of My Maryland roses being grown by the Poehlmann Bros. Co. is 28,000. When asked how he proposes to keep it going through the winter, he said: "We think it will go all right, but if it doesn't it will not affect the value of the rose for cut flower purposes, because we already have taken out enough money to make it a profitable variety to grow, even if it produces little in winter."

C. M. Dickinson says the supply business is so active that it has been necessary to call in traveling men to help get the orders out.

Ed Hauswirth recently met with an accident which has confined him to his home for several days. Falling while putting up a decoration, he cut his arm so badly with glass that several stitches were necessary.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Trade in the cut flower market has been good and all stock sold satisfactorily. American Beauties have been abundant enough to meet the demand. Tea roses are coming in more plentifully and, with mums predominating, they will, as usual, move more slowly from now. Chrysanthemums are plentiful and can be had in white, yellow and pink, with white in the lead. No orders need to be turned down, no matter how large. Carnations are still short of supply, with a heavy demand; they clean out every morning at the commission houses. Prices remain about the same as last week, $3 per hundred for the best. Easter lilies are apparently short in supply. There is enough valley to meet demand. Violets are more plentiful. The green goods market is well supplied.

Various Notes.

October 23 I noticed, on one of the stands in the Sixth street flower market, a vase of Chrysanthemum Gloriosum. To me it was like meeting a friend of long ago. The committee on mums, having just got through with several seedlings in the hall above, stopped to look at this vase, and right here I wish to say that we often hear the remark that many old-timers have been dropped off the list to make room for newer varieties, and we surely feel justified in keeping up with the procession, looking at a vase of Hal-

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The clear, crisp, cool weather is putting life into the business, and once more the ice-boxes begin to look lonesome as the evening shadows fall. Prices are not yet satisfactory to wholesaler or grower, but the retailer has his opportunity and is taking general advantage of it.

The mum flow is at high tide and the quality is perfect. Prices are low, it is true, compared with other years, but quantity is enormous and growers are legion. As usual, the big novelties are few and independent. These command good figures, from 25 cents to 40 cents, but the number can be counted easily.

Roses have had a hard fight of late to reach paying figures; too many of them for the market to absorb, and general business marking time and waiting for the promised prosperity to materialize. The best Beauties have been firm at 25 cents, but only the selects, however, could command these rates. In quantity, stock almost as good in size and quality would fall to 12 cents. So it was with all the roses. A few of the best sold at the good top figures and then came the bursting of the dam, and there were bargains for all. Killarney especially is abundant. Every grower must have his share of them. My Maryland is popular.

Carnations are much improved in stem and flower, and prices are advancing. The novelties are few and command 3 cents to 4 cents; $2 per hundred was the figure last week for the bulk of the arrivals of real merit. The cold weather may lift the violet market. Thousands daily last week were unsalable at any price. Orchids are extremely abundant. Callas are here again, and so is mignonette. Plenty of lilies and valley are to be had. The green goods men are always busy. Evergreen roping is called for in large quantities; wild smilax also.

Various Notes.

The Madison show is on this week.

The New York exhibition opens on the evening of November 3 with receptions to the members of the Horticultural Society, the New York Florists' Club and affiliated organizations. The show will continue until Sunday evening. The admission is free. It is a grand hall for a flower show and the opportunity should be appreciated by exhibitors as well as the public.

The members of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association motored October 19 to Jersey and visited Julius Roehrs, Bobbink & Atkins, Herman Scholzel, H. C. Steinhoff, Mr. Dresel and other members of the society. They had a grand time. The next event on the tapis in this elite society is the ladies' reception, to be followed later on by the annual banquet.

sentence, for some unknown reason Aloysius Gross, the slayer of John Scott, received only from four to seven years imprisonment, a punishment that in no sense befits the crime.

J. F. Sullivan, of Detroit, was in the city last week, visiting the growers and retailers and gathering inspiration for his decorative work. He thinks Detroit has some retail stores that cannot be excelled in window decoration, but modestly fails to mention them.

Mr. Brown opened his beautiful new store in the Bellnord, on upper Broadway, this week. The fittings and location are both ideal, the show window as large as an ordinary store, and Mr. Brown is confident of the outcome.

A. Meyer has made the old Hoffmeier store into one of the prettiest on the street, the electric lighting effects being especially novel and brilliant. He calls his venture the Smart Set Co., and we shall now see what's in a name. He says he is doing well.

David Clarke's Sons were never better prepared for the fall trade and never more optimistic. They are making a specialty of the Scholze fern and consider it a splendid acquisition. This firm will soon celebrate its sixtieth anniversary.

Mrs. Warendorff, in the Ansonia, is at 74 years of age as active as when the modest store on Fourteenth street a decade ago was her only possession. Five sons are associated with her in the business.

Alex. McConnell, since his return from Europe, has been busy with his nursery plantings at New Rochelle. His trip was a most enjoyable one, among old friends and relatives in Wales, Scotland, etc., in behalf of his business interests in France and Germany. Mr. McConnell says the fall business in the nursery department has been extensive and the Arcade store has been busy with weddings and funerals since his return.

The House of Flowers opens this week at the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-sixth street. The upper stories are for general offices. The roof and cornices are fitted up with boxes which are filled with evergreens, and the sidewalks are cut so as to allow plantings around the four huge windows on the ground floor. The effect is artistic. The flower store itself is large and the ceilings high.

The Japanese lily department of Ralph M. Ward & Co. is working at high tension.

Ambrose Cleary has sold great quantities of boxwood, privet and bulbs at auction.

Arthur Merritt is now one of the force of M. A. Bowe. Business has been booming here of late.

The Flower Shop is the name of another venture in the retail line at 136 West Forty-second street.

Mr. Hart, an old-time wholesale florist, is now with Charles Millang.

Mr. Hood, one of the older generation of florists, died last week at his residence, Ninth avenue and Forty-second street, of a complication of diseases. Mrs. Hood, the widow, will continue the business at the same location.

Nic Schreiner is now in the employ of Millang Bros., of 41 West Twenty-eighth street.

At Hession's, in Flatbush, the entire plant, including the new house, 58x250, is devoted to carnations. Beacon, Harry Fenn, Patten, Victory and Enchantress are the varieties. Ford Bros. handle the entire output, except those used by Mr. Hession in his retail store on Lexington avenue, in New York.

Eugene Dailedouze returned October 22 from his two months' western holiday, having visited Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Yellowstone Park, Arizona, coming home via Kansas City and Chicago. He was accompanied by Mrs. Dailedouze. He is cutting fine mums. A good many Baby mums will be ready for Thanksgiving. There are a dozen varieties of pompons, including the favorite, Zenobia. Two houses are devoted to mignonette. In carnations, Queen, Beacon, Victory, Winona and Enchantress in all its varieties are here seen in perfect condition, with the twin brothers as practical spectators and Taplin and Riley as lieutenants.

Close to the Dailedouze place is the modern plant of A. Demeusy, where carnations occupy all the space, except one house devoted to the popular varieties of chrysanthemums. Mr. Demeusy's son is foreman. Enchantress, Patten and Victory are the varieties grown. The Greater New York Florists' Association, in Brooklyn, handles the stock. The new houses erected this year were built by W. H. Lutton, of Jersey City.

Because Tuesday, November 2, is election day, William Elliott & Sons have postponed their next sale to Wednesday, November 3. The offering then will consist of bulbs, palms and conifers.

Sydney Wertheimer states that there is no truth in the report that Wertheimer Bros. intend to embark in the general florists' supply business. He says a re-

Mellen Buys Fairview Plant.

The Geo. H. Mellen Co., of this city, has purchased at receiver's sale all of the property of the Fairview Floral Co. at Beatty, O., which is three miles out of town on the Yellow Springs and Mud Run pikes, the total consideration being $3,305. At the public offering October 9, no bid was obtained on the real estate, which had been appraised at $4,500, but the Schmidt & Botley Co. made a bid of $300 for the stock of plants, mailing list and all other chattel property belonging to the defunct company. However, the latter bid was not confirmed by the court, as it was not thought advisable Bowling.

The Astoria Club made some fine records at its last meeting, Tuesday evening, October 19. The attendance at the New York Bowling Club, Wednesday evenings, is growing. After the fall shows are over, and Thanksgiving business, the report to that effect probably originated from the fact that for the convenience of their customers they put in a stock of corsage pins and several lines closely allied to the ribbon business, such as corsage protectors, etc. Mr. Wertheimer states that the field for ribbons and chiffon is so extensive that there is more than enough in this branch to which to devote their energies, leaving the florists' supplies to those who are specialists.

to sell the stock without the real estate. The Mellen Co. then took the matter up privately with the receiver and the court, offered to take the real estate at two-thirds of the appraisement, raised the bid on chattels by $5, and secured the entire plant and contents. The premises include about three and one-half acres of land, 18,000 feet of glass and two dwelling houses, while the greenhouses are fairly well stocked with plants, bulbs, etc. The mailing list is considered a good one and there is an advantage in having the village postoffice in the office of the company, with facilities for receiving and sending mail at a near-by station on the Pennsylvania railway.

These greenhouses were started in a small way by Clifford Haley, postmaster of the village, who issued a retail catalogue under the name of Fairview Floral Co., and the business grew to such an extent as to attract the attention of investors, resulting in the incorporation of the Fairview Floral Co. under the laws of West Virginia, by the late C. C. Kirkpatrick, Albert K. Hahn and others. Owing to the fact that the plant was located at some distance from the town, and no thoroughly dependable and capable person, with sufficient financial interest at stake, has ever been placed in charge of the business, which was looked after only incidentally by residents of the city engaged in other lines of business and professions, the management has never been adequate to the requirements of such an enterprise and a considerable amount of friction constantly existed among the stockholders, and by reason of this state of affairs the concern became more and more deeply involved, the present indebtedness being approximately $16,000. The stockholders will realize nothing, but the principal creditors are secured by the endorsements of several directors, who will suffer to the extent of the deficit. The catalogue under the name of the Fairview Floral Co., as "The Women Florists," will be continued by the Mellen Co., who are located nearer to the plant than any other Springfield concern, and with their capital, facilities, experience and well-known capable management, will doubtless make this a paying adjunct to their main and uniformly successful business.

Various Notes.

A sash house 10x105 has been annexed to the rose growing range of the Leedle Floral Co., to provide increased room in which to house two-year-old roses for the winter and make them more conveniently accessible during snowy weather.

E. K. Sparrow, recently foreman for the Fairview Floral Co., left October 21 for Gainesville, Ga., where he will enter the employ of the Piedmont Greenhouses.

Weddings are in vogue among local florists this week. Guy E. Morgan, with the McGregor Bros. Co., was married to Nellie M. Miller, recently with the Good & Reese Co., and Harvey Milton Derr, who has long been in the service of the Good & Reese Co., was married to Goldie Zeigler Clark, for four years cashier and bookkeeper for the Arcade hotel.

The Market.

Market conditions last week were quite satisfactory. The supply in all lines was equal to the demand. Business was good and shipping trade brisk. Mums have been coming in larger quantities and the supply of carnations has increased, so that there are enough to go around. The mums, on account of their size, replace the carnations in some cases.

Various Notes.

Saturday, October 23, the football season opened with a game between the Ann Arbor, Mich., and the local Marquette College teams. The honors were carried off by the Michigan team by a score of 6 to 5. This game was undoubtedly the cause for the brisk sale of yellow mums.

William Zimmerman, of Fifth street and Grand avenue, had his window decorated especially for the football game and reports a good business on yellow flowers for that day.

Currie Bros. Co., on Wisconsin street, had several out-of-town weddings, which helped to keep them busy, for local trade was only fair. They had a good call for carnations, but could not secure enough stock to fill orders.

At the Wisconsin Floral Co. the sale of mums October 23 was rushing. They sold more on that day than they have disposed of since they came into the market this season. Business with them has taken quite a jump the last week.

PHILADELPHIA

The Rising Eastern Market.

Unusual conditions prevail in the cut flower market. There is great activity in small transactions, followed by periods of dullness. The immense quantities of stock usually seen during the height of the chrysanthemum season are conspicuous by their absence, giving the wholesalers little opportunity for exercising their business ingenuity. There have been advances in prices of Beauties, and the fancy grades of the smaller hybrid tea roses, with a decided stiffening in the prices of cattleyas and carnations.

Chrysanthemums have sold better, in the opinion of a leading expert, than for the last four years. The range of prices has been remarkably well maintained; $2 to $2.50 a dozen, barring the fancies, while $4 to $6 per hundred secures the ordinary grade. There are a few extremely fine flowers of choice varieties that bring $3 and, once in a long, long while, even more. The bulk of the names on the list given last week still hold good, but to them may be added Col. Appleton, recognized as the standard yellow in midseason; Kerslake, a magnificent shaggy white; a few advanced William Duckham, pink; Crocus, yellow; Alice Byron, white; the white sport from Harry Balsley, the pink was here last week, and Ivory, the standard white, in all its glory. The improvement in pompons is marked.

Violets have been in about as good or a little better demand than usual this season. The singles of quality are most popular for ordinary occasions, but the doubles are favored for swell affairs. Sweet peas are decidedly more numerous, but many of the stems are single-flowered as yet. Valley has at times been in excellent demand; the stock is now fine.

Greens have been in fair demand, barring a dragginess commented on here and there in smilax.

Mr. Eisele's European Trip.

J. D. Eisele, vice-president of the Henry A. Dreer Co., crossed the ocean this summer, as all good REVIEW readers know; returning home a little over a month ago. Mr. Eisele has such hosts of friends both here and abroad that a little chat with him about his trip is of more than usual interest. Mr. Eisele talked without thought of reaching anyone besides his listener, but many of the things he said are of decided interest as coming from him and are given here with apologies to Mr. Eisele and to the REVIEW readers for any shortcomings of mine.

The unusually cold, wet season in Europe has retarded the azaleas, Mr. Eisele said. There were frosts May 20 and I think one night in June, considerably curtailing the growing season. While there are fine azaleas, the average stock will not be up to last season; the buds are not so far advanced.

Kentias in the medium sizes are not plentiful, but it has been possible to secure enough fine stock to meet all ordinary demands.

A Holland grower, speaking of the enormous increase in the American demand for boxwood, said that he believed this demand would continue until an old-fashioned winter is experienced, when the box will be so injured that the demand will be checked for a time. This had been experienced, Mr. Eisele said, with rhododendrons.

The improvement in the varieties of hybrid tea roses warrants enthusiasm. The stock in England and in Ireland showed splendid growth, while many of the new varieties, both those sent out and those on trial under number, were decided improvements on existing sorts. These varieties give promise of doing well in our climate; many of them will be given a trial at Riverton next season. Here Mr. Eisele suggested a walk through the trial beds of hybrid tea roses, which showed a number of varieties in full bloom, remarkable for the last week in October. As an instance of the possibilities of the hybrid tea, Mr. Eisele spoke of a special order of several hundred plants sent to a customer in New Jersey last spring; this order was held up until late in May on account of the beds not being prepared sooner. When Mr. Clark went to see these roses in September they were a mass of bloom, although 800 flowers had been cut the day before. An order of many times this size was placed with Mr. Clark before he left, for named varieties, all hybrid teas. Commenting on the amateur's preference in varieties, Mr. Eisele thinks sunrise tints are favored.

Returning again to the Continent, Mr. Eisele was attracted by the flora of Switzerland, almost to the exclusion of the far-famed Alps, because here, beneath his feet, was unfolded the story of the conditions required by this and that fair visitor to our shores, making it clear to his intelligent mind just what they required to thrive.

When asked whether there was any marked change in the conditions surrounding decorative plants grown for commerce, Mr. Eisele said that for several years the kentia had been considered as practically the only palm. Today the market is broadening again. Livistona rotundifolia and Phoenix Roebelenii are coming forward; stove plants, especially dracenas, are required; a general broadening of the market is evident.

Commenting on business conditions, Mr. Eisele noted a decided improvement, instancing the fact that the British growers were in no wise affected by the increase in the American tariff on roses.

Various Notes.

The Henry A. Dreer Co. has gathered a collection of forty or more choice varieties of cactus, which will be first placed on view at the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's annual fall show to be opened at Horticultural hall November 9.

R. G. Bowersox, Lewiston, Pa., was in this city a few days ago.

S. E. Graver, of Mount Airy, suffered a severe loss from a fire that originated in his boiler shed October 23. His greenhouses and contents were badly damaged.

J. A. Smith, of Henry F. Michell Co., comments on the increasing size of the bulb orders this season. Four of these intended for outdoor planting averaged over 100,000 bulbs each. Tulips of approved bedding varieties are most in demand.

The October exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society brought seven or eight fine vases of chrysanthemums, early varieties, six flowers each. William Robertson was first with Beatrice May. Samuel Batchelor was second.

John N. May and Mrs. May, Summit, N. J., were here this week.

The steamer Marquette brought heavy shipments of adiantum, ruscus, etc., for H. Bayersdorfer & Co.

The Robert Craig Co., now an important factor in the chrysanthemum market, reports the demand for the autumn queen better than for four years past.

Charles Henry Fox believes it is up to the florist to feature Hallowe'en, instancing increased popular interest in Washington's birthday and St. Patrick's day among flower lovers. Mr. Fox's windows show that he practices.

William R. Smith, of Washington, D. C., has come here to train for the Lonsdale dinner.

M. Rice & Co. report the arrival of Christmas novelties.

Indoor-grown pompons seen at the store of W. E. McKissick & Bros. were exceptionally fine. PHIL.

PORTLAND, ME.

I am going to write about the decorations for a wedding which took place in the Congress Square church October 23. Since this wedding is the big event of the season here, and the decorations were unusually beautiful, it seemed worthy of mention in the REVIEW. I will give you a brief description of both house and church decorations.

The decorations were by A. W. Dyer. About 10,000 flowers were used. One entered the church through an avenue of palms and ferns. The chancel of the church was draped with southern smilax, the altar desk having been removed and a mound of yellow chrysanthemums built up in its place. The walls on either side of the chancel were draped with smilax, relieved with small bunches of pink and white cosmos, of which 3,000 were used, the whole being lighted up with tiny electric globes concealed by the smilax. On the broad gallery rail were pots of Boston ferns, their long fronds falling over the smilax, which completely hid the gallery from view. All through the smilax were yellow chrysanthemums, of which 4,000 were used. The organ loft was massed with ferns and palms. A window in memory of the bride's mother was decorated with smilax and chrysanthemums. Forty pews were reserved by bunches of the same flower tied with green chiffon. The bridesmaids, six in number, carried arm bouquets of chrysanthemums. The flower children carried baskets of white cosmos, and the bride's shower bouquet was of valley and Farleyense fern.

At the house the canopy leading from the carriage curb to the steps was banked with fir trees and on the steps to the door were palms and ferns. All through the fir trees were electric lights, and an electric fountain added to the beauty. The walls of the house were draped with southern smilax, while the fire-places in the parlor, reception and dining rooms were banked with palms and ferns. In the parlor Killarney roses were used, with mums in the reception room, and in the hall American Beauties. In the dining room Richmond roses were used, while the centerpiece for the table was orchids and Farleyense. Smilax and chrysanthemums were used above-stairs.

Decorations by A. W. Dyer are sure to be good, but for beauty of decoration this one has surpassed the others. He also had the decorations for the formal opening of the Portland Club at its new home in the new Baxter block, October 18, in which he used smilax and white and yellow chrysanthemums.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association, held in this city, October 19, was well attended and most interesting. The picnic committee made a final report, showing all bills paid and a balance on hand of 6 cents. The committee appointed to draft resolutions of sympathy to be sent to Mrs. Governor Johnson reported, and the resolutions were spread on the records. A letter from the secretary of the State Horticultural Society inviting the florists to make exhibits at the annual meeting of that society in December, was read, and on motion the Florists' Association decided to make exhibits. Twelve new members were elected.

J. Jorgenson, of the L. S. Donaldson Co., exhibited some fine roses grown at their place, which scored the following points: Bride, 93; Bridesmaid, 82½; Beauties, 79%. S. W. Atlee, with the Lakewood Cemetery greenhouses, exhibited some Mission flower vases and fern dishes which were much admired and received honorable mention by the judges.

President Wirth, on behalf of the members of the association, then presented S. D. Dysinger, the retiring secretary, with a beautiful gold watch and chain in appreciation of his services. Mr. Dysinger was completely surprised, but managed to stammer a few thanks.

A. S. Swanson read a paper on "The Employer's View of the Employee" and A. J. Smith read a paper on "The Relations of the Employee to the Employer." These created quite a little discussion, participated in by several of the members.

Prof. L. R. Cody and S. D. Dysinger were appointed speakers for the next meeting, to be held November 16.

and develop them. A cripple or weak-minded person I do not consider stands much of a chance with us, though I believe that parents, when they have boys of whom they despair ever to make anything, often send them to a gardener to bring up, and I know of some instances where they succeeded. I believe there is as much intelligence and good judgment required in this business as anywhere else, though there are other trades where perhaps the physical labor may be considered harder and more severe.

The greenhouse is by no means a playground; the work is not what many would call light or easy, and the conditions under which it is performed are not always the most pleasant, though it seems pleasant to many who are not familiar with it. I have all sorts of people tell me how they would love to have a chance at it. You often hear some sentimental old maid exclaim, "What charming and pleasant business this must be, to grow flowers!" And they actually try to make you believe they regret they are not engaged in competition with you; but don't let them fool you; they know nothing about it.

Though I do not wish it to be understood that I include all our help, by any means, as considering greenhouse work a drudgery, it is nevertheless a fact that the average help does so consider it. And the thought has often struck me that a large percentage of our help seem to be constantly trying to invent some new method of killing time, without accomplishing anything useful. Another large percentage seem to think only of how much space they can cover in a given time with a hose, or any implement, for that matter, regardless of how it is done; they seem to be anxious to show results, but the results are generally on the wrong side of the ledger.

A Small Bump of Reverence.

Another great fault I have found among the average greenhouse men, especially the younger ones, is the small bump of reverence or regard they have for things or persons. For this fault I lay the blame upon the period of time in which we live, more so than the individual. We are progressing so fast that the average young man, in many things, is ahead of his father. Therefore they lose all regard or reverence for the teachings or experiences of their elders. Why, forsooth, should they feel such reverence, when in the daily papers and conversation generally they hear about the great things done and discovered today, of which yesterday knew nothing? This makes the average young man look up to what tomorrow will actually produce, rather than gain knowledge from the past.

And I do not know but some of our leaders in the business have discouraged our young men from paying any attention to the customs and ways of doing things in olden times and other countries. I well remember my first year in this country, when I got hold of what was considered the standard authority on how to do things here, Peter Henderson's "Hand Book of Floriculture." I came across a statement which sort of dumfounded me and made me think what I had been through in the old country was of no use here. He made great fun of and belittled the practice of the old country gardeners of using drainage in pots for plants. He stated that even the newest tyro, the youngest boy on the place, would look with disgust bordering on contempt at the practice, and it was an invariable custom among them, as soon as any pot plants were unpacked after receiving them from Europe, to knock them out of the pots and dump away any drainage material in the pots. This statement he rectified to some extent in a later edition of the book, acknowledging his mistake, he having found out by later experience that the practice was not to be altogether condemned.

Lack of Proper Training.

I think the main trouble is, our help does not get the proper training. No one has the time to devote to the purpose or the facilities for this, and the young man of today does not have the time or inclination. He wants to start right in and make money at once; and can you blame him when he sees some of his friends in other branches of industry, where machinery has a prominent place, make perhaps double the wages he does from the beginning?

I admit the inducements for a young man to go into training and spend years to learn how to do things in our profession are not very brilliant, as the compensation is, even at the best, rather slim compared with that in other business.

Here, again, I find the same trouble; the great inventions of power machines have doubled or trebled man's earning power in most industries, while in ours a man is not earning—that is, he is not producing—much more in a given time than he did forty or fifty years ago. Still, I would advise any one who has any idea about making a living out of this sort of work, for goodness' sake, don't be satisfied to be one of the many who seem to think that is all there is to it. If you look upon the work as a drudgery, at which you must spend so many hours a day, because you must live, give it up at once. Anything else is better; you can earn more money and have a better time outside the greenhouse.

The man who does not feel attracted or interested enough in the work to try to do his best, has no business in it. He will only make a dismal failure of it and himself. The business in itself is trying, wearing and full of disappointments even at its best; so that if a person can see no other attraction about it, if he has never felt the fascination there is in it, or gets no enjoyment out of seeing a plant or a house of plants grow and develop into a thing of beauty; if, in short, he simply wishes to make so much money out of it, it is not worth his while to spend any time trying to master any of the many details.

The Difference in Men.

Though perhaps many of the greenhouse employees are underpaid, still perhaps most of them are paid all they are worth to their employer. But if anyone strives to do his best, and is honest enough to always feel willing to give full value for money received, there is always a demand for that man's service. Men who are only worth from $10 to $12 a week to their employer are not scarce, but men who are worth $25 or more are exceedingly scarce; and I cannot understand why, where ability and knowledge are so quickly appreciated and remarked, young men can be satisfied to remain in the low stage of advancement.

I remember well a place in Sweden where I spent four years in company with about twenty more fellows of about my age. While there were no particular inducements in the way of an advance in wages, as these were practically the same under all conditions, being fixed in advance as so much each year, still there was competition among us; each one tried to excel in something over his fellow, more for the sake of gaining the respect of his comrades than for anything interest in him. I have seen men at the potting bench who seem to do less and turn out worse work the longer they are at it. When I compare such men with others I have seen, men who could pot up 1,000 field-grown roses in 6-inch pots and do it right, in a day's time, or men who, like some I have heard of, consider the potting up of 10,000 seedlings or cuttings not too much of a day's job, it shows what an enormous difference there is in men.

Merit Is Generally Discovered.

Therefore, young man, try to do your best always, because your employer has a right to expect this of you. But for your own sake I would advise you not to be satisfied with only this, "doing your best." I have discharged more than one man because he told me he was doing his best, when I knew he ought to have done better. Try to do better; be awake and observing, so that you will be constantly improving, which does increase your earning capacity. And don't be afraid that you are doing more than you are paid for. If you are, you will soon be found out. If your present employer is slow in appreciating your efforts, others will find you out, and you will have your reward. Remember the old saying, "There is always room at the top of the ladder." This holds true, and is perhaps more significant in our business than anywhere else. But also remember, you cannot get to the top except by starting at the bottom and proceeding slowly step by step. You cannot use the modern invention, the express elevator, which has taken the place of the old-fashioned ladder in so many places.

Someone, I do not recall now who it was, said that it does not matter much whether you make a mouse-trap, write a book or produce a painting. If you make it better than anyone else, even if you live in the wilderness, you will be found out and roads will be made to your door.

So always try to excel in whatever you undertake. You will get your reward and gain the respect not only of your fellowmen but of yourself.

But to do this you must not only labor with your hands alone; you must study; you must read and learn what others have done before you, learn from their experience. You can not only save much valuable time, but by comparing results you know whether or not you are really doing as well as you think you are.

And right here is where I find the greatest difficulty. Young men nowadays do not seem to have time for study, and, having no leader or director, it is questionable if their study would help them much. I wish and hope this organization would before long be in a position to render some assistance in that line, by establishing a course of lectures, or a sort of school where the young man could be assisted during the winter evenings, so as to at least find out that by reading about what others have done and are doing, he can not only equal but excel work already done.

PLYMOUTH, IND.—Jacob Jordan, vegetable grower, one mile north of here, has torn down his old flue-heated greenhouse and is building two new steam-heated ones in its place. The houses are used for lettuce and early vegetable plants.

ATLANTA, GA.—The property at 105 Peachtree street has recently been purchased by Nat Kaiser from R. O. Campbell for $40,000. The building is occupied by the Westview Floral Co. and has a frontage of twenty feet and depth of ninety feet.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Pittsburg has not had the best weather conditions for several weeks, last week being cold and dark, with some rain; also, in some places, hail of exceptional size; but no serious damage has been reported to date. A couple of severe freezes put the outdoor flowers entirely out of business, and all of these things had their effect in shortening up the stock, with the result that everything coming in was cleaned up at a good price, and the wholesale men were in a pleasant frame of mind.

Chrysanthemums have not been overplentiful to date, but have brought better prices than usual, considering the varieties and quality.

Violets, this week, also moved better; in fact, it was a clean-up all around. The flower shops all seemed to show more life in a general way, and there were a number of weddings and other social affairs which helped. All are now looking forward to the good things which they believe are in store for them.

A visit around the various shops would have been a treat to anyone last week, as the general displays were really works of art. The stores in this city do not have show windows of the kind used in other cities, but instead, they are so constructed that the window show is a part of the store and not separated, in any way, from the store room, and the effect from the street is that the whole store room is one immense window. These window effects are the finest in the whole country. The writer has seen most of them and they are a credit to our city and the trade.

Various Notes.

The Phipps Conservatory, at Schenley park, opened its flower show Sunday, October 24, but next Sunday, October 31, will be the best day, as the flowers will be nearer perfection. Notwithstanding the cold, rain and wind, there were thousands of visitors, and this will continue every day until the flowers are gone, as people come from fifty to one hundred miles to see these shows.

James Moore, of the North Side Conservatories, is also in the show business, and while not so extensive as the Schenley park show, he is there with the goods, as the constant stream of north siders who visited the show Sunday will assure you.

This city has been doing all in its power, for some years, to educate the people to the beautiful, from the florists' standpoint, and our city papers are always ready to write them up in good shape.

C. Godwin & Sons, Bridgeville, Pa., is the name of a firm which is one of the best examples of what energetic thrift and intelligence in gardening can do. A visit to their establishment shows more stock cut from a given amount of glass, as well as larger crops from a farm worked Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE Holland seeds are already arriving in considerable quantity.

W. ATLEE BURPEE, in the seclusion of Fordhook, is rapidly completing his idyl of farm life, the Annual.

THE C. W. Gurney Seed Co., Yankton, S. D., is hastening the completion of a new concrete and brick seed warehouse 72x76, two stories and basement.

CHARLES D. COVENTRY and Miss Esther A. Nelson, both long-time employees of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, were married October 16. They are spending their honeymoon in Tennessee.

WITH the catalogue-makers each given a chance to guess on the right prices for some fifty or sixty scarce items the books should be well worth reading when they come out.

C. B. RICHARDS & Co., a firm of New York freight forwarders, were consignees for 1,100 packages of shrubbery that arrived from Holland last week on the steamer Ryndam.

EVERYBODY'S, a magazine in which most mail order seed houses place some advertising each season, has just been bought by the publishers of the Delineator, in which hardly any seedsmen advertise.

DENVER is planning the biggest apple show ever known, for January 3 to 8, 1910. C. R. Root, of Barteldes Seed Co., is president of the exposition association. His portrait appears in the bulletin containing rules and premium list.

THE business in bulbs has been on the boom since the weather turned cold, with its hint of the coming freeze-up. Stocks are already pretty well depleted, but under normal conditions trade will continue for some time yet and it is expected a fine clean-up will be made.

ABRAHAM GODWIN MUNN, pioneer dealer in seeds at Louisville, Ky., died in that city October 18, aged 91 years. He started handling seeds and farm implements in 1843, as a member of Geo. Lapping & Co., but in 1844 started under his own name, afterward becoming a manufacturer of agricultural implements, a business he began in 1855, now Brennan & Co.

THE L. A. Budlong Co., onion set growers at Chicago, now have a large card in all the city street cars, as follows: "Budlong's Dark Green Spinach. There is something lacking in either luncheon or dinner without this dainty vegetable. It's the Best. Fall crop now on. Ask your grocer or marketman. Promotes health. It's our own variety. Prices moderate; 700-acre gardens."

CHARLES P. GUELF, with the Jerome B.
Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., was a visitor in the Chicago territory last week.

WHAT about the mailing list? Are you to mail an expensive catalogue to a lot of names you haven't heard from in four or five years?

THE arrivals of Dutch bulbs are dwindling but every boat brings in a few cases, mostly ordered by cable to fill shortages in broken stocks.

A. J. PIETERS, Hollister, Cal., spent October 22 in Chicago on his way home from a trip that included most of the seed trade centers on the Atlantic coast.

NEVER was the work on the general catalogues so far along at this date; and this in spite of the fact of great uncertainty as to the right prices for some fifty or sixty items that are known to be in short supply.

JOSEPH L. SCHILDER, of Schilder Bros., onion set and onion seed growers at Chillicothe, O., was a visitor at Chicago last week. He was on business bent, but was accompanied by Mrs. Schilder, who has relatives at Chicago.

HOMMO TEN HAVE, the Holland seed grower and seed merchant, has removed his office from Westerlee, in the Groningen district, to Scheemda, where his principal warehouse will adjoin the Dutch State railway.

THE Society of American Florists' committee on conference with the American Seed Trade Association consists of W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, and J. A. Valentine and F. R. Traendly, ex-officio. After January 1 F. R. Pierson and J. A. Valentine will be the ex-officio members.

EVERY mail from England contains reference to the failure of the sweet pea seed crop in that country, reported weeks ago in the REVIEW. In almost every case, novelties originating there will either be held back a year or, if disseminated according to arrangement, the number of seeds in a packet will be materially reduced.

bage which had been harvested is from fifty per cent to as little as twenty-five per cent of a normal crop. The poorest results were with red cabbage. The causes of the practical failure were frost in the heads before planting last fall and the attack of insects during the summer.

The cauliflower crop was not yet harvested at the date of the report. The Erfurt varieties promised to give a full crop provided the weather until after harvest continued favorable. With the Dry Weather or Danish Giant varieties the result was doubtful because the crop will ripen unusually late. Turnip and Swedes are a short crop and prices fifty per cent higher than usual. The crop of mangold is insignificant and not sufficient to cover Danish demand.

Lily of the valley pips are becoming a more important crop in Denmark. The production this year is increased and the quality excellent.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending October 16 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto ..	3	$ 30	Clover	219	$8,102

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $49,947.

NATIONAL SWEET PEA SOCIETY

Work of Nomenclature Committee.

Readers of the REVIEW will undoubtedly be interested in the progress of the work of the nomenclature committee of the National Sweet Pea Society. Allow me to present a brief outline of the work in progress and in anticipation, as follows:

The committee, composed of M. Fuld, Arlington, Mass.; A. T. Boddington, New York, and William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., with the writer as chairman, was especially enjoined by the society to state the practical aspects of the whole question. These features may be substantially summed up in the (a) elimination of synonyms and (b) the testing of new aspirants for public favor. In addition to these points, it has been thought advisable to give some attention to cultural studies, with special reference to adaptations of varieties to fall and spring seeding and the influence of the time of seeding upon the resultant crop. Successful plantings of a few standard varieties are being made this fall and additional plantings of these varieties will be made again next spring.

The soil selected is a well drained clay loam, somewhat rolling in character, but fairly uniform in its physical make-up.

Generous collections of seed have already been received from A. T. Boddington, of New York, and W. W. Raw-Dahlia Show.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its annual dahlia show in Pembroke Hall on Wednesday, October 12. Never before had a finer display of dahlias been seen in Glen Cove. The hall was literally packed.

The Dean prize, a much coveted trophy, was much competed for. G. Wilson, superintendent for B. Stern, Roslyn, L. I., was the winner, with a superb collection of about 110 varieties. Some fine dahlias were noted in this exhibit, among which were vases of Dreer's White, Grand Duke Alexis, Charles Lannier, Le Colosse, Cuban Giant and many others. J. Duthie, superintendent for G. M. Townsend, was second in this class. Mr. Duthie's collection was also of a high class order, but some of his blooms were a little spent.

Mr. Wilson also won the society's prize for the best collection of dahlias; G. W. Barton, gardener for H. W. Bucknoll, second.

Mr. Duthie was awarded first for twelve distinct cactus varieties; Mr. Eccles, superintendent for M. L. Schiff, second.

Mr. Duthie also won first for twelve double dahlias; Mr. Barton, second.

Twelve pompons, J. Duthie, first.
Twelve singles, J. O'Brien, gardener for Parker D. Hanby, first.

Four vases of four distinct standard varieties, S. J. Trepass, first; G. Wilson, second.

V. Cleres exhibited some fine vases of singles, which were awarded honorable mention.

First prize for vase of white was awarded J. O'Brien.

The Huntington Nursery Co. exhibited a fine vase of dahlias, which was awarded honorable mention.

Vase of cosmos, H. F. Matz, first.

Mr. Eccles was awarded a certificate of merit for a vase of white cosmos.

Mr. Matz received honorable mention for a vase of single violets.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds has become much more plentiful since last report. The chrysanthemums were all in bud and a few days of bright weather has fairly flooded the market with them. Roses are also plentiful. The only really scarce flower is the light-colored carnation. Business in general is up to the average of other years, and November gives promise of being a good month for the florists. A number of receptions and several big weddings are booked for this month.

The growers are complaining that the mums are not bringing so good prices as last year, this fact probably being due to the sudden flooding of the market.

The violet season has opened up nicely.

Various Notes.

J. F. Sullivan has been spending a week in the violet district on the Hudson, and the fine violets seen in his new show window go to prove that Mr. Sullivan has struck it rich.

There was one proud and happy young man at Breitmeyer's Saturday, October 23, this individual being John Klang, for he became papa of a baby boy that morning.

Fred Pautke is a busy man these days. His hobby seems to be table decorating and just now he is getting lots of practice. H. S.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

One could not wish for a better trade than that which the florists have experienced in the last two weeks or more. It is surprising to note the way in which business has kept up in the last month or so. Stock has been quite plentiful in all varieties, but the demand for Bride roses, Enchantress and white carnations has been so brisk that it has been impossible to keep even with it. The shortage on white flowers has been somewhat relieved since the chrysanthemums have come in. In all, October has been an encouraging month to the florists, as there has been a continual demand for funeral work and weather conditions on the whole have been favorable.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Blakesley, of Chicago, returned home October 23, after a pleasant three weeks' visit with her son, Warren G. Matthews.

The Dayton Floral Co. reports that it is kept busy with several large wedding orders. It has received the contract to furnish the city parks with hyacinth and tulip bulbs.

Mr. Lindberg has made a splendid success of his business at Rugby and will no doubt find his new venture profitable.

The Market.

Business conditions for the last week have somewhat improved, yet there is a certain amount of laxity, possibly to be accounted for by the continued pleasant weather. Outdoor flowers are still to be had, as Jack Frost is later than usual.

Roses are in good supply, with an active demand and no surplus except in the lower grades. My Maryland has proved itself equal to the occasion and has not been overestimated. Carnations are more plentiful, as well as better in quality. Chrysanthemums are arriving in greater variety. Alice Byron, Polly Rose and Willow Brook predominate. Violets are becoming more plentiful and are a valuable asset for the florist, not a necessary evil, as some of the eastern people classify them. Cecil Brunner roses are highly popular as well as effective for corsage bouquets and wedding arrangements.

Some choice Cattleya labiata plants are to be seen in the show windows, but are not in oversupply. They readily sold at $1.50 per flower. Gladioli have about run their race. Cosmos is plentiful, but of little value for commercial use.

Various Notes.

Miss Gertrude Blair, of Spokane, spent several days in our midst, visiting some of the greenhouse ranges, as well as observing nature's color schemes on the surrounding hills.

The Routledge Seed & Floral Co. is making a special window display of dahlias, including several hundred varieties. The firm attributes its advance orders to this mode of advertising.

William Miller, of Lynn, Mass., took advantage of a stop-over to discuss landscape work. He was much interested in the local parks.

C. P. Richards, representing C. C. Morse & Co., of San Francisco, called on the florists in the interest of the seed industry.

Lewin Nyberg, who recently opened a store in Seattle, was an inquirer for consignments from this market.

Fred Wiedemann is cutting some choice Halliday and Monrovia mums, which are readily disposed of.

E. T. Muench, of the Harrington Co., Seattle, was a week end caller.

SAN FRANCISCO'S FALL SHOW.

The fall exhibition of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society and the California State Floral Society came to an end on Saturday night, October 16, at the Fairmont hotel. From a meritorious standpoint and also from the amount of patronage recorded, it was the most successful exhibit ever shown in California. The weather was favorable and the public was much interested in the show.

Among the chrysanthemums all the favorites were shown. The Redwood City nursery; John Carbone, of West Berkeley; Domoto Bros., of Elmhurst; H. E. Bothin, of Ross, and S. E. Glade, of Menlo Park, carried off most of the prizes. Several exhibits of really fine flowers were disqualified because the exhibitors did not carefully read the rules

Geranium Dr. Cothran

Beante Poitevine x Queen Olga, the finest geranium novelty in many years. The color is soft pink, with white center. The florets are large, as big as a silver dollar, and under California conditions sometimes much larger, two and one-half to two and three-quarters inches across. The trusses also are large and carried well above the foliage. The plant is of low, branching habit. The color does not fade in sun or rain and the keeping quality is unique.

The entire stock of this sterling novelty is offered for sale by McLellan & Co. were all awarded first prizes on their showings.

J. A. Carbone, Domoto Bros. and E. W. McLellan & Co. made the largest exhibits of carnations.

In ferns and other kinds of decorative stock, such as palms and dracenas, begonias and hanging baskets, H. Plath, of Ocean View, had the largest show. He received many first prizes, both for specimen plants and collections. E. James, of Elmhurst, and Henry Melde, of Eureka, also made very meritorious exhibits of single ferns. W. A. Manda showed a specimen of Polypodium Mandaianum.

For begonias and dahlias, John Martin, of Ross, received several first prizes, as also did I. Vaughan, George A. Pope, S. E. Glade, W. H. Crocker and J. W. Rogge, who made splendid exhibits.

For original floral designs, L. Matroni and the Art Floral Co. won firsts. For table decorations, Miss Charlotte Williams and the Art Floral Co. won first awards. In floral designs, both in fruit and flowers, Miss Hannon, Francis Floral Co., the Art Floral Co. and Pelicano, Rossi & Co. all were awarded first prizes.

For orchids, John Martin, of Ross, Dr. Parker, of Santa Cruz, and MacRorie & McLaren all had exhibits which were by far the best showings ever made along these lines, and for which they received first awards. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are in the midst of the Portola festivities at the present writing, and never has San Francisco looked so gay or given itself over to such a season of jollity and pageantry. There are at least 200,000 additional people at this time in the town, and to say that the stores of all kinds have profited greatly thereby is putting it mildly. The weather has been all that could be wished for, and the townspeople, as well as the dwellers from other places, have shown a splendid inclination to spend money, which has been a great benefit to the receipts of the florists. Red and yellow are the official colors, and anything in the flower line answering that description has been eagerly bought. Quite a demand has been created for carnations, roses, mums, gaillardias and similar flowers. There has been no effort, however, on the part of the growers to take any undue advantage of conditions and the prices have not been raised in any instance.

Stock of all kinds is easier, in spite of the increased sale, than at any time for several months. Violets, which have been only in moderate supply, have become quite plentiful and are the most popular flower at this time. Seventy-five cents per dozen bunches is the ruling rate charged to the stores, and the retail price is about twice that figure.

Chrysanthemums are now in full blast and the demand is about equal to the supply. The smaller, earlier flowered sorts are rapidly giving way to the later and better flowers, and the quality throughout is as good as we have ever seen. Carnations are daily becoming more plentiful and the new plantings are now well in flower. Roses, with the exception of Beauties, are in fair supply and of good quality.

Outside stuff is beginning to show the effects of the lateness of the season and the close picking, and another couple of weeks will see the ending of much of that class. Green stuff of all kinds seems to be a bit scarcer and the cuttings show the results of the heavy inroads on it.

Funeral work in San Francisco and surrounding towns is good, and the festive occasions are consuming everything else.

Various Notes.

Henry Melde, of Eureka, Cal., is in town for a few days' visit.

G. A. Lundy, until recently manager of the Thorsted Floral Co., of Oakland, will represent W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., on the Pacific coast.

Messrs. Schmitz and Dobner, of the firm of that name in Stockton, Cal., are both in San Francisco to see the Portola festivities.

R. D. Wickstrom, one of San Francisco's pioneer florists, is associated with the Thorsted Floral Co.'s new store, on Market street.

Dr. Parker, the orchid grower of Santa Cruz, Cal., is in town. He reports a heavy demand for blooms at this time and has had great difficulty in filling many of his orders.

George D. Allen, of Santa Barbara, is in town taking in the Portola festivities, and incidentally visiting some of the dealers.

W. A. Manda has returned to San Francisco from a visit paid to southern California. G.

TAKEN all in all, the season of 1909 has been a better one for growth than would be expected from the cold, late spring, the dry summer and the pessimistic character of many reports from nursery centers.

D. Shields, Loveland, Colo., is a member of the advisory board.

DAVID HILL, the nurseryman of Dundee, Ill., is building a greenhouse which will be used principally for grafting purposes.

It looks as though there ought to be privet enough in the nurseries of the East to hedge every byway in the land, but doubtless it will all find sale.

ONCE upon a time a manufacturer was complaining to another, apparently more prosperous, that business was poor.
"The trouble with you is that you make things of iron; they last too long; I make soap." The day may come when the perishable character of the nursery-man's output will be the factor that will insure the permanence of the business, but just now a little higher quality and longer life for the stock might not be a bad thing for the business.

CATALPAS FOR POSTS.

W. F. Schell, the nurseryman at Wichita, Kan., says this year promises to witness unprecedented activity in planting Catalpa speciosa. These trees are being grown in large numbers in southwest Kansas for posts, railroad ties and various other purposes for which forest trees are used. Mr. Schell says he has 1,000,- 000 catalpa seedlings in his nurseries at Floral, in Cowley county, and anticipates the demand will be greater than the supply.

The forest tree industry is one of the new projects in western Kansas. It is beyond the experimental stages, however, and is proving successful. The seedlings are set six feet apart each way and cultivated like corn. In three years the trunk of the tree is large enough for post timber. It is then cut down. Growths spring up from the stump, but only one of these is permitted to grow. In two years it is large enough to cut. Growths spring forth from the roots of the tree for an indefinite period of years. The yield is about 1,800 to 2,000 posts per acre, which sell at from 10 to 15 cents each.

tion on how to propagate our own shrubbery, such as lilacs, snowballs, clematis, etc., in the eastern part of the state of for labor in Europe and on the Pacific coast leaves a wide margin in favor of the imported article. On the lines of soft-wooded stock, however, the balance, except for bulbs and a few specialties, is with the home-grown article.

Lilacs, snowballs and clematis are easily grown, and if R. G. thinks that he has the several years' necessary time to spare before salable stock can be produced, I shall be glad to give full details at any time. In the meanwhile he can write to several New York agents of the larger European nurseries and get catalogues giving the prices of the goods mentioned. G.

The Market.

Trade last week was good, all the stores having plenty of work. Flowers are scarce; in fact, carnations cannot be had at any price and roses are not much more plentiful. Mums are now on in full swing and this will relieve the pressure on other stock.

We hear many complaints of October Frost not coming as good this year as in other years. The flowers are weak and thin, but the stems are long and strong, with good foliage. Golden Glow has proved a winner with all who grew it and it seems to be an easy doer.

Various Notes.

John Rogers is now propagator for the Iowa Seed Co., of this city.

The florists here have organized a bowling club and entered a team in the city league. The team consists of George Macrees, J. S. Wilson, Alex Wilson, J. S. Wilson, Jr., William Trillow and Frank Riley. We expect to have a team at Rochester next August and show what Iowa can do. Chicago bowlers take note and practice up.

October 11 and 12 we had a heavy frost, the thermometer indicating 19 degrees, something unheard of here for this time of year. Many of the florists were caught with vincas and hybrid tea roses out in the field and the plants were killed to the ground. BOOSTER.

BALTIMORE.The Market.

Last week was marked by a continuation of good business, and the prospect is that there will be no let-up. While some days are better than others, the general average is well up to other years, if not a trifle better. Funeral work constitutes the main demand and it is the general report from all retail stores that society is unusually quiet this fall.

The mums are holding the lead, as is usual at this season of the year. They are coming in nicely. Some of the fine ones brought $3 per dozen, wholesale. The market is well supplied with nearly all colors and sizes. Pink seems to be a little scarce and consequently sells out best and averages the highest in price. Carnations are coming in more abundantly just now and are being handled in large quantities. Roses are overplentiful and are hard to move at any price, but are handled by the thousands on the street corners. Violets are arriving in large quantities and are in fine shape. They are mostly single.

Ferns are being supplied by nearly every grower and are hard to move. Wherever you look you see a large background of ferns, both in market and in the department stores.

Various Notes.

Robert L. Graham, one of our prominent growers, gave a talk on his western trip at the club meeting on Monday night, October 25, which was well attended. A fine display of new mums was shown.

G. A. Lotze, of Glen Burnie, has been sending in some of the finest mums seen this season.

The park board will plant large quantities of bulbs and pansies in the parks and squares this fall. Clifton park will have a large mum show in about ten days, with about 1,400 pot plants of all varieties. This is expected to be one of the finest displays ever seen in any of the public parks. Q.

ATLANTA, GA.—This city was visited by a terrific hailstorm, Thursday, October 14, and the greenhouses were probably the heaviest sufferers. The storm was the worst ever recorded here. The Dahl Floral Co., at Boulevard and Forest avenue, reports a loss between $2,500 and $3,000. The Brookwood Co., the Atlanta Floral Co. and the Westview Greenhouses also sustained a heavy loss from breaking glass. The Ponce de Leon Floral Co., according to its owner, J. P. Matthiessen, suffered damage that will probably reach $5,000.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Situation in Mums.

We are passing now through the Indian summer, which is ideal weather in New Orleans, and, aside from a few showers, the chrysanthemums have every chance to open nicely. As previously reported, there will be some fine flowers this year, but not in excess by any means, and price and demand will be good.

John St. Mard, who last year was almost prevented from growing mums on account of fire on his place, is again to the front with a well grown patch of Mrs. H. Robinson and H. Cannell.

Herman Doescher has a few plants and complains of lateness in the opening of the buds, due to the check they received during the last storm. He will still cut a good average.

Abele Bros., judging from samples they had on hand at the club meeting, will have perfect flowers. They are clean, pure white and well developed already.

Club Meeting.

Thursday, October 21, the Florists' Society had its regular monthly meeting. President A. Alost presented for discussion his idea of the society building a club house on the lake shore. This proposition seems to meet with the approval of the majority of the members. A committee of five was appointed to report on the subject. John St. Mard suggested that some of the surplus money in the treasury should be invested in this property, to the advantage of everybody.

On the exhibition table was a fine plant of Phoenix Roebelenii from U. J. Virgin. Richard Eichling called the attention of the members to the size of the plant, a two-year-old specimen, claiming that there is money in it.

Various Notes.

James A. Newsham is giving the last touch to his chrysanthemums and to an up-to-date store in front of his place. The whole front and part of the sides of the store are plate glass. It has a cement floor, is hard oil finished inside and contains a first-class refrigerator and every modern convenience.

Harry Papworth invited the Florists' Society and the public in general to inspect the Metairie Ridge Nursery on Sunday, October 24. He is a large grower

The Market.

The chrysanthemum is here in all its glory and for the next few weeks will occupy first place among the flowers. Some fine yellow and white mums are seen in the stores. The flowers are large and on long, stiff stems. Roses are in fairly good supply and the demand is good. My Maryland is much admired and in some instances has the call over Killarney. It surely is a free bloomer. Carnations are short-stemmed, and the supply is limited. Although we had a killing frost October 12, a good many outdoor flowers were still seen, but the heavy frost October 25 did away with all those remaining.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons' new office and salesroom is a large and roomy one and when it is finished will be a credit to the firm. Just off from this is their palm house and show room. In the center of this is a large oval basin with concrete sides, in which the palms and other decorative plants are placed. The floor of the show room is concrete, as is also the floor of the salesroom. The new houses built this season are planted mainly to carnations. They have in all about 15,000 carnations benched and about 9,000 roses. In roses they have American Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney, My Maryland, Ivory, Bridesmaid, Richmond, Perle and Uncle John. In carnations most of the leading varieties are grown, with Enchantress leading in pink, Beacon in red, and White Perfection in white. The mums are looking fine. Among the later varieties Col. Appleton gives promise of throwing immense flowers. So far the demand for mums has been good, all being sold as fast as cut.

The Blackman Floral Co. is busy most of the time. Their windows are continually decorated with some sort of flowers. At the present some fine mums are to be seen in the windows.

The North Pole At Last Has Been Discovered

Which shows that we are making headway. A good pointer for all. Look! People are getting smarter and wiser from day to day. They have discovered the secret that their success in business is due to Godfrey Aschmann, the wide-awake Philadelphia florist, the plants which he sells having taught them how to better their condition and increase their income. He certainly has opened their eyes, so that they now know what and when and how to buy, and from whom to buy it to yield the most profits.

TESTIMONY FROM MICHELL.

I personally visited Mr. Aschmann's greenhouses September 21, 1909, and found that the Araucarias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Boston, Whitmani, Scottii, Amerpohlii, Todeaoides ferns, Rubber Plants, Kentias and Arecas are indeed A No. 1. Have never seen any better plants. The Gloire de Lorraine begonias in 6-in. pots are a perfect wonder, bushy and clean. Have never seen his greenhouses filled with plants as good as they are now.

F. J. MICHELL, of the firm of Henry F. Michell Co., 1018 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 6, 1909.

Mr. Godfrey Aschmann, 1012 W. Ontario St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Sir: I enclose my check. Please receipt and return the bill. The Begonia Gloire de Lorraine (6-in. pots) came to hand in perfect condition and are very nice plants. I will have my gardener see other gardeners, including Mr. Heinz, and invite them to take a look at them and give them your name. I appreciate your promptness and the good quality of the plants. Very truly,

Wm. E. Lincoln, 1206 Union Bank Bldg., Pittsburg, Pa.

BOSTON.The Market.

So far, the flower market has held up exceptionally well, and there are strong hopes that the annual November slump may not occur. Trade varies considerably, usually the last half of the week being the best. Chrysanthemums are plentiful, but there is no glut as yet. The bulk of the flowers are of small or medium size; few fancies are seen, as compared with a few years ago, although a few specials reach $3 to $4 per dozen; but the general run of blooms make $6 to $12 per hundred. Roses are not selling as well as could be wished, but they are always under a cloud during the mum season. The demand for Bride and Maid is now practically nil; Killarney, white and pink, and My Maryland, being the favorites. Another season will see few Bride and Maid grown here.

Carnations keep about the same price, varying from $1 to $3 per hundred. The quality is improving and quantity steadily growing. Violets are good and arriving in large quantities, singles being the leaders. Lilies are not plentiful, but sell well, as does also lily of the valley. The last remnants of outdoor flowers, such as asters and gladioli, are seen. Candytuft sells slowly. Some fine cosmos, Lady Lenox, is arriving. This late-blooming variety sells well. Bouvardia Humboldtii is good, from several growers, and catleyas are much more abundant. For green stock, of all kinds, the call is quite good.

Club Meeting.

The meeting October 26, postponed one week owing to the holding of the great fruit show in Horticultural hall, was largely attended, about 150 being present. The attraction of the evening was J. K. M. L. Farquhar's lecture, chiefly on his trip through Europe this summer, but including some account of the bulb industry in Holland. It was announced that Miss L. L. Hetzer would speak on "Jottings of a Journey Abroad," November 16, and that nominations of officers would be made at the same meeting.

Two new members were elected. The proposal to hold the annual banquet in January was discussed and referred to the executive committee. An amendment to the by-laws to create life memberships was proposed.

The exhibits were fine. Excellent Ivory mums came from Rosemere Conservatories. William Doans had white Lady Lenox cosmos and single mums. W. N. Craig showed seedling, pompon and early English mums. Peter Fisher staged May Day carnation, esteemed highly by him, also an excellent variegated seedling.

Refreshments were served as usual.

Flower Market Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting and banquet of the Boston Co-operative Flower Growers' Association (Park Street Market) was held at Young's hotel, the evening of October 23, and was largely attended. A first-class menu was enjoyed by the company, after which business matters were at once taken up, W. C. Stickel, the president, being in the chair. The death of E. Sutermeister, one of the board of directors, only two evenings previous, cast something of a gloom over the meeting, the deceased, for a number of years, having been one of the most respected, and at all times sunny-natured, members seen at the yearly gatherings. Resolutions of sympathy with the family of the deceased gentleman were adopted, and the same ordered spread on the secretary's records.

The following board of officers were elected: President, W. C. Stickel; vice-president, William Nicholson; secretary and treasurer, George Cartwright; directors, Alex. Montgomery, L. W. Mann, Thomas Pegler, A. Christensen, E. A. Peirce and S. J. Goddard, the last named succeeding E. Sutermeister.

It was unanimously voted to liquidate the existing corporation, and it was announced that 534 shares, at $20 per share, had been taken in the new corporation, which will be capitalized at $20,000, the original market only having $1,500 capital. The market, with its good will and other than cash assets, will be turned over to a new corporation.

The treasurer's report showed cash on hand October 1, 1903, $6,837.59; market rentals and other receipts, $10,891.33; interest from banks, $274.74; total, $18,003.66. Expenditures of the year were, $10,206.99; bank balance, $7,796.67. Some uncollected rentals would bring the surplus to $9,200, showing a substantial gain during the last year.

The question of another trade exhibition was voted laid on the table, to be taken up by the new board of officers to be appointed.

Various Notes.

The New England fruit show, which closed October 24, attracted large crowds of visitors from all parts of New England, and was the largest, and most successful, show of the kind ever held in the east. It will cause quite a boom in fruit culture here, and "back to the east" will take the place of "go west, young man." The quality of fruits displayed surprised the western visitors, who freely admitted that, while their fruit might have some advantage in size, the eastern product in flavor, color and keeping qualities easily led. New Hampshire and Maine won the leading apple premiums. J. H. Hale, Prof. John Craig of Cornell, W. A. Taylor of Washington, Prof. E. Dwight Sanderson of Durham, N. J., and others, lectured during the exhibition.

The death, October 21, of the whole-souled and genial E. Sutermeister, cast quite a gloom over the markets, where no grower was better known or more esteemed.

William Sim's new house, to be erected this fall, of Lord & Burnham material, will be the largest one devoted to violets and sweet peas, in the country. The dimensions are 43x500, there being a height of eight feet at the sides. Wide doors will allow teams to enter the house. Violets, Kaiser Wilhelm and Baronne Rothschild, are both promising well, but Princess of Wales and Boston are still the leaders. The new house will be given up, after the violets are gone, to the late-blooming varieties of sweet peas. Mr. Sim is also at work on a handsome new residence for himself.

Walter Holden, N. F. Comley's salesman, is the proud father of a fine 11-pound son, born October 21.

James H. Leach, of North Easton, is recovering nicely from a dislocation of the shoulder, the result of a fall at the North Easton depot, October 15.

William Nicholson is one of the few growers still producing fancy mums for the Boston market. He is now cutting some fine Pennsylvania, Crocus, Rosiere and other varieties.

Willow Hill Greenhouses are sending in an excellent lot of Bouvardia Humboldtii to Park Street market.

S. J. Goddard is delighted with Carnation Pink Delight, which he is picking with splendid stems. Beacon, Victory and Helen Goddard are also fine with him.

Patten & Co. are well pleased with the behavior of Carnation Shasta, which they planted heavily and for which they are eastern agents. A handsome vase of this variety attracted much favorable notice at the Park Street market dinner, October 23.

Samuel Neil, of Dorchester, is growing Christmas peppers heavily and his stock looks unusually well. Carnations, chrysanthemums, etc., are all promising. Two of Mr. Neil's sons are operating a flower store successfully at Meeting House hill.

S. J. Goddard finished planting his new King construction carnation house October 23. Non-arrival of material delayed its erection about six weeks.

Prospects for the chrysanthemum show, which opens November 5, are good. Neither big blooms nor specimen plants are popular around Boston, as they once were, but a good miscellaneous display will be forthcoming.

L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, is again having exceptional success with double violets.

J. T. Gale, also of Tewksbury, has a fine lot of Campbells.

The white and pink Killarneys, now coming in from Wabash Conservatories, are of such grand quality that Bride and Maid are not in the same class.

W. N. CRAIG.

THE COAL MARKET.

The Black Diamond says concerning the eastern anthracite coal trade: "The cold wave that settled over the country last week has given an impetus to the anthracite trade that is threatening to tax the capacity of the operations and facilities of the transportation companies to provide coal as fast as it is called for. The increase in orders is not confined to any particular section of the country, but it comes from every place where anthracite coal is used as domestic fuel."

Concerning the bituminous coal trade, the Black Diamond's reports show a shortage of cars on nearly all of the coal carrying roads, resulting in no little trouble to shippers with contracts to fill. The question is asked: "If the roads are unable to provide sufficient cars with ideal weather conditions, what will the situation be when severe weather sets in?" The scarcity of labor is also causing many operators to work on short time.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

How many square feet of glass will a cast-iron sectional boiler, with 1,275 square feet of radiation, heat to 50 degrees in zero weather? I am located in Indiana. F. C. A.

It is customary to allow about one square foot of radiating surface for each four square feet of exposed glass, when a temperature of 50 degrees is desired, if the temperature does not drop more than 10 degrees below zero. If your boiler, therefore, will work fully up to its rating, it would answer for about 5,000 square feet of glass. It is, however, customary to make a slight reduction from the rated capacity of the boiler, as, although it might carry the full radiating surface, it would not be economical of fuel and would require more attention. Some allowance should also be made for exposed wall surface other than glass, but in properly constructed houses the wooden or cement walls need not be given more than one-fifth the radiation required for glass

SIZE OF SMOKESTACK.

I am going to build a chimney for two hot water boilers. One is a Hitchings No. 19 and the other is a Carmody No. 30. The smoke outlet to the chimney is ten inches on one boiler and about the same on the other. How large must the chimney be, inside measurement, and how tall? Does it need a partition in it, as I only fire one boiler in mild weather? I am located in northern Kentucky. J. C.

In order to have the chimney large enough to supply both boilers, it will be necessary to make the cross-sectional area of the chimney equal to that of the outlets of both boilers. If the outlets of the boilers are ten inches in diameter the chimney should have a diameter of about fifteen inches, although a little less will answer if it is carried to a height of fifty feet. would interfere with the draft. A partition in the chimney would not be necessary.

HEAT FOR A FRAME.

I should like to run a row of hotbed sash at the south side of my south house, which is eighty feet long and four feet to the gutter, with sixteen inches of glass. The sashes are to connect to the wall under the glass. I wish to run a 2-inch hot water flow down under the gutter in the greenhouse and return under the south side of the frame with a 2½-inch return. Will this give heat enough to grow lettuce, radishes and geraniums, if I need room? Our winters in this part of Indiana are, as a rule, very mild.
F. C. A.

In order to maintain a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees in the hotbed during the winter, two of the 2½-inch pipes or at least two 2-inch pipes would be required, but if it is merely during the spring months and if it will answer if frost is kept out on the very cold nights, it will suffice if only one 2½-inch pipe is used.

LACK OF CIRCULATION.

Can you tell me what is the matter with my heating plant? I have a 30x10 tubular boiler. My greenhouse, 20x100, is heated by a 4-inch main and three manifolds of four 2-inch returns each; twelve in all. The main is five feet six inches above the boiler, with a drop of twelve inches at the farther end of the house. The returns are twelve inches below the boiler at the boiler, and on a level at the farther end. There appears to be no circulation of water through the pipes.

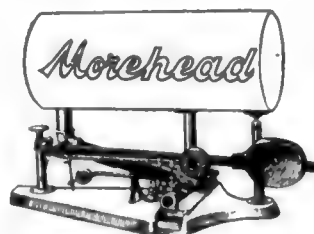

The expansion tank is located three and one-half feet above the main and is attached to the returns. It looks to me as if the hot water all went through the expansion tank, as it boils over before the main is heated twenty feet. The plumber assured me that the returns would be all right twelve inches below the top of the boiler. The returns at the farther end of the house are as close to the floor of the benches as we dare to put them. Can you tell me the cause of the trouble and a remedy?

E. P. M.

It is difficult to get a satisfactory circulation of hot water when the returns are lower than the top of the boiler, unless the flow pipe can be carried to a considerable height. If the returns cannot be elevated, a simple plan in some cases is to lower the boiler, and if this can be readily done there will be no question regarding the circulation, as, if the lower end of the returns is level with or, better yet, slightly above the top of the boiler, a circulation is assured. If this cannot be done, it may be possible to carry the flow pipe at a somewhat higher level. It should be given the least fall that will permit the air to escape to the highest point, and it is at that point that the expansion tank should be connected, rather than to the returns.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week nearly all of the local florists were kept busy with some kind of work. The horse show had a great deal to do with making the florists hustle. The uptown florists, especially, did well with social entertainments. There also was a good deal of funeral work among the downtown florists. The transient trade was fairly good. We are looking to colder weather, however, for good, steady business. The wholesalers were fairly well supplied with extra good stock and all report a good local and shipping trade last week, with little going to waste.

Chrysanthemums are coming in more plentifully each day and big consignments are looked for this week. Prices are still high on them. Carnations are scarce and demand a big price. In fact, these were never known to be so scarce at this time of the year. The few that come in are of good quality and as high as $4 to $5 is asked for fancy stock. Roses have been more plentiful in all varieties. American Beauties have been in good demand in all grades. White Killarney, My Maryland, Richmond and Ivory sell best of all.

California violets are improving in color and length of stem. The supply is better. A few doubles are in the market, but not many. Some extra fine lily of the valley had a good demand. Smilax is coming better and sells well, also all other stock in this line, including good green and bronze galax leaves.

Various Notes.

A. C. Canfield, of Springfield, Ill., was a visitor last week in the wholesale district.

Miss May Burns, who was with John Burke last season, has returned from an extended trip to California and other western states. Miss Burns is now in the employ of the Kahrs Floral Co.

Another Thing About Quick Repair

We have said, "In case of any accident to the sections of Improved Capitol Boilers, quick repairs can be accomplished more quickly and easily than with any other boiler."

There is something else, though.

Should it be necessary to make use of the quick repair feature, the permanent repair can be made with less expense. Why? Because Capitol Boilers have divided sections. The sections being in halves, it is not necessary to purchase a section for the entire width of the boiler, but for only one half.

The Market.

Business continues to improve and several good orders were turned out last week. Flowers are a little more plentiful and are just about equal to the demand. Mums are getting to be quite a factor, and will be plentiful in a few days. Some good Robinson, Estelle, Virginia Poehlmann and Halliday are being cut, and are cleaning out well at prices ranging from $1.50 to $6 per dozen. Roses are in fair supply, although not equal to the last three weeks. Mums are taking the place of roses in a good many cases. They are also displacing carnations, which at no time this season were equal to the demand. Violets are becoming more plentiful each day, and are improving steadily. Valley was a little scarce, but as the demand was not up to the standard, the scarcity was hardly noticeable. Orchids are still selling well, but the supply is limited. Green goods are in good supply.

Various Notes.

Jacob Schulz had three good funeral orders the first part of this week and used large quantities of Killarney, My Maryland, Beauties and valley. One beautiful blanket was made entirely of valley and plumosus.

William Walker had several good window displays during last week. Mr. Walker is cutting some of the best stock in this locality and his greenhouses are in fine shape.

Manz & Neuner are advertising Dutch bulbs with a good window display, using a Dutch windmill to good advantage.

The bowlers are getting in shape and are running up some good scores. The Rudbeckias ran up 915 in the last game last week, this being the highest score this season. K. R.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Trade was a trifle better last week than the week before, but it is not what it ought to be nor what had been expected. To be sure, there has been some business, but it was somewhat backward. Frosts last week have about finished all outdoor blooms and the demand for bench stock will from now on be on the increase.

Good carnations have been a trifle scarce, bringing from 2 cents up at wholesale. They retail at 50 to 75 cents per dozen. Roses are good at $1 per dozen up, while mums are coming into full swing and retail at from $1.50 per dozen up. A few violets are seen, but they do not show to advantage as yet. About $1 a hundred is the general retail figure.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held at the rooms in this city on the evening of October 17, with a good attendance. President Charles Macnair was in the chair and spoke encouragingly of the prospects of the club for the coming winter, and urged every member to be constant in attendance and to endeavor to secure the presence of some of the florists who are not affiliated with the club. The executive committee reported that plans were being made for a series of talks on pertinent subjects at the winter meetings and it was suggested that a light lunch be provided at these gatherings.

Various Notes.

William Hay has sold his range of greenhouses on Dyer avenue, Cranston, to an unknown party, the negotiations being consummated through a broker. Mr. Hay will retain the management of the range, however, until spring. In the meantime, Mr. Hay has placed orders for the construction of two greenhouses on his farm near Oaklawn and work will be pushed upon them as rapidly as possible. One is to be 50x400 feet, while the second will be 30x150 feet.

Miss Florence A. Willard has been granted a permit to erect an addition to one of her greenhouses at 279 Massachusetts avenue.

Thomas Curley furnished the chrysanthemums used in decorating the State House on the occasion of the reception of the Honorary Commercial Commissioners from Japan by Governor Pothier. The decoration of Churchill House, for Thresher, of Central Falls, October 16, in honor of the services done for the industry by her husband, in connection with the tariff bill.

William H. Tarbox, of East Greenwich, has managed to keep his large field of dahlias looking well and protected them from frosts by the use of huge bonfires.

Although the atmosphere was somewhat cold, Mrs. Charles H. Fiske, of Greenwood, picked strawberries in the open field October 16.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

NEW YORK BELTING AND PACKING CO. LTD
91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

Trade is satisfactory here. Flowers are fairly plentiful, with a good demand. Funeral work is good, calling for large quantities of stock. Carnations are coming in freely and retail at 50 cents and 60 cents per dozen. Roses retail at $1.50 per dozen. Mums sell at from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Violets are in fairly good demand. They bring $1 per hundred blooms retail, and valley brings 75 cents to $1 per dozen.

Various Notes.

E. H. Chamberlain reports business last week as extra good. He has some nice ferns, palms and other pot plants at his store.

William P. Peirce is cutting some fine mums from his greenhouse on Elm street. He has cut about 500 Glory of Pacific. He is also showing some excellent carnations at his store on Union street.

William H. Davenport has some good ferns.

R. E. Nofftz has a first-rate window decoration at his store at all times. Weddings help out considerably just now.

R. H. Woodhouse has a splendid show of mums. They are now in full swing. Nearly all outdoor flowers are done. Another good frost will finish them. Steady firing is now the rule.

William F. Turner & Co. have won a great many prizes with their dahlias this season.

Peter Murray is able to be out now after his accident. His place is in fine shape.

H. A. Jahn is cutting some good mums at his Brock avenue place. W. L.

Eave plate and nailed on roof bars rotted out—wooden posts rotted out. House practically done for.

A WOODEN frame house to rack out of shape, rot at the eave, like this one—letting hot air out and cold air in—one costing many times as much in repairs as the smaller amount saved at first by building a cheap house.....

will it be a house built this way, with our Flat Iron Rafter and small roof bars, making a house that is light, strong, rigid and durable—unsurpassed as to productiveness, and with practically no outlay for repairs for years to come?

What are your losses under the single glass sash?

One man wrote us—"I have had three successive crops under double glass sash, have had zero weather and not a plant was affected."

Another—"Not a plant in my thirty beds was affected by zero weather." In each case, no boards or other coverings were used.

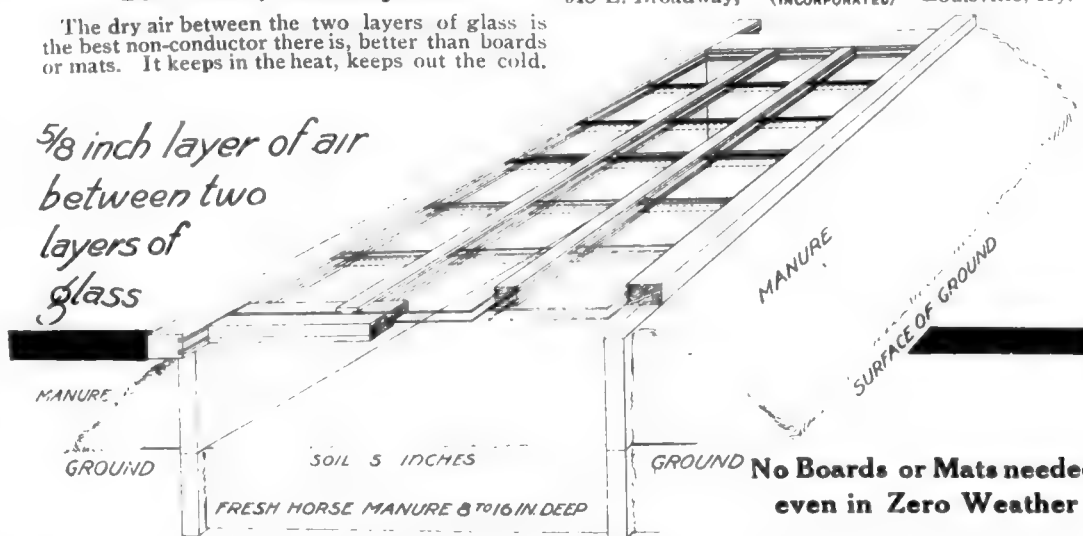

The man who grows to sell should test the Sunlight Sash. It is too profitable to overlook.

There is no covering or uncovering even in zero weather. This reduces the breakage of glass to a minimum, and the same number of hands can handle twice the number of beds.

Get earlier, hardier plants.

The dry air between the two layers of glass is the best non-conductor there is, better than boards or mats. It keeps in the heat, keeps out the cold.

THE AUTUMN

EXHIBITIONS

CHICAGO.

A large part of the credit for whatever measure of success the annual autumn exhibition at Chicago achieves this year must be given to the city's parks, for they responded nobly to the C. Q. D. call of the management. C. Q. D., it probably is needless to explain, is the wireless call that is translated "Come Quick, Distress," and it accurately describes the situation which confronted Manager Asmus forty-eight hours before the opening of the show, when he found the entries from trade exhibitors and private gardeners were less than he had expected. Perhaps it was the reaction following the big national show of last year, perhaps the $1 fee required to accompany each entry, except from private gardeners, had something to do with it, or perhaps the missing exhibitors each had a good individual reason, but nevertheless the number of exhibits on the opening day was not up to other years, the difference being particularly noticeable in the number of entries in cut chrysanthemum blooms. Of course, where a few dropped out, others did rather better than usual and their efforts are more apparent and thoroughly appreciated than ever on that account.

The matter of the entry fee of $1 is of interest. It is possible that it had no effect in reducing the number of entries, but it is the first time, except for the national show of last year, that an entry fee has been charged at Chicago, and probably the first time in the United States. The Coliseum, where the Chicago flower show is held, is occupied practically all winter long by business shows. For all except the flower show exhibitors pay a high rental for the space they occupy, as much as $1 per square foot for a week, or $200 for a space 10x20, in addition to which they go to a large expense to make attractive displays on the rented space. There seldom are premiums. For the flower show there is no expense save the value of the stock, and in each class the money premiums usually are as great as the market value of the stock exhibited. Yet it appears that an entry fee of $1, to say the least, does nothing toward fostering competition. If there were a charge for exhibiting, as in the case of practically every other business show, there simply would be no flower show at all.

Public Approves the Show.

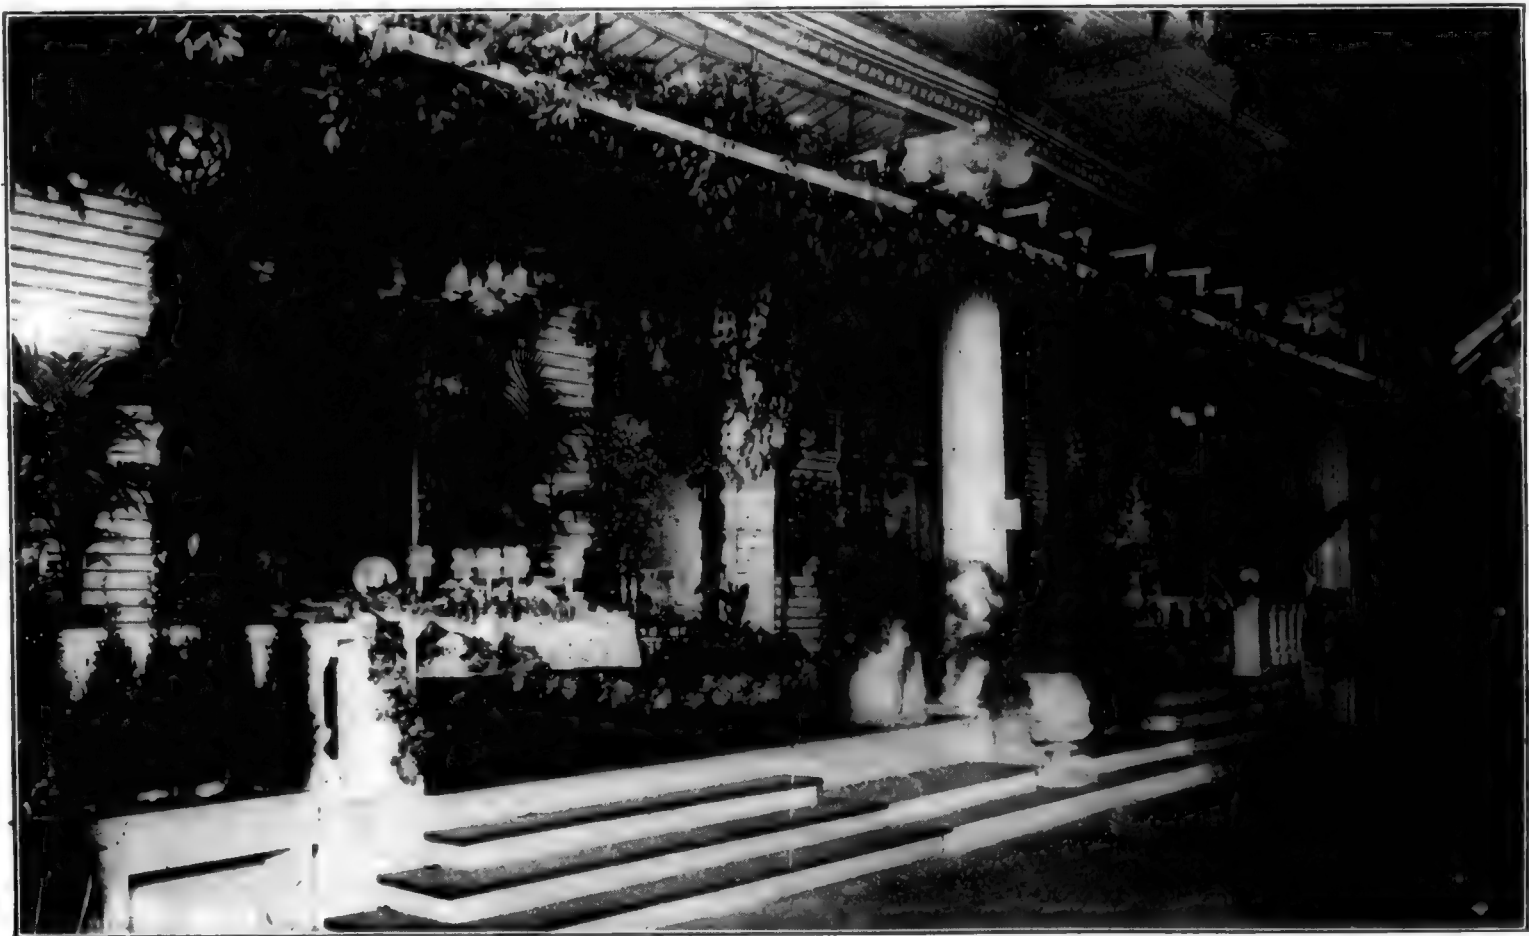

From a public standpoint this year's show is apparently giving rather better satisfaction than it usually has given, because of the excellence of the arrangement. Using a portion of the decorations which were found in the Coliseum, the management has added a carload or so of wild smilax and framed the entire picture with a circle of the ever-attractive retail booths. The plan is that of a Japanese garden and for its conception credit is due to H. J. Stockmans of the west parks, who not only conceived the scheme, but did much of its execution with his own men. The public considers the arrangement the best yet seen at a Chicago flower show and distinctly ahead of that of the big national show last year.

Lincoln park contributed a large quantity of decorative stock and the south parks sent not only a large quantity of palms, ferns and mums, but a long table of orchids in bloom, which are one of the special centers of attraction. John Cook, of the department of botany of the University of Chicago, also sent a fine group of plants. The George Wittbold Co. and Frank Oechslein also exhibited large groups of decorative material. Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, had a full line of palms, ferns and other decorative plants and their usual display of chrysanthemum pot plants, the only other exhibitor of mums in pots being Robert T. Mueller, gardener to A. S. Trude, who had entries in most of the classes. The C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, made a large exhibit of ferns in variety. The Schiller Estate had a group of specimen palms and Julius Rosenwald again sent down his big thuya. There was an abundance of stock for decorative effect.

The Big Chrysanthemums.

A large number of entries of big mums of earlier years are missing; there are fewer cut mums in competition than in any recent year. Poehlmann Bros. Co. made several entries, conspicuous among which was a splendid vase of Appleton, the equal of anything ever staged in the class for yellows. Mount Greenwood Cemetery, where W. N. Rudd presides, had an exceptionally fine vase of Virginia Poehlmann, showing not a trace of pink, and Virginia Poehlmann was the most generally shown white variety. E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., had an excellent vase of Beatrice May, white, and fine vases of Bonnaffon, O. H. Broomhead, Mary Mann, and Loiseau Rousseau, and exhibits in the two classes for single blooms shown both in vases and on mossed boards. The Hill Co. also had a

THE AUTUMN

EXHIBITIONS

CHICAGO.

A large part of the credit for whatever measure of success the annual autumn exhibition at Chicago achieves this year must be given to the city's parks, for they responded nobly to the C. Q. D. call of the management. C. Q. D., it probably is needless to explain, is the wireless call that is translated "Come Quick, Distress," and it accurately describes the situation which confronted Manager Asmus forty-eight hours before the opening of the show, when he found the entries from trade exhibitors and private gardeners were less than he had expected. Perhaps it was the reaction following the big national show of last year, perhaps the $1 fee required to accompany each entry, except from private gardeners, had something to do with it, or perhaps the missing exhibitors each had a good individual reason, but nevertheless the number of exhibits on the opening day was not up to other years, the difference being particularly noticeable in the number of entries in cut chrysanthemum blooms. Of course, where a few dropped out, others did rather better than usual and their efforts are more apparent and thoroughly appreciated than ever on that account.

The matter of the entry fee of $1 is of interest. It is possible that it had no effect in reducing the number of entries, but it is the first time, except for the national show of last year, that an entry fee has been charged at Chicago, and probably the first time in the United States. The Coliseum, where the Chicago flower show is held, is occupied practically all winter long by business shows. For all except the flower show exhibitors pay a high rental for the space they occupy, as much as $1 per square foot for a week, or $200 for a space 10x20, in addition to which they go to a large expense to make attractive displays on the rented space. There seldom are premiums. For the flower show there is no expense save the value of the stock, and in each class the money premiums usually are as great as the market value of the stock exhibited. Yet it appears that an entry fee of $1, to say the least, does nothing toward fostering competition. If there were a charge for exhibiting, as in the case of practically every other business show, there simply would be no flower show at all.

Public Approves the Show.

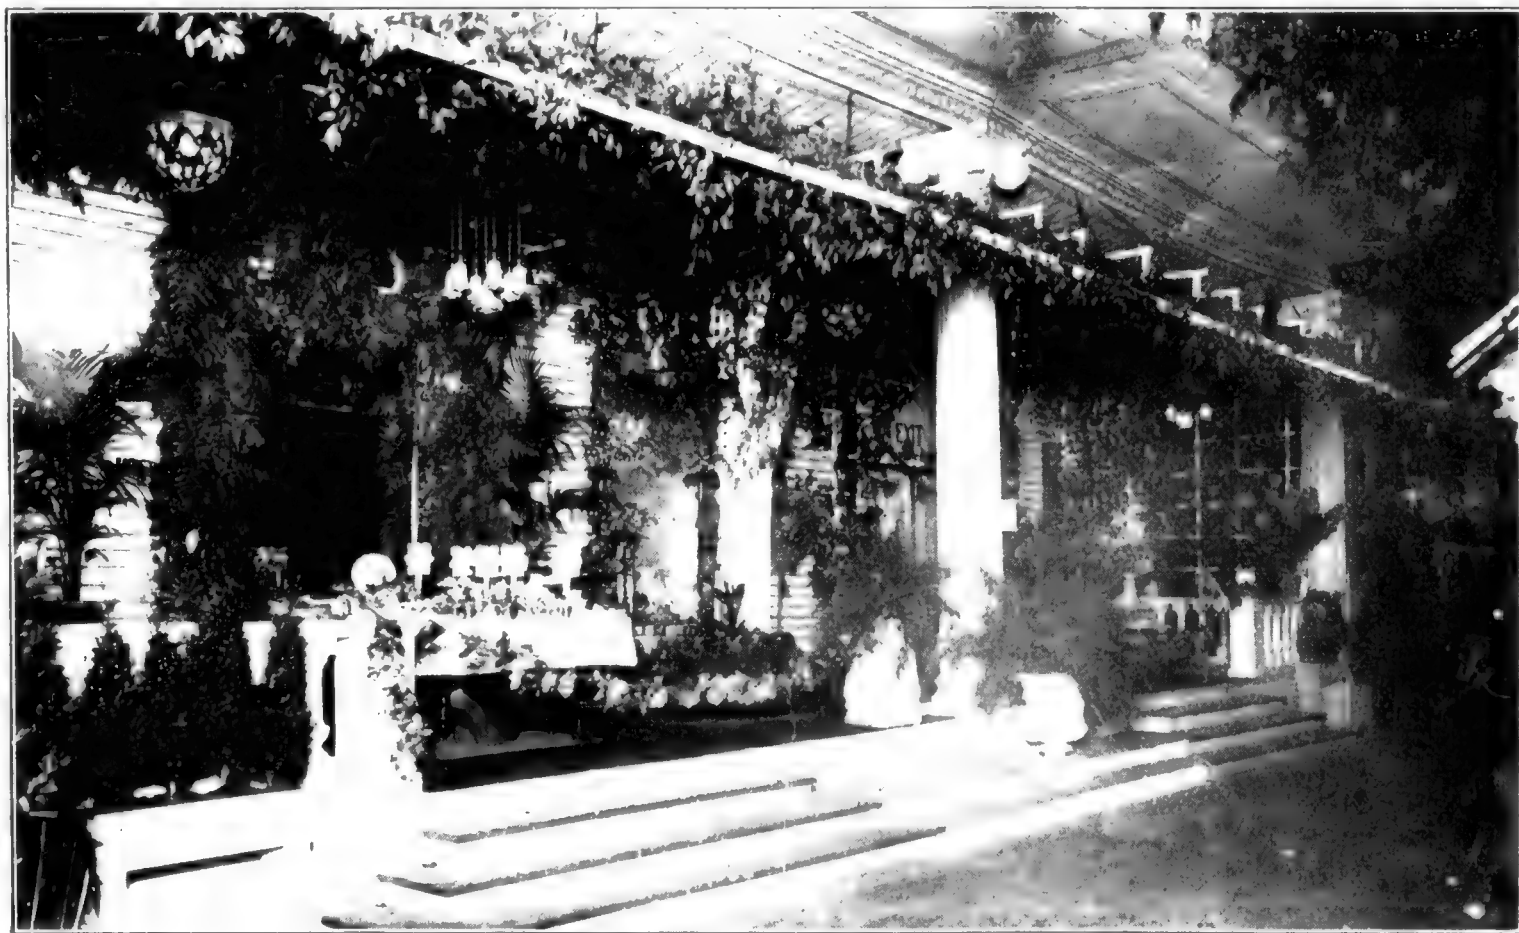

From a public standpoint this year's show is apparently giving rather better satisfaction than it usually has given, because of the excellence of the arrangement. Using a portion of the decorations which were found in the Coliseum, the management has added a carload or so of wild smilax and framed the entire picture with a circle of the ever-attractive retail booths. The plan is that of a Japanese garden and for its conception credit is due to H. J. Stockmans of the west parks, who not only conceived the scheme, but did much of its execution with his own men. The public considers the arrangement the best yet seen at a Chicago flower show and distinctly ahead of that of the big national show last year.

Lincoln park contributed a large quantity of decorative stock and the south parks sent not only a large quantity of palms, ferns and mums, but a long table of orchids in bloom, which are one of the special centers of attraction. John Cook, of the department of botany of the University of Chicago, also sent a fine group of plants. The George Wittbold Co. and Frank Oechslein also exhibited large groups of decorative material. Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, had a full line of palms, ferns and other decorative plants and their usual display of chrysanthemum pot plants, the only other exhibitor of mums in pots being Robert T. Mueller, gardener to A. S. Trude, who had entries in most of the classes. The C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, made a large exhibit of ferns in variety. The Schiller Estate had a group of specimen palms and Julius Rosenwald again sent down his big thuya. There was an abundance of stock for decorative effect.

The Big Chrysanthemums.

A large number of entries of big mums of earlier years are missing; there are fewer cut mums in competition than in any recent year. Poehlmann Bros. Co. made several entries, conspicuous among which was a splendid vase of Appleton, the equal of anything ever staged in the class for yellows. Mount Greenwood Cemetery, where W. N. Rudd presides, had an exceptionally fine vase of Virginia Poehlmann, showing not a trace of pink, and Virginia Poehlmann was the most generally shown white variety. E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., had an excellent vase of Beatrice May, white, and fine vases of Bonaffon, O. H. Broomhead, Mary Mann, and Loiseau Rousseau, and exhibits in the two classes for single blooms shown both in vases and on mossed boards. The Hill Co. also had a nice exhibit of pompons. On the opening day Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., staged only one exhibit, in the class for twenty-five varieties, one bloom of each.

The Retail Booths.

As always has been the case, the retail booths are the specially attractive feature to the public. It is strange how reluctant the retailers in other cities, and even in Chicago, are to take advantage of this opportunity to reach the public, when they see the crowds thronged about these exhibits. It seems the great advertising opportunity of the season, and the wonder is that the retailers do not elbow each other in their anxiety to secure space.

A little different plan has been adopted this year from that followed in previous seasons. There are this year four classes for booths, and most of the retailers who have entered, have done so in two classes, but none has entered in more. One class is for booths arranged with mantel decorations, another is for booths arranged with table decorations, a third is for booths arranged with wedding decorations, and the fourth is for booths in which the main feature is anything other than the foregoing. The booths may be rearranged each day and are judged each day, the highest average at the end of the six days to determine the disposition of the prizes, which are $100 and $65 in each of the four classes.

The E. Wienhoeber Co. made two entries, for table decorations and in the "any other" class. C. A. Samuelson entered two booths, for the table decoration and the any other class. Schiller, where Manager Asmus presides, entered the wedding decoration and mantel classes. A. Lange entered the wedding decoration and the any other, this last on the opening day being a Japanese tea room according excellently with the scheme of decoration for the show. J. F. Kidwell & Bro. entered for mantel decoration and in the class for any other, on the opening day staging a porch scene for the latter. The George Wittbold Co. entered in the any other class and carried off the award on the opening day with a vase of specimen mums and a bank of palms and ferns. Vaughan's Seed Store secured one of the booths for a display of vegetables, etc., and another was given over to the gentleman who instructs the public in potting plants.

The Nursery Exhibits.

The nurserymen came to the front much stronger than heretofore and, while their displays lack something from the spectacular standpoint, they are of great interest to the public. All the plants being labeled, the visitors are seen examining the tags and in many cases making notes, which indicates future orders for someone. The displays of the nurserymen occupy the entire annex and run over into the main hall. Those represented are the George Wittbold Co., Swain Nelson & Sons Co., Leesley Bros., Vaughan's Seed Store, Winterson's Seed Store and the Maywood Nursery Co. Axel Setterberg, the Rogers Park landscape architect, also has a booth in this department, showing shrubbery as well as landscape plans and photographs. The annex is laid out as a winter garden, and all the nursery exhibits are attractively staged in "snow." Evergreens and deciduous shrubs in practically every variety grown in this neighborhood are shown and in addition Wittbold and Winterson have winter window-boxes, and Winterson has a bulb bed, with the bulbs planted not so deeply that their identity is obscured.

In this section City Forester J. H. Prost delivers a nightly stereopticon lecture on trees and shrubs.

Roses.

On the opening day the class for 100 American Beauties was put on, the rest of the roses following on Wednesday. The Beauty class brought out the best competition of the show and as good a competition as ever has been seen on Beauties in this great Beauty center. There were seven entries, including magnificent lots from William Dittman, Poehlmann Bros. Co., George Reinberg, Bassett & Washburn and three from Peter Reinberg. The judges finally affixed the blue ribbon on the Bassett & Washburn entry, giving both second and third to Peter Reinberg.

The general rose display was put up Wednesday and left nothing to be desired. While the number of exhibitors was not unusually large, several made more than one entry in a class, so that there was as large a rose display as ever has been seen at a Chicago show, and the quality was superlatively fine. It is doubtful if better Killarney and Richmond ever have been exhibited anywhere in the west, and certainly no such My Maryland and White Killarney have ever before been staged in Chicago. The quality of the other varieties of the show was of exceptional character and the roses which were staged on an elevated platform at the south end of the hall drew a crush all day long.

The Awards.

The judges are John T. Temple, Davenport, Ia.; George B. Wiegand, Indianapolis, and C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park. Society ladies judged the retail displays. The awards to date are:

Charles Knopf Floral Co., Richmond, Ind., exhibited a seedling rose, pink, No. 1,000B, for the silver cup offered for new rose never before exhibited in this country, and for the cash premium offered for any variety not yet in commerce. The schedule provided that the same variety should not compete in both classes, so the judges disqualified them for the cup and gave them second in the other class, scoring the seedling seventy-five points.

These were rearranged and judged each day, the highest average for the five days to determine the disposition of the premiums. Tuesday's awards were: Mantel decoration, J. F. Kidwell & Co., first; Schiller estate, second.

each of the sixteen classes, except the one for five specimen plants in not less than 8-inch pots. Here R. T. Mueller, gardener to A. S. Trude, was first. Mr. Mueller was second in eight of the classes and third in one, Vaughan's Greenhouses being second as well as first for one specimen plant, white. They also were second as well as first on twelve plants grown to single stem.

Jottings.

George Reinberg staged a group of eight varieties of roses, a vase of catleyas and some asparagus, not for competition.

The attendance on the first two days was excellent, better than usual. While Secretary Burdett has had little material for his press work, he has received the usual liberal support accorded by the city papers and the public is responding most satisfactorily.

As the week progresses many additional features will be brought in and an artistic and financial success seems assured. The show lasts till Sunday night.

One of the features is a Japanese tea room at the north end of the hall, where appetizing refreshments are served. The tea room is a distinct addition to the show and one which it is hoped to make permanent.

The management, through long practice, has become marvelously efficient. From top to bottom, each individual in the management has become so familiar with the needs of each situation that a ten-thousand-dollar show is handled with the precision of professional showmen. Ed Hauswirth is handling the admissions, as usual.

After the judging of the mums had been completed the entry of E. G. Hill Co., which had been given first for twelve blooms bronze, was disqualified for failure to make proper entry. There were several protested awards because of time of entry.

John T. Temple is to serve as a judge at St. Louis next week.

A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill., put up a fine vase of his new carnation Sangamo on Wednesday.

The members of Suckling Pig Club have new and exceedingly appropriate badges, which are large enough so the supporters of this famous organization may be readily identified. The club will have a meeting later in the week.

Visitors.

The Chicago Florists' Club will entertain the visitors at a stag party on the second floor of the Coliseum annex Thursday evening, November 4, where there will be plenty of refreshments and a professional vaudeville program guaranteed to amuse. On the same evening the visiting ladies will be entertained at a thea-

ROCHESTER.

The first flower show of the Commercial Florists' Association opened at Convention hall Tuesday afternoon, November 2, with a display of floral wealth and beauty seldom seen at such exhibitions. Convention hall was one immense, undivided garden of beauty, and the visitor was guided along paths and walks amid tropical gardens, dense with palms and ferns, and beds of violets and roses; and masses of chrysanthemums, bouvardias and primulas which smiled at one as he passed from one glorious view to another still more beautiful.

At the rear of the hall, and reaching twenty feet toward the ceiling, a rock garden was constructed, from the top of which a cascade tossed and tumbled to the little lake below. The walls of the building were covered with scenic paintings, and from the center of the roof thousands of yards of southern smilax were gracefully festooned to the supporting columns.

To mention each exhibit separately would take a volume of many pages, but among the attractive and educational features were specimens from the herbarium of Conrad Vollertsen, consisting of about 200 plants grown in Monroe county, most of them native and all growing with cultivation. These specimens were so beautifully pressed and mounted, and covered with glass and framed, that they made a particularly attractive exhibit. A part of the famous Kimball orchid collection was shown by Mrs. W. S. Kimball. These were undoubtedly the most interesting and rarest of the many beautiful exhibits. One of the treasures of the collection was the Cypripedium Kimballianum, named in honor of William S. Kimball, and highly prized by the world's orchidists. The remarkable thing about this plant is that it is the first orchid discovered to be a natural hybrid, a discovery made with the microscope, by Professor Reichenbach, the greatest authority on orchids ever known. The plant was found in New Guinea and bought from the finders by Mr. Kimball. While the delicate orchids to the number of about fifty, among them the exceedingly rare, pure pink variety, Cattleya Bowringiana, and Cypripedium Harrisianum, a rare green variety, formed a considerable part of Mrs. Kimball's exhibit, the major part was a display of chrysanthemums. In the center was a section of American chrysanthemums, a number of the most beautiful varieties being grouped around the large, white President Taft, and the whole surmounted by the American flag. Surrounding the American section were groups of English, Australian and French chrysanthemums, with their respective flags above them. Among the choicest English blooms were the Glitter, a yellow with a sheen that does not belie the name; O. H. Broomhead, maroon; Benjamin Wells, yellow and burnt orange; Mrs. M. Thorne, yellow, and the Rose Pockett, aptly named. In the French section were, President Carnot, a large, straw yellow variety; the yellow Chrysanthemiste Montigny; the

Among other notable private collections were those of George Eastman, in charge of William Pirie; Hiram W. Sibley, Etienne Berry gardener; Mrs. Gilman N. Perkins, John Condie superintendent.

Mrs. F. F. Thompson, of Canandaigua, N. Y., presented an interesting collection of chrysanthemums through R. Ballantyne, gardener.

The method of exhibiting was entirely distinct from that of any flower show held in the past, the plan being to make the hall a great garden, rather than a series of small booths or tables containing individual exhibits, and the success of this idea is in a great measure due to Charles H. Vick, chairman of the general committee, assisted by George B. Hart, W. L. Keller, J. M. Keller, F. L. Keller, R. G. Salter, E. P. Wilse, A. T. Salter, C. J. Brown, F. W. Vick, William Pitkin, C. B. Ogston, F. R. Schlegel, H. B. Stringer and E. A. Osborne.

The private exhibitors included George Eastman, Mrs. William S. Kimball, Mrs. G. N. Perkins, Hiram W. Sibley, A. M. Lindsay, Warham Whitney, C. D. Bonbright and Mrs. F. F. Thomson, of Canandaigua. Mrs. Thomson was the only out-of-town private exhibitor.

The general plan for the decorations and landscape effects was prepared by Alling S. Deforest, landscape architect of this city, and it reflects great credit on his skill and artistic ability. There were no premiums, the purpose being to stimulate the public interest in flowers by means of an attractive decorative effect rather than by competition between growers of cut flowers.

LENOX, MASS.

The ninth annual show of the Lenox Horticultural Society, which opened October 26, was decidedly the best in its history. Never was competition keener or exhibits of a higher quality. The only drawback was the smallness of the hall, which prevented the exhibits being seen to good advantage. Some arrangement should if possible be made another year to secure additional floor space.

The keenest interest was taken in the competition for the Dreer cup for the best group of plants arranged for effect. This has to be won twice to become the property of the exhibitor. F. Heeremans and Edwin Jenkins had already secured a first each, and this year was expected to settle the supremacy of the contestants. There were four entries and after long consideration the judges awarded the cup to F. Heeremans, gardener to W. D. Sloane, for a beautiful group most artistically arranged. Palms, crotons, lilies, gypsophila, begonias, gardenias, valley and ferns were mostly used. S. P. Shotter, Allan Jenkins gardener, was second and Edwin Jenkins, gardener to Girard Foster, third. The latter had an archway resting on a base surrounding a miniature lake and was both original and charming. Many visitors admired this group the most. Fourth went to Miss John Sloane, A. J. Loveless gardener, who used orchids freely.

There was a bewildering display of chrysanthemums of a quality rarely seen, even at the best eastern shows. The best specimen plants from Mrs. John E. Parsons were marvels of cultural skill, carrying 350 to 400 blooms each. W. D. Sloane also had some splendid specimens.

Jottings.

George Reinberg staged a group of eight varieties of roses, a vase of cat-tleyas and some asparagus, not for competition.

The attendance on the first two days was excellent, better than usual. While Secretary Burdett has had little material for his press work, he has received the usual liberal support accorded by the city papers and the public is responding most satisfactorily.

As the week progresses many additional features will be brought in and an artistic and financial success seems assured. The show lasts till Sunday night.

One of the features is a Japanese tea room at the north end of the hall, where appetizing refreshments are served. The tea room is a distinct addition to the show and one which it is hoped to make permanent.

The management, through long practice, has become marvelously efficient. From top to bottom, each individual in the management has become so familiar with the needs of each situation that a ten-thousand-dollar show is handled with the precision of professional showmen. Ed Hauswirth is handling the admissions, as usual.

After the judging of the mums had been completed the entry of E. G. Hill Co., which had been given first for twelve blooms bronze, was disqualified for failure to make proper entry. There were several protested awards because of time of entry.

John T. Temple is to serve as a judge at St. Louis next week.

A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill., put up a fine vase of his new carnation Sangamo on Wednesday.

The members of Suckling Pig Club have new and exceedingly appropriate badges, which are large enough so the supporters of this famous organization may be readily identified. The club will have a meeting later in the week.

Visitors.

The Chicago Florists' Club will entertain the visitors at a stag party on the second floor of the Coliseum annex Thursday evening, November 4, where there will be plenty of refreshments and a professional vaudeville program guaranteed to amuse. On the same evening the visiting ladies will be entertained at a thea-

ROCHESTER.

The first flower show of the Commercial Florists' Association opened at Convention hall Tuesday afternoon, November 2, with a display of floral wealth and beauty seldom seen at such exhibitions. Convention hall was one immense, undivided garden of beauty, and the visitor was guided along paths and walks amid tropical gardens, dense with palms and ferns, and beds of violets and roses; and masses of chrysanthemums, bouvardias and primulas which smiled at one as he passed from one glorious view to another still more beautiful.

Fourteenth Annual Show.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held its fourteenth annual show October 27 and 28.

The noticeable feature was the lack of groups of plants, as compared with previous years, but the cut flower exhibits more than compensated for anything lacking in this respect.

The weather was splendid and the attendance on the second day constituted a record for this society.

In the special exhibits, outside of the competitive prizes, Chas. H. Totty set up a table of single chrysanthemums and new varieties of the large flowered sorts, among which were Mrs. David Syme, Gladys Blackburn, R. F. Felton and other splendid varieties. He was also awarded a certificate of merit for Alternanthera Jewel, which is apparently an excellent novelty.

Lager & Hurrell had a splendid table of mixed orchids.

John Giatius exhibited his new fern.

Harry Turner, superintendent for Howard Gould, of Port Washington, received a special certificate for his new celosia.

The rose exhibits were more numerous and the flowers finer than had been the case for the last five years.

Owing to the death of A. K. Whitney, of Morristown, and J. Crosby Brown, of Orange, exhibits usually coming from their estates were missing.

Among the exhibits not for competition were five excellent specimens of Boston ferns from C. A. Work, Alex. Mulmichel, gardener.

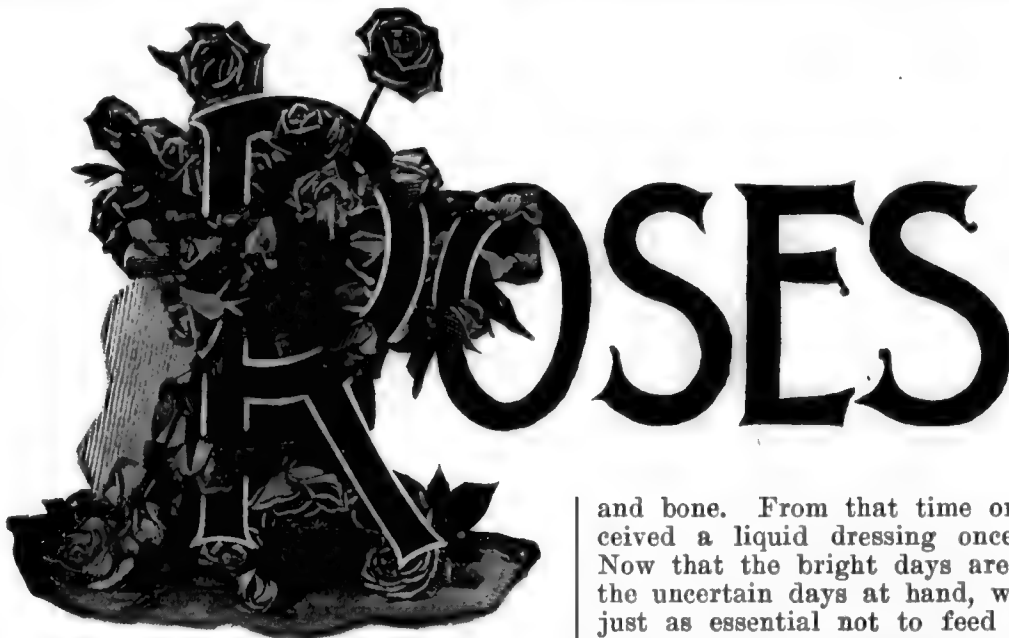

The judges were: Eugene Dailedouze, Peter Duff and Robert Simpson, and their work gave good satisfaction.

The list of awards is as follows:

Chrysanthemums.—Thirty-six flowers in six varieties, six of each, Pierson U-Bar prize, Wm. Duckham, superintendent estate of D. W. James, first; Round Top estate, C. Barbauer gardener, second.

Eighteen flowers in three varieties, six of each, Dr. D. H. McAlpin, John Downing gardener, first; O. H. Kahn, James Fraser superintendent, second.

Twelve flowers in twelve varieties, in one vase, Dr. D. H. McAlpin, first; O. H. Kahn, (Concluded on page 35.)

RHEA REID.

Rhea Reid is exceptionally good with us this season. Last year we had the plants on raised benches in an even-span house, and we were continually bothered with the foliage falling.

Great care was taken this year in the selection of wood, which was gathered about February 20. The bottom heat in the propagating bench was carried at 65 to 70 degrees, and the house temperature at 60 degrees. With a good bottom heat the sand dried more rapidly, thereby preventing the cuttings from damping off.

At the time we benched the stock the plants were growing vigorously in 4-inch pots. Two benches were planted to young stock and the third bench was planted to two-year-old stock, cut back with care.

This season the stock was planted on raised benches in a three-quarter-span house, with the long span to the south. The growth they are making is beyond our expectations. We are having no trouble at all with falling of the foliage, though at the same time last season the plants were virtually without foliage.

The plants were benched June 20. Starting August 1, they were given a light mulch of sheep manure. September 1 they were given a dressing of blood and bone. From that time on they received a liquid dressing once a week. Now that the bright days are over and the uncertain days at hand, we think it just as essential not to feed them, for we fear that overfeeding during dark weather will cause the foliage to turn yellow and the buds to blast. As to watering, we have kept them on the wet side, with a night temperature of 62 degrees.

The house holds 1,200 plants, and for the last month the daily cut has averaged 200, with stems from two to three feet long.

AT THE EDGELY ROSE RANGE.

Reproductions are here given of two photographs which were taken at the rose houses of The Floral Exchange, at Edgely, Pa. One of the illustrations shows a house that was built last year, on the ridge and furrow system, with a one-piece gutter which was constructed from 3x8 inch cypress according to a plan designed by Harry Simpson, of The Floral Exchange's staff. This house is 100x200 and contains 17,000 Killarneys.

The other picture, though not distinct enough to mean much at first glance, is unique enough to be interesting. It shows a section of the roof of a new house designed and erected by Mr. Simpson, without side post, eave plate or curved bar. "The photo," says Mr. Simpson, "was taken from the tower of a tank, 100 feet above the house. The shadow of the tank appears in the picture. The house is planted chiefly with My Maryland roses, some of which are dimly seen. Certain lines in the picture indicate the method of tying the house together. This house is 64x228 and contains 12,000 plants."

BEGONIA INCARNATA.

Begonia incarnata is a wonderfully floriferous and attractive winter blooming begonia; not a few good growers prefer it to Lorraine. The improved or grandiflora type, referred to some years ago in the REVIEW as originated with Charles Sander, Brookline, Mass., is vastly superior to the ordinary type. It is surprising that some wide-awake commercial grower has not worked up a large stock of this and placed it on the market in adequate quantities. It is a vigorous grower, propagates with the greatest ease, requires less warmth than Lorraine at all stages of growth, and from Christmas to February is a perfect mass of its beautiful light pink flowers. Plants in 6-inch pots should be salable. Such can be easily had from cuttings rooted in February or March. Give your incarnatas a house not warmer than 50 degrees at night, full sun, plenty of water, liquid manure once a week, and you will have capital plants for Christmas and January sales. C.

[The REVIEW would like to hear from anyone who has stock to offer of Sander's improved form of B. incarnata.]

CYCLAMEN MITE.

I am sending you a sample of cyclamen leaves. I grow about 200 cyclamen plants from seeds, partly imported and partly bought here, and all from the most celebrated cyclamen growers. I have good luck with them till they get into their flowering pots. I use a compost of leaf-mold, cow manure, rotted sod and sand. After the nights get cool, the temperature often goes down at night to 45 degrees until we get steady firing about November 1, when I can get a steady night temperature of 60 degrees. About eighty per cent of the plants have twisted, wrinkled leaves, starting from the corn or bulb. Is it the cyclamen mite? If so, what is the cure for it? I have grown cyclamen with good success for the last fifteen years until three seasons ago, when I came to grow them here in Massachusetts. The pots are plunged in tobacco stems and I have watered them with nicotine water and fumigated them. I can see no thrip on them. W. L. P.

The leaves forwarded show unmistakable evidences of the dreaded cyclamen mite, which each season ruins so many batches of plants. Having tried every imaginable remedy, I am bound to confess that I have failed to discover any remedy for this trouble. Many good growers in your state are each year obliged to throw away their entire batch of plants, in spite of every effort to successfully combat it. I regret that I can hold out no promise of relief in your case, and can only advise throwing away the plants, which will be unsalable if kept until they bloom, as most of the flowers will come deformed, and utilize the space vacated for some other crop. C. W.

THRIPS ON POINSETTIAS.

We are sending you by express a sample stalk of poinsettia, cut at our greenhouses, the end of which is diseased, hardened and worthless. It seems to be almost petrified, it is so hard and dry. Will you kindly advise what the trouble is, and the remedy? H. & O.

Thrips are undoubtedly the cause of the hardening and drying of the ends of your poinsettias. The same trouble has been experienced in other places this season, probably due to the long continued dry spell experienced. We had not noticed this pest on poinsettias before the present season, but it gets its work in almost unknown to us. As poinsettias are injured by anything approaching heavy fumigation, we would advise spraying the affected tops with a nicotine solution. One application will not suffice, but if persisted in daily for a week most of the thrips should be killed. C. W.

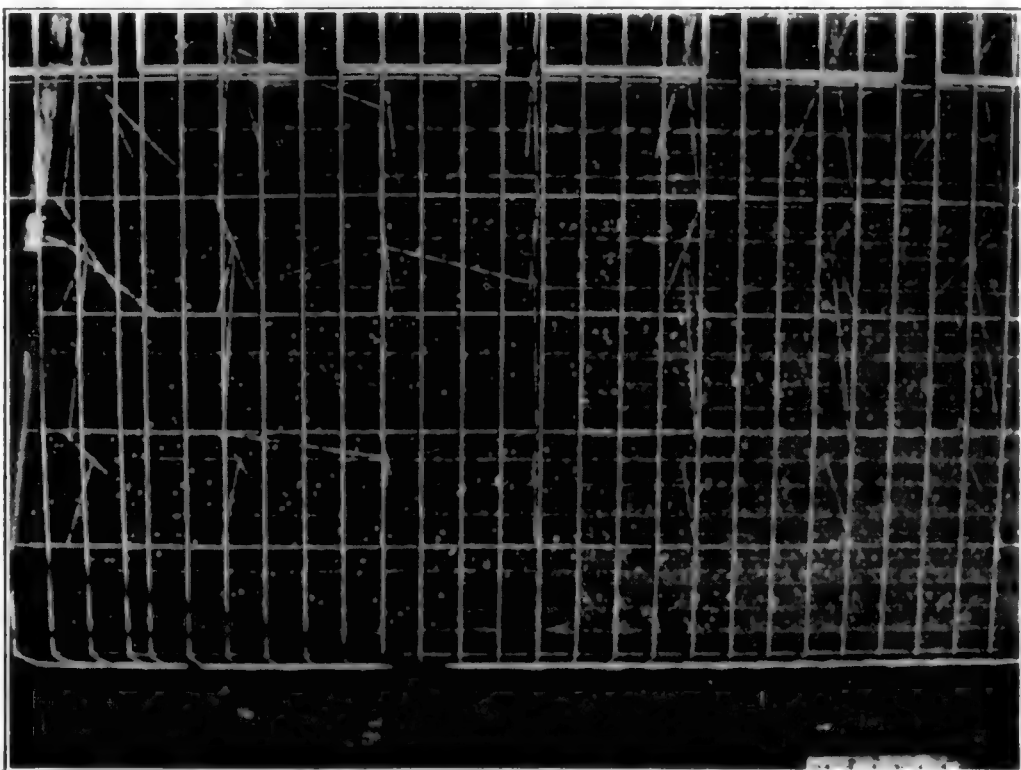

ASPECT FOR HOUSES.

I have a piece of land between a main road and a railroad, running not quite directly north and south, but a little west of north. A sidetrack from the railroad runs across the west end of the tract, dividing it into two parts, the larger to the south. How should I set a range of greenhouses to get the best aspect? G. R.

To get the full benefit of the sun, the houses ought to run east and west; that is, they should face the south. There may be conditions which may make this arrangement impossible, such as a heavy slope to the north. By running your houses from main road to main railroad you have the ideal aspect, if the ground is suitable for this arrangement. RIBES.

One of the illustrations shows a house that was built last year, on the ridge and furrow system, with a one-piece gutter which was constructed from 3x8 inch cypress according to a plan designed by Harry Simpson, of The Floral Exchange's staff. This house is 100x200 and contains 17,000 Killarneys.

The other picture, though not distinct enough to mean much at first glance, is unique enough to be interesting. It shows a section of the roof of a new house designed and erected by Mr. Simpson, without side post, eave plate or curved bar. "The photo," says Mr. Simpson, "was taken from the tower of a tank, 100 feet above the house. The shadow of the tank appears in the pic ture. The house is planted chiefly with My Maryland roses, some of which are dimly seen. Certain lines in the picture indicate the method of tying the house together. This house is 64x228 and contains 12,000 plants."

BEGONIA INCARNATA.

Begonia incarnata is a wonderfully floriferous and attractive winter blooming begonia; not a few good growers prefer it to Lorraine. The improved or grandiflora type, referred to some years ago in the REVIEW as originated with Charles Sander, Brookline, Mass., is vastly superior to the ordinary type. It is surprising that some wide-awake commercial grower has not worked up a large stock of this and placed it on the market in adequate quantities. It is a vigorous grower, propagates with the greatest ease, requires less warmth than Lorraine at all stages of growth, and from Christmas to February is a perfect mass of its beautiful light pink flowers. Plants in 6-inch pots should be salable. Such can be easily had from cuttings rooted in February or March. Give your incarnatas a house not warmer than 50 degrees at night, full sun, plenty of water, liquid manure once a week, and you will have capital plants for Christmas and January sales. C.

[The REVIEW would like to hear from anyone who has stock to offer of Sander's improved form of B. incarnata.]

CYCLAMEN MITE.

I am sending you a sample of cyclamen leaves. I grow about 200 cyclamen plants from seeds, partly imported and partly bought here, and all from the most celebrated cyclamen growers. I have good luck with them till they get into their flowering pots. I use a compost of leaf-mold, cow manure, rotted soil and sand. After the nights get cool, the temperature often goes down at night to 45 degrees until we get steady firing about November 1, when I can get a steady night temperature of 60 degrees. About eighty per cent of the plants have twisted, wrinkled leaves, starting from the corn or bulb. Is it the cyclamen mite? If so, what is the cure for it? I have grown cyclamen with good success for the last fifteen years until three seasons ago, when I came to grow them here in Massachusetts. The pots are plunged in tobacco stems and I have watered them with nicotine water and fumigated them. I can see no thrip on them. W. L. P.

The leaves forwarded show unmistakable evidences of the dreaded cyclamen mite, which each season ruins so many batches of plants. Having tried every imaginable remedy, I am bound to confess that I have failed to discover any remedy for this trouble. Many good growers in your state are each year obliged to throw away their entire batch of plants, in spite of every effort to successfully combat it. I regret that I can hold out no promise of relief in your case, and can only advise throwing away the plants, which will be unsalable if kept until they bloom, as most of the flowers will come deformed, and utilize the space vacated for some other crop. C. W.

THRIPS ON POINSETTIAS.

We are sending you by express a sample stalk of poinsettia, cut at our greenhouses, the end of which is diseased, hardened and worthless. It seems to be almost petrified, it is so hard and dry. Will you kindly advise what the trouble is, and the remedy? H. & O.

Thrips are undoubtedly the cause of the hardening and drying of the ends of your poinsettias. The same trouble has been experienced in other places this season, probably due to the long continued dry spell experienced. We had not noticed this pest on poinsettias before the present season, but it gets its work in almost unknown to us. As poinsettias are injured by anything approaching heavy fumigation, we would advise spraying the affected tops with a nicotine solution. One application will not suffice, but if persisted in daily for a week most of the thrips should be killed. C. W.

ASPECT FOR HOUSES.

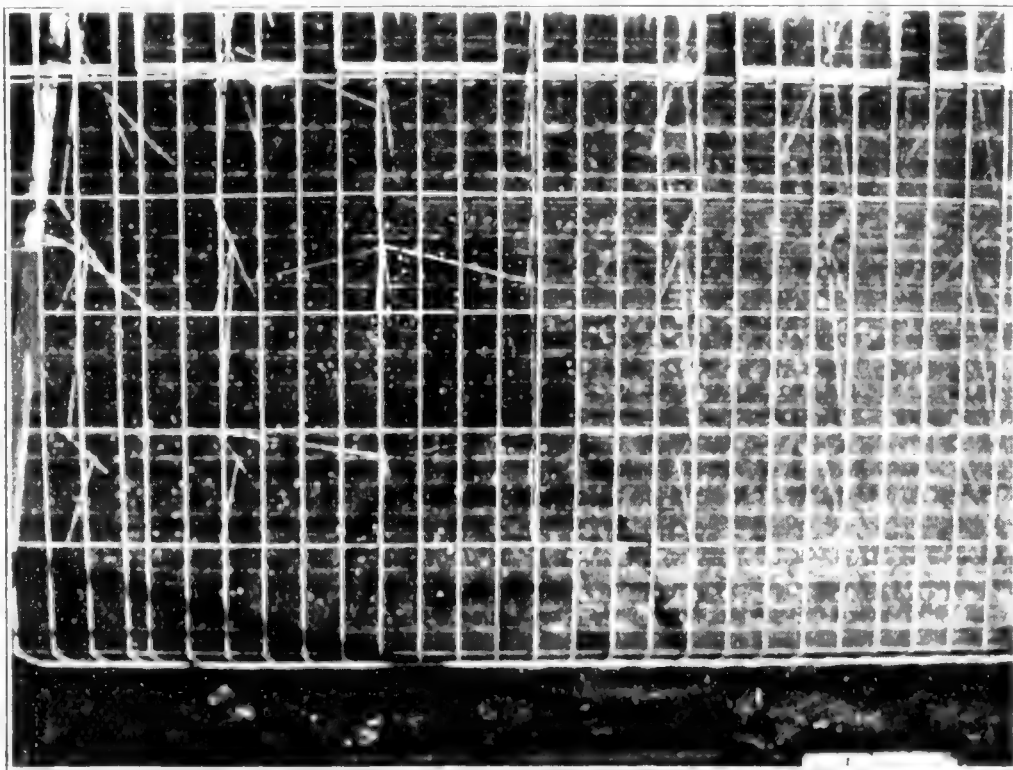

I have a piece of land between a main road and a railroad, running not quite directly north and south, but a little west of north. A sidetrack from the railroad runs across the west end of the tract, dividing it into two parts, the larger to the south. How should I set a range of greenhouses to get the best aspect? G. R.

To get the full benefit of the sun, the houses ought to run east and west; that is, they should face the south. There may be conditions which may make this arrangement impossible, such as a heavy slope to the north. By running your houses from main road to main railroad you have the ideal aspect, if the ground is suitable for this arrangement.

JUST A FEW SUGGESTIONS.

Where a florist's work in designing or decorating is limited to funeral work, a new flower, or a new idea or suggestion, is welcome to relieve the monotony. Instead of keeping only the designs most salable, as the pillow, wreath, cross and anchor, when you buy in another stock include two or three different designs new to you and your general trade, using judgment as to size and the amount to expend. Often an order may be more quickly obtained, or an indifferent customer pleased, if you offer a new design, such as a broken column, a basket or whatever is not customarily used. Of course, each must decide according to his knowledge of the trade. This gives one a new interest and greater ability in his work.

When growing to help supply your own trade, it is most certainly an advantage to have a number of different ferns, flowers and foliage grown expressly for your designing, either in pots, flats or beds. In some places it is almost impossible to keep a good pot of anything to cut from, and arrangements must be made to satisfy both plant buyer and maker up. A good grower can soon make empty space pay, where there is ready sale.

Suppose you are using flowers commonly on the market, then grow baby primroses, cyclamens, sweet alyssum, forget-me-not, various ferns, asparagus, adiantums, and nephrolepis, but not every variety of the latter, only those you find most practical.

The leaf-mold to be had in many places near hardwood groves is just the right kind to mix in with your fern soil to make it grow paying plants.

The soft gray of Asparagus decumbens, with its flexible stems or vines, is admirable for use with carnations or other flowers having gray-green foliage. With pink of the paler sorts it is charming, and can be more readily twined or arranged than smilax.

English ivy makes a good showing for a touch or main filling in pieces. So do the leaves of cyclamens, specimens of which may be chosen from a lot of seedlings that are beauties. Rose of Marienthal, having a broad silver band about a dark center, is one of the best. Some of the salmons have a fine dark leaf of rich color even when slightly marked. Galax is also good, but in many places has been overdone and finds little sale.

The cyclamen leaves are perhaps best for touches to finish either other foliage or flowers, as a broken column of ivy, using a few of the silver-banded leaves in a cluster at the base, a wreath of the heavier adiantums with a rosette or two, or a simulated spray of well marked cyclamen leaves, having only the one sort of leaf, not mixing the blotched with the banded. Wreaths or any simple design, filled in rather closely with all white, pink or rose-pink carnations or well opened Beauties, would look well with a bunch of the same leaves.

At places where there is a variety of occasion for your use of flower and foliage, the work is a great deal more interesting, but there are undoubtedly many more towns where such trade could be worked up by degrees, when the size and prosperity of those places permit.

A centerpiece decoration recently seen at a birthday surprise was a garland of pink roses, cut to three and six-inch stems, laid flat upon a large center of maiden-hair, broken short from the bases of the fronds and having the points spread outward, like rich embroidery over the white linen. Something similar seemed particularly appropriate for wedding breakfasts or pre-nuptial parties, being simple, yet giving the board a festive air.

SAMUELSON'S NEW STORE.

The accompanying illustrations give a rather inadequate idea of the attractiveness of the new store of C. A. Samuelson, at 2132 and 2134 Michigan boulevard, Chicago, where a formal opening was held last week.

Every once in a while a landlord gets the idea that, because a tenant has stayed with him many years with constantly advancing rents, the tenant cannot possibly move. This was the case with Mr. Samuelson's landlord. The flower store had been located in the Lexington hotel for so long the owner of the property thought Mr. Samuelson was running it for the express benefit of the landlord, but just about the time notice arrived of another boost in rents at the expiration of the lease an opportunity was presented to get the two stores in the building almost directly opposite on a long time lease and at a reasonable rental. Mr. Samuelson at once closed the deal and has been all summer fitting up the new store. He spared neither thought nor expense to make it everything that a first-class flower store should be. The main store even had two complete ceilings put in, the first one not giving the desired effect, which necessitated stripping it to the lath.

The walls of the store are decorated in green, with mahogany, marble and brass for the fixtures and with elaborate ground glass electroliers for the lights. As in all modern flower stores, there is no counter, handsome wall cases being provided for the display of pottery, ribbons and other articles, and marble-topped brass tables, which can be moved about at will, being used for made-up plant arrangements, vases of flowers, or any articles it is wished to push. For the opening the wide show window was decorated with oak leaves, large Appleton mums and baskets of yellow pompons. Tall vases of cut flowers were advantageously disposed around the room, a notable one being of My Maryland rose, sent with the compliments of Poehlmann Bros. Co. The main feature, however, was a large table of cattleya plants in splendid bloom. The ice-box for the display of cut stock stands at one side near the front of the store.

Just at the rear of the ice-box a passage leads to the telephone booths and to the store next door, which has been fitted up as a demonstration room. It is richly carpeted and the walls are lined with display cases and shelving for what is possibly the largest line of pottery shown in any flower store in the country, with brass receptacles and an infinite variety of baskets. A special feature is the line of Copenhagen pottery, of curious design and beautiful coloring. The lighting here also is a feature.

During the opening there were three table decorations in the demonstration room, the central one being of cut cyclamen bloom in china waterways, with a centerpiece of English hothouse grapes. It is intended to at all times have something on view here to attract flower buyers.

At the rear of the demonstration room is a storeroom for the general stock of baskets, and back of this, but connecting with the main store, is a large conservatory, at present filled with the palms used on decorations, but to be used at holiday times for blooming plants. Back of the main store are two work rooms, well lighted by skylights, and Mr. Samuelson can congratulate himself that he not only is now located where he can be free from the vexations which go with short-time leases, but where he has much better facilities than ever before in his career.

During the days of his formal opening he welcomed hundreds of visitors and gave each one a souvenir in the shape of an imported German china pot and saucer containing one of the ferns used for dishes.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Calendulas.

Of late years bunches of calendulas have been seen in the windows of many of the flower stores during late winter and early spring, and the color of the orange-colored variety, Orange King, is a popular one. If a piece of bench is now at disposal, the present is a suitable time to make a sowing. The seed should be sown rather thinly; individual plants a foot apart each way are sufficiently thick. A cool house, kept about 45 degrees at night, grows calendulas well.

Canterbury Bells.

For Easter Canterbury bells are now extremely popular, and certainly well bloomed plants of the hose in hose, or single varieties, are handsome. Plants in the field are now strong, having doubled in size within the last few weeks. In the more rigorous northern states Canterbury bells cannot be relied upon to winter outdoors, even if protected, and it is better to carry in coldframes and plant out in April. To return to the pot culture of these, some of the strongest stock should be potted forthwith and, after potting, may be carried in a cold pit or frame for some weeks. It is better to subject the plants to a few freezings before starting them in gentle heat early in the new year. For Memorial day trade, Canterbury bells for cutting are useful. It is easy holding a batch back for that date.

Mignonette.

No fire heat is necessary for mignonette yet, except on frosty nights. It is one of the plants which succeed better where as little fire heat as possible is used, 40 degrees at night being a suitable winter minimum. If the earliest growths which ran up to a flower were pinched back, the resultant breaks should be coming away nicely now. Mignonette wants a good, generous water supply, but the beds or benches should dry out tolerably between waterings. Keep the surface soil stirred. Every stirring means the liberation of more food for the plants. The ventilators will not require closing entirely, except on the coldest nights.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

Plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine which have been grown in a moderately warm house—and this begonia likes a fair amount of heat—are now quite nicely in flower, the earliest ones being sufficiently advanced to make them quite desirable for the store windows. We hope the necessary supports were given the plants before they commenced to open their flowers. Often in the rush of other duties this important matter is laid over until a more convenient season, and, as a consequence, what should have been pretty and shapely plants are hanging over the pots and pans and will never be as salable as if the staking had been done six weeks earlier.

As the plants get a fair number of flowers expanded we like to give them a lower temperature; one averaging 50 to 52 degrees at night suits them perfectly. The flowers opened in cooler quarters have more substance and the whole plant becomes more sturdy than when kept in strong heat. Lorraines require no shade whatever now. The plants grown without it are tougher and far better fitted to withstand the more arid conditions of ordinary dwelling houses than such as are held in shade and heat.

Antirrhinums.

The early chrysanthemums, such as Pacific, Monrovia, Polly Rose, Halliday, October Frost and others, are now all cut and bench space they have been occupying should not be allowed to lie idle. There is no need to clear out the mum compost and refill for such crops as antirrhinums. Give the benches a good dressing of well decayed manure, that from cows being preferable if procurable, and spade or fork it over thoroughly. The antirrhinums planted in this will quickly start into active growth and in late winter will furnish a fine crop of spikes. Do not overwater the newly planted stock. Frequently scratch over the surface soil and encourage them in every possible way to get a good start before the short winter days arrive.

Plants set out in early fall are showing a disposition to flower. Just now there is but little profit in them and it will be better to keep them pinched back so that a crop will come along for the Christmas holidays, when flowers are worth several times their present selling value.

Chrysanthemum Stock.

Without desiring to trespass on Mr. Totty's special department, we should like to say a word on the carrying over of chrysanthemum stock. Far too often this is given but scant attention. How often do we see pots and boxes stored along the sides of the paths, below the benches or in any old out-of-the-way place, and kept there until near the propagating season! How anyone can carry stock over in this slipshod fashion and expect good results to follow, baffles comprehension.

The ideal place for mum stock is on a bench or benches in a house held about 40 degrees at night, where the plants will be close to the light. A violet temperature answers well for them. Some growers may claim that this is so much bench space wasted, seeing that there is no crop to cut from it. The up-to-date grower knows full well that strong, succulent cuttings in abundance mean much finer plants and flowers, which will easily pay for the little bench space allotted prior to propagating. If a bench cannot be spared, use coldframes which can be rendered practically frost-proof. We know quite a few growers who plant all their stock in this way and claim that they get stronger cuttings under this plan than by growing in benches. Either one plan or the other should be adopted. Get the stock all together, label it plainly, and when you want cuttings you will have them of first quality and in any quantity.

Bedding Geraniums.

In the northern states, cuttings of the ordinary bedding geraniums should now be rooting. Hold them on the dry side; in fact, they should only have sufficient water to prevent shriveling. You do not want to start them into active growth yet. It is needlessly early to do so and, furthermore, bench space is at something of a premium at this time. Pick off decaying foliage; pull out any damped off cuttings; keep the stock in the full sun and do not play the hose over them when damping down the house. Geraniums want a cool house and an abundance of fresh air to keep them stocky and free from mold.

Myosotis.

There are a number of small crops which seem trifling and inconsequential in themselves. One of these is myosotis. The demand for bunches of these in late winter and spring is quite good, and it pays many a country florist to plant a few along the edges of the benches containing snapdragons, stocks or other crops. You have no doubt remembered to propagate some of your favorite strains of myosotis, and as you clear away the mums and plant in other crops do not forget an edging of forget-me-not. It is indeed surprising how many months these will give you flowers, provided you keep them free from aphids and do not allow seeds to form on them.

AN AFTERNOON CALL.

The front door opened of itself, quite mysteriously, the surprised visitor thought, not seeing the sturdy little legs that disappeared behind it. A sweet-faced lady was saying farewell to some friends in the entry. "Yes," she said, turning to the newcomer after they had gone, "Miss Dorothy Gordon is at home." Up a short flight of steps to a high, well-lighted room on the right, with glass roof like a studio or a greenhouse, the visitor stood in the presence of Miss Dorothy Gordon.

Miss Gordon was attired in Quaker gray, blue tinted, as is the custom of the debutantes of the dianthus family. She looked the picture of health, her rose-pink complexion contrasting brilliantly with her sober garb; her appearance of robust health spoke eloquently of awakening with the birds, retiring at sunset, plenty of fresh air and wholesome food, with, possibly to the imaginative mind, the suggestion of boating and tennis.

Miss Gordon was not one whit less courteous when she discovered that her caller was not a society beau but was simply a newspaper correspondent. She spoke in glowing terms of the kindness of her adopted father, Mr. Heacock, and the sensible manner in which he brought her up, of the debut at the Philadelphia Florists' Club, November 2, and of the many other swell floral parties to which she had been invited. The visitor left with a glow of honest admiration for Miss Gordon and the fervent hope that her coming-out parties would be a series of triumphant successes. PHIL.

ASTER PLANTS TURNING YELLOW

I have seen it intimated that the seed used may have something to do with causing aster plants to turn yellow, but I doubt the correctness of that idea. I have examined hundreds of diseased plants this year and have invariably found that some insect had been at work in the stump of the plant. By shaving off the roots until the bark of the stump is reached, I find traces of insect work similar to the paths made by wood borers. I think some insect had deposited its eggs in the plant when it was young and tender; these eggs developed and the young feeding on the plant caused it to turn yellow.

I found instances where two plants had been set together by mistake and one developed fine blooms while the other turned yellow. This could not have been caused by soil or weather conditions, as the plants stood so the roots were one clump. I found little difference in the percentage of plants turned yellow on heavily enriched soil or on soil that had not been fertilized at all; nor was there any perceptible difference in the percentage on plants started in the hotbed and those sown in the open ground and allowed to grow without transplanting. In every decayed and yellow specimen that was examined, from either position, the tracks of the burrowing worm were found in the stump, just under the bark, after shaving off the roots.

I think the remedy is to be found in discovering and destroying the insect that lays the eggs in the root of the young plants. J. V. WICKLER.

Plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine which have been grown in a moderated room temperature this winter takes a great amount of care, are now quite nice. Often in the rush of other duties this important matter is laid over until a more convenient season, and, as a consequence, stunted, shriveled plants are hanging over the pots and pans and will never be as salable as if the staking had been done six weeks earlier.

As the plants get a fair number of flowers expanded we like to give them a lower temperature; one averaging 50 to 52 degrees at night suits them perfectly. The flowers opened in cooler quarters have more substance and the whole plant becomes more sturdy than when kept in strong heat. Lorraines require no shade whatever now. The plants grown without it are tougher and far better fitted to withstand the more arid conditions of ordinary dwelling houses than such as are held in shade and heat.

Antirrhinums.

The early chrysanthemums, such as Pacific, Monrovia, Polly Rose, Halliday, October Frost and others, are now all cut and bench space they have been occupying should not be allowed to lie idle. There is no need to clear out the mum compost and refill for such crops as antirrhinums. Give the benches a good dressing of well-decayed manure, that from cows being preferable to poultry, and spade or fork it over thoroughly. The antirrhinums planted in this will quickly start into active growth and in late winter will furnish a fine crop of spikes. Do not overwater the newly planted stock. Frequently scratch over the surface soil and encourage them in every possible way to get a good start before the short winter days arrive.

Plants set out in early fall are showing a disposition to flower. Just now there is but little profit in them and it will be better to keep them pinched back so that a crop will come along for the Christmas holidays, when flowers are worth several times their present value.

Chrysanthemum Stock.

Without desiring to trespass on Totty's special department, we still like to say a word on the carrying of chrysanthemum stock. Far too often this is given but scant attention, often do we see pots and boxes along the sides of the paths, below benches or in any old out of the place, and kept there until near propagating season! How anyone carry stock over in this slipshod fashion and expect good results to follow, is beyond comprehension.

The ideal place for mum stock is bench or benches in a house held at 40 degrees at night, where the plants will be close to the light. A violet temperature answers well for them. Some growers may claim that this is so much bench space wasted, seeing that there is no crop to cut from it. The up-to-date grower knows full well that strong, succulent cuttings in abundance mean no finer plants and flowers, which will repay for the little bench space allotted prior to propagating. If a bench cannot be spared, use coldframes which can be rendered practically frost proof. We know quite a few growers who plant all the stock in this way and claim that they get stronger cuttings under this plan than by growing in benches. Either one plan or the other should be adopted. Get the stock all together, label it plainly, so when you want cuttings you will have them of first quality and in any quantity.

Bedding Geraniums.

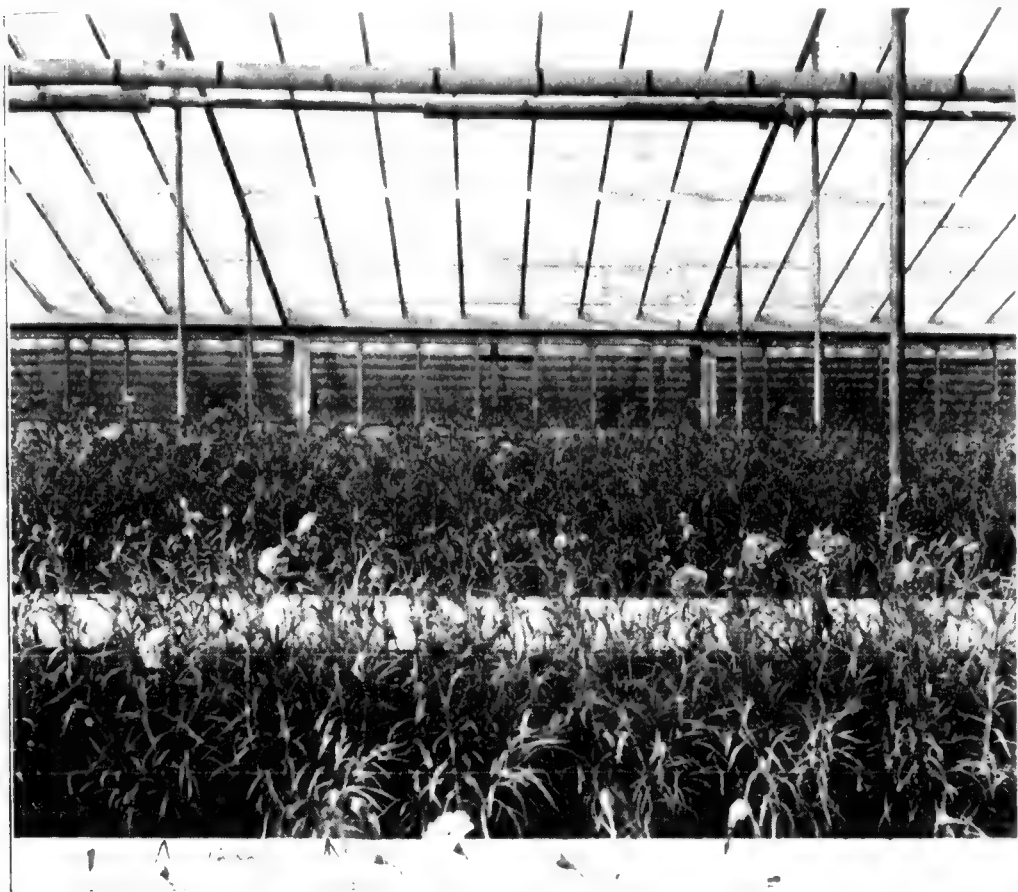

In the northern states, cuttings of ordinary bedding geraniums should not be rooting. Hold them on the dry side, in fact, they should only have sufficient water to prevent shriveling. You do not want to start them into active growth yet. It is needlessly early to do so and, furthermore, bench space is at something of a premium at this time. Pick off decaying foliage; pull out any dampened cuttings; keep the stock in the full sun and do not play the hose over them with damping down the house. Geraniums want a cool house and an abundance of fire to keep them stocky and free from mold.

Myosotis.

There are a number of small crops which seem trifling and inconsequential in themselves. One of these is myosotis. The demand for bunches of these in late winter and spring is quite good, and pays many a country florist to plant a few along the edges of the benches containing snapdragons, stocks, or other crops. You have no doubt remembered to propagate some of your favorite strains of myosotis, and as you clear away the mums and plant in other crops do not forget an edging of forget-not. It is indeed surprising how many months these will give you flowers, provided you keep them free from aphids, do not allow seeds to form on them.

AN AFTERNOON CALL.

The front door opened of itself, mysteriously, the surprised visitor might not seeing the sturdy little legs disappear behind it. A sweet old lady was saying farewell to some friends in the entry. "Yes," she said, "Miss Dorothy Gordon is at home," a short flight of steps to a high, well lighted room on the right, with glass roof as a studio or a greenhouse, the visitor stood in the presence of Miss Dorothy Gordon.

Miss Gordon was attired in Quaker gray, blue tinted, as is the custom of the dianthus family. She looked the picture of health, her rose cheek complexion contrasting brilliantly with her sober garb; her appearance of robust health spoke eloquently of awakenings with the birds, retiring at sunset, plenty of fresh air and wholesome food, the possibility to the imaginative mind, suggestion of boating and tennis.

Miss Gordon was not one whit less courteous when she discovered that her caller was not a society beau but was simply a newspaper correspondent. She spoke in glowing terms of the kindness of her adopted father, Mr. Heacock, and the sensible manner in which he brought up, of the debut at the Philadelphia Florists' Club, November 2, and of the many other swell floral parties to which she had been invited. The visitor left in a glow of honest admiration for Miss Gordon and the fervent hope that her coming out parties would be a series of important successes. PITH.

The Premium List.

The following varieties have thus far been entered in our new Section C of premium list: Mrs. J. C. Vaughan, Oak Delight, Mrs. Chas. Knopf, Ruby, Sydney, O. P. Bassett, Wanoka, Apple Blossom, Georgia, Bay State, W. H. H. Gay, Deneen, Alvina. Each variety will constitute a separate class by itself, for which the disseminator offers a first premium of $6 and a second premium of $4. In each class fifty blooms are to be shown, except in the class for Alvina. In this class six plants are to be shown, grown in not over 8 inch pots. ASTER PLANTS TURNING YELLOW

I have seen it intimated that the seed used may have something to do with causing aster plants to turn yellow, but I doubt the correctness of that idea. I have examined hundreds of diseased plants this year and have invariably found that some insect had been at work in the stump of the plant. By shaving off the roots until the bark of the stump is reached, I find traces of insect work similar to the paths made by wood borers. I think some insect had deposited its eggs in the plant when it was young and tender; these eggs developed and the young feeding on the plant caused it to turn yellow.

I found instances where two plants had been set together by mistake and one developed fine blooms while the other turned yellow. This could not have been caused by soil or weather conditions, as the plants stood so the roots were one clump. I found little difference in the percentage of plants turned yellow on heavily enriched soil or on soil that had not been fertilized at all; not was there any perceptible difference in the percentage on plants started in the hotbed and those sown in the open ground and allowed to grow without transplanting. In every decayed and yellow specimen that was examined, from either position, the tracks of the burrowing worm were found in the stump, just under the bark, after shaving off the roots.

I think the remedy is to be found in discovering and destroying the insect that lays the eggs in the root of the young plants. J. V. WICKLER.

A TRIP TO ADRIAN.

When the west-bound Wabash train pulled out of the Union Depot of Detroit, Mich., at 9 a. m. Saturday morning, October 30, there were on board three dozen jolly members of the Detroit Florists' Club, bound for the establishment of Elmer D. Smith & Co., at Adrian, Mich.

Upon arrival at the city noted for its chrysanthemums and wire fence factories, we boarded a special car for Smith's. The warm reception received here made us feel at home at once. Dividing up into smaller cliques, we were soon scattered around in the various houses, but the same thing was on everyone's mind—mums. Some 25,000 feet are here devoted to the grand flower of Japan. Many fine varieties were seen, including some good old standbys, such as Appleton and Ivory, others of this year's introduction, and still others which will not make their debut until 1911.

A yellow which attracted much attention was Golden Eagle. The color is intense, the stem good, and the foliage a fine dark green.

Madame St. Romme, a French variety, the shade of which is quite like our old Daybreak carnation, was much commented upon.

A seedling which Mr. Smith spoke exceptionally well of is a pure white, solid, well-shaped flower. It had a splendid, long stem and fine foliage. One of the parents of this variety is Merza.

Mr. Smith has much faith in the future of the pompons and the anemones, and therefore has gone extensively into these kinds.

One of the most promising looking of all the pompons was a pink seedling of a shade about as near the Enchantress color as a chrysanthemum will attain. It is a free bloomer, with a good, wiry stem. The parents are Lulu and Alena.

One of the prettiest flowers seen on the seen was Tapis de Neige; it is a pure white, with flat flowers, and was well thought of.

Mrs. John Sligh was one of the finest singles seen. This variety, we were also told, is fine as a pot plant, being dwarf in its habit.

So many hundred varieties of mums were to be seen that, should I try to mention just the best ones, it would fill a newspaper.

In the house of seedlings, stems were to be seen that were all of ten to twelve feet long, and not weak, either.

One thing we could not fail to notice was the lack of foliage on many of the stems. This no one seemed to be able to account for. It surely was not from overcrowding, as most of the plants were planted about ten inches apart each way.

Some beautiful flowers in the hairy types caused many to wonder why more are not grown.

All the stock plants are kept in paper-covered houses, planted right on the ground, surrounded by a board to keep them out of the walks. After the bars are in place, the whole house is covered with poultry wire; over this is laid a well-oiled paper, and over the whole is another layer of poultry wire, to prevent the wind from carrying off or tearing the paper.

Mr. Smith is a strong advocate of Hammond's greenhouse paint. Instead of using the white paint, he uses the blue in all the houses, claiming it has the advantage of not showing the soot marks so soon.

Mr. Smith's houses are all well preserved, one house being one of the original ones built in 1876, and still doing business.

Cement benches are used throughout the place. The benches are Mr. Smith's own idea, and many of the florists made minute notes of the style of construction, 320 pounds in all were found sufficient for one house.

About 4,000 seedlings were grown in 1908, and of these only a few were disseminated, giving you some conception of the amount of work required in getting out new varieties.

Mr. Smith is at present working on a strain of chrysanthemums which he hopes in the course of the next five or six years to have a good stock of. He is aiming to get away from the varieties having no foliage just below the flower. He showed us several kinds which he could guarantee would have fine foliage right up to the flower, thus getting away from the long, barren stem, so often seen for from eight to ten inches below the flowers.

One of Mr. Smith's great pleasures is making all his own photographs for his catalogues and trade paper cuts. He has made quite a study of photography, and has a well-equipped dark room and gallery. The gallery is a short greenhouse, in which there are no benches.

It was in this pleasant place that our whole Detroit party was treated to a fine dinner. The way those boys ate was good to look upon. For a while there was not a sound but the munching of pork and beans and pumpkin pie.

When we had about eaten everything in sight, a bunch of nine Toledo florists entered upon the scene. They had surmised that as we were the first on the ground, they had better get a lunch downtown, so they did not have to go hungry.

President Plumb, of the Detroit Florists' Club, called on Mr. Scribner for a few words, and this gentleman thanked Mr. Smith for his hospitality. Mr. Scribner spoke of the kind feeling which prevails among florists toward each other, saying that the only time one will not respond if another is in trouble is when it comes to paying his bills.

Vice-president George E. Brown also referred to the fraternal spirit among the florists. Mr. Bayer, of Toledo, then made a few remarks.

The Toledo florists were invited to join us on our annual pilgrimage to Mount Clemens, November 4, which invitation was accepted.

In the Detroit party were: J. F. Sullivan, Wm. Dilger, Herman Knope, Robert Rahaley, Wm. Hielscher, W. B. Brown, Thos. Browne, Geo. E. Browne, Chas. Warneke, Chas. Plumb, A. E. Docksey, E. A. Summers, R. H. Ellis, E. Pedrick, F. Cgchion, J. E. Smith, F. Pautke, F. Walling, F. Becker and Hugo Schroeter.

The Toledo party consisted of E. H. Cushman, George Bayer, John Barrow, S. N. Peck, Wm. Krueger, Otto Krueger, Wm. Phillips, Mr. Hall, of Clyde, O., and E. A. Kunke. H. S.

COST OF METERED WATER.

Referring to the inquiry of R. M., on page 9 of the REVIEW for October 28, we can say that from our experience, where metered water costs about 10 cents per 1,000 gallons, it would cost at least $30 per month to supply a range of 100,000 feet of glass.

HYDRANGEAS FOR EASTER.

How should I treat hydrangeas which are outdoors in pots? They have been gradually hardened off until they now have a good brown color. We are growing them for Easter.

E. F. C.

You are treating your hydrangeas all right. Run them a little on the dry side to assist in ripening the wood. Keep the plants outdoors as late as possible in an open, sunny spot. Guard against frost. A few degrees will not harm the hydrangeas, but if the thermometer should go down to 20 degrees, as is not improbable during October, the majority of the flower buds will be killed. Have some covering in readiness to use in case of frost. You should aim to have your wood thoroughly ripened, of a nutty brown color by Christmas, about which time the plants should be started to get them in bloom for Easter, 1910. In the event of heavy and continuous rain storms occurring, the hydrangeas would be better placed in a coldframe or pit.

GLADIOLI FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Can you tell me what varieties of gladioli are best for growing between carnations in the bed for florists' use, also what time to plant them to have them in bloom for Memorial day or before, and whether they can be grown between the carnations on a solid bed without injury to carnation plants?

C. F. B.

A few excellent gladioli to grow for Memorial day are: America, soft lavender pink, always sells on sight; Shakespeare, white suffused with rose; Augusta, white, blue anthers; Brenchleyensis, bright scarlet; and May, white, penciled with crimson. You can, of course, purchase separate shades of color at a somewhat lower price, but bunches of one decided color are now to be desired.

The above sorts should be planted in February for blooming for Memorial day, from the middle to the end of the month. It is a common practice to plant among carnations. Personally, we do not like the plan, as one crop hurts the other. If you have some beds likely to run out in spring, it may be all right to plant among them, but if you want first-class carnations do not plant anything through them. Rather let the bulbs have a piece of bed to themselves, or grow in boxes six to seven inches deep.

They can be planted about three inches apart each way in coldframes, or will winter well if pricked out in beds outdoors on land with a gentle slope to the south. Water must not lie where they are planted. They will require a mulch of pine needles, straw or some similar material after the ground freezes.

TOTTY'S PLACE.

A visit to the establishment of Charles H. Totty, at Madison, N. J., unfolds a wonderful display of pompons. Among the favorites are: Bidy, rose-pink; Harold Slade, white and scarlet; Eloise, white; Bohemia, yellow; Jessie Curtis, dark crimson; Ena Reimer, chestnut; Linton, white; Golden Star, the best yellow. In this 220-foot house there are over 350, all single varieties. Other favorites are: John T. Burns, cerise and orange; Charles Graves, yellow; H. S. Bevins, crimson.

W. Wells, of Merstham, England, who arrived October 27 to be a guest of Mr. Totty for some weeks, when visited by Mr. Totty last year, had over thirty acres of the single varieties in bloom.

Here, too, is a house of My Maryland and Killarney in perfect condition and a house of Zvolanek's sweet peas. At the Twombly greenhouses Mr. Totty has a magnificent display of mums. Altogether in this fine range of houses, comprising over 60,000 square feet, a better opportunity for development cannot well be imagined, and a brilliant and successful career waits upon Mr. Totty's skill and enterprise. Among the popular varieties are: Pockett's Crimson, Mrs. Kahn, Mrs. Totty, Yellow Miller, Blackburn, W. Hotston, R. F. Felton and many of Wells' unnamed seedlings. A house of carnations, 33x220, has Enchantress, Beacon and Winsor and a new variegated sport of Enchantress. Mr. Totty has also a yellow sport of My Maryland. Here also is a grand house of Beauties and sections devoted to apricots and grapes, with such perfection in building, conveniences and system as are seldom seen in a commercial establishment. The situation is ideal, and the illustration herewith gives some idea of the extent and future of the enterprise. William Tricker is foreman. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PANSIES FOR SPRING SALES.

Kindly tell me how to raise pansies for next spring. I have sold cut flowers for five years, but have never grown anything. I would like to grow some pansies because the express costs more than the plants. I live in the state of Maine. A. E. N.

It is now too late to sow pansies in your state for spring sales. I would advise you to purchase now strong seedlings, which are offered by many advertisers in the REVIEW at present. These, being small, will cost you little in express charges. They can be planted about three inches apart each way in coldframes, or will winter well if pricked out in beds outdoors on land with a gentle slope to the south. Water must not lie where they are planted. They will require a mulch of pine needles, straw or some similar material after the ground freezes.

You will find in the REVIEW of July 22 last cultural notes on pansies under "Seasonable Suggestions." The seed with you should be sown outdoors about the first week in August. C. W.

TOTTY'S PLACE.

A visit to the establishment of Charles H. Totty, at Madison, N. J., unfolds a wonderful display of pompous. Among the favorites are: Biddy, rose-pink; Harold Slade, white and scarlet; Eloise, white; Bohemia, yellow; Jessie Curtis, dark crimson; Ena Reimer, chestnut; Linton, white; Golden Star, the best yellow. In this 220-foot house there are over 350, all single varieties. Other favorites are: John T. Burns, cerise and orange; Charles Graves, yellow; H. S. Bevins, crimson.

W. Wells, of Merstham, England, who arrived October 27 to be a guest of Mr. Totty for some weeks, when visited by Mr. Totty last year, had over thirty acres of the single varieties in bloom.

Here, too, is a house of My Maryland and Killarney in perfect condition and a house of Zvolanek's sweet peas. At the Twombly greenhouses Mr. Totty has a magnificent display of mums. Altogether in this fine range of houses, comprising over 60,000 square feet, a better opportunity for development cannot well be imagined, and a brilliant and successful career waits upon Mr. Totty's skill and enterprise. Among the popular varieties are: Pockett's Crimson, Mrs. Kahn, Mrs. Totty, Yellow Miller, Blackburn, W. Hotston, R. F. Felton and many of Wells' unnamed seedlings. A house of carnations, 33x220, has Enchantress, Beacon and Winsor and a new variegated sport of Enchantress. Mr. Totty has also a yellow sport of My Maryland. Here also is a grand house of Beauties and sections devoted to apricots and grapes, with such perfection in building, conveniences and system as are seldom seen in a commercial establishment. The situation is ideal, and the illustration herewith gives some idea of the extent and future of the enterprise. William Tricker is foreman. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

NAMES OF FUCHSIAS.

Enclosed find three samples of fuchsias, which please name for me. H. K.

They are Duchess of Edinburgh, double white; Phenomenal, double crimson, and Swanley Gem, single red. C.

HANCOCK, MICH.—Mrs. A. M. York is quite pleased with the business outlook at present. She is cutting some excellent chrysanthemums, roses and carnations and finds a ready sale for them all. Her October Frost mums are especially good.

MANCHESTER, CONN.—John E. Dwyer & Co. have leased the Hastings property here, including two greenhouses, and will grow roses, carnations and a general line of bedding plants. They will repair the greenhouses and put the place in first-class condition.

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dörner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg, Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

AZALEAS may be scarce in Belgium, but the stock that has come in appears to be of excellent quality this year.

You take out of a business just about what you put into it; don't expect something for nothing, or you'll find your anticipations have a bad attack of cutting bench fungus.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

OTTO G. KOENIG advises that another silver cup has been donated by a St. Louis jeweler for competition at next week's flower show there, for the best 100 chrysanthemum blooms, to be staged November 9.

THE preliminary schedule of premiums has been issued for the exhibition of the American Rose Society to be held at New York in March, 1910. Copies may be had by addressing Benj. Hammond, secretary, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

OBITUARY.

J. M. Niuffer.

John Martin Niuffer, of Springfield, O., died October 27 after a week's illness with Bright's disease. He was 66 years of age.

Albert Reichsparr.

Albert Reichsparr, one of the best known florists of Richmond, Ky., died the morning of November 1. Burial will be at Louisville, Ky. He leaves a wife and two children.

Mr. Reichsparr had been in business about ten years, and prior to that time was for several years with Nanz & Neuner, of Louisville.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Work of Committees.

At New York October 23, Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., exhibited Oroba (No. 197-5-08), white, Japanese. On the commercial scale it scored as follows: Color, 16; form, 13; fullness, 8; stem, 15; foliage, 13; substance, 13; size, 8; total, 86.

At Cincinnati, October 23, Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., exhibited Oroba, white, Japanese. It scored as follows: On the commercial scale—Color, 17; form, 12; fullness, 9; stem, 14; foliage, 11; substance, 13; size, 10; total, 86. On the exhibition scale—Color, 9; stem, 5; foliage, 4; fullness, 14; form, 13; depth, 13; size, 30; total, 88.

At Cincinnati, October 23, Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., exhibited Donatello (No. 36-44-08), yellow, Japanese incurved. On the commercial scale it scored as follows: Color, 18; form, 14; fullness, 10; stem, 14; foliage, 10; substance, 14; size, 8; total, 88.

At Madison, N. J., October 27, Chas. H. Totty exhibited Mrs. W. Arnold, white, Japanese. On the commercial scale it scored as follows: Color, 17; form, 13; fullness, 10; stem, 14; foliage, 13; substance, 13; size, 8; total, 88.

Through an error it was reported to the secretary that David Fraser would present a paper at the New York meeting. It is Thomas Proctor, of Lenox, Mass., who is to read a paper on "Pot-grown Chrysanthemums for Exhibition Cut Blooms." C. W. JOHNSON, Sec'y.

EAST AND WEST AGREE.

Here are three letters, all written the same day, but representing the sentiment of the east, the west and the middle west. They all agree:

I send another dollar, as I think the Review is the greatest florists' paper I ever read.—D. T. Quick, Woodlawn, Md., October 26, 1909.

The Review is the best trade paper in print today.—C. S. Meek, Mt. Vernon, Ia., October 26, 1909.

The Review is the only florists' paper I take now, for it fills the bill.—M. W. Walters, Bettsville, O., October 26, 1909.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The most satisfactory feature, from a wholesale point of view, in last week's market was the aggregate money value of sales. The total in dollars and cents was quite satisfactory, but average prices were not what sellers would have liked them to be, for values weakened all along the line. This week opened with supplies still further increased and the quality in many lines showing the bad effect of two extremely warm days; it was almost mid-summer on the last day of October. But after the heat wave came a chilly rain, and the weather man is predicting cooler weather, which will be extremely welcome.

The chrysanthemum has dominated the market. The supply has been extremely heavy, and a large proportion of the receipts have been of indifferent quality. Wholesalers of long experience say they never have known a time when greater effort was required to move the low grade mums than has been the case in the last week, especially during the storm November 1. There was an extremely large volume of shipping to New Orleans for All Saints' day, but since that date the shipping trade on chrysanthemums has fallen away to little or nothing, the reason being that every grower who has any glass at all is now cutting mums, his own mums, and the same factor has affected the general shipping trade—any one who has mums of his own is going to push them, rather than push the sale of roses or other stock that must be ordered from the wholesale market. There is nothing finer in the market than the Virginia Poehlmann, but the late varieties are already crowding in upon the midseason sorts. Bonnaffon and Appleton are here, and so are Eaton, Alice Byron, Maud Dean, Viviani-Morel, and the Ivories are legion. The prices all along the line are a shade under those of other years.

The supplies of Beauty have increased heavily since last report. Long Beauties are now in more than abundant supply, but of medium grades not so many are available, and short Beauties are scarce. The heat October 31 drove in a big cut of open Beauties that broke the market locally and had some effect on the values

Killarney

The lengths every retailer uses in quantity

We are doing a very heavy business with Killarney because we have just the right grade of goods—enough of the extra long, special grade for all who want them, but a big proportion of the present heavy crop is the length the average store needs in quantity; we can fill any order. Try us and see. FINE HEADS ON ALL LENGTHS OF STEM. The kind of stock YOU find it a pleasure to handle. Order some today.

BEAUTIES

We have a splendid cut of Beauties, especially strong on medium lengths. If your trade appreciates good medium Beauties you should get in touch with us at once. Enough finest long and medium Beauties to fill all orders, but short Beauties are scarce.

MUMS

The late Mums are here in quantity: Bonnaffon, Appleton, Eaton, Maud Dean, Ivory, pink and white; Alice Byron, Shaw, etc. We can supply any size, color or quantity.

Carnations

Our Carnations are again in full crop and we can supply any and all demands at the prices that ordinarily rule at this season. Tell your salesmen to "push Carnations again, Amling can supply them in any quantity." Our Carnations always are the best the market affords.

Violets

We handle the cream of the Hudson River doubles and the fragrant home-grown singles. Place an order for daily shipment, or call on us for special quantities when needed.

Smilax Strings

Use Smilax in your decorations. We can supply it by the hundred or thousand. $10.00 per 100; $80.00 per 1000. Plenty of Asparagus bunches. All other Greens in large supply.

VIOLET BOXES, CORDS, TIES.

You can work up a big business on Violets

if you send them out right. There should be a cord or ribbon tie on each corsage bunch and, if you deliver, each bunch should go out in a neat special violet box (we have violet boxes all the way from 2c to 18c each). Send for Special Box Circular; it shows pictures with prices. Order an assortment of Violet Ties, at $5.00 or $10.00.

THE BOHANNON VIOLET CLASP, to fasten the bunch of violets to the ladies' corsage. Something new. Send 20c in stamps and we will mail you a sample, with interesting particulars and prices.

of the shipping grade. The Beauties are fine. The heat wave also made the other roses arrive in an open condition for a day or two, the effect being especially marked on Richmond. This rose is again in full crop, and some splendid, long-stemmed stock is seen. Killarney is selling excellently in the medium grades, but the extra long stock that should command its price to be profitable to the grower is only in limited demand at the moment, and not making the values it should. Some fine long My Maryland and Jardine also are seen, but it is the grade at 4 cents to 6 cents that is most in demand. An occasional order calls for first-class Maid, and it is not the easiest thing to find really good stock in quantity; Maid is completely overshadowed by the other pink roses. White Killarney is fine, and sells better than Bride.

Carnations would not be in adequate supply if the demand were what it should be. The high prices asked a few weeks ago for low grade carnations have checked the demand so that moderate receipts are now equal to the market requirements. There is some special fancy stock that has been commanding high prices, but the average run of carnations is now bringing no more than ordinary values at this date, but buyers have not yet fully awakened to the fact.

Violets are in only moderate supply and are selling first rate, both doubles and singles. Lilies are in fair supply and there is enough valley to go around. A few callas are seen, also a few sweet peas and a little bouvardia.

The single and pompon chrysanthemums are selling excellently, and some fine stock in all colors is offered. The singles especially require careful handling to get them on the market in good shape.

The green goods market is quiet. Asparagus strings are not abundant, but there is plenty of stock.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held another of its weekly meetings at the Union October 29, when committees made final reports of arrangements for the big flower show that is on at the Coliseum this week.

The following were elected to membership: George Woodward, H. P. Gerhardt, George Fisher, Julius Shattls, A. Miller, August Bergland, Albert Erickson, D. A. Robertson, John Schollsmann, Ed Enders has arranged the program of professional entertainment. All florists in the city and for fifty miles around are to pay $1 for their tickets; those outside the 50-mile radius will be the club's guests.

October Business.

October was a better month in the total of sales in this market than the corresponding month in the year of 1908. Early in the month there was a marked shortage in the supply of carnations and, while it materially reduced the money taken in for carnations, it gave better prices for other lines of stock, and the outcome was satisfactory. Later in the month supplies were larger in all lines and, while prices were lower, a good volume of business was done. Shipping trade was heavy for the middle of the month, but later fell off. The question is raised as to whether or not the increase in sales for the month was as great as

THE REAL THING IN ARTS AND CRAFTS FLORISTS' BASKETS AT SENSIBLE PRICES.

I am pleased to advise my old friends and patrons that I am now connected with the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Inc., Burlington, Iowa, where I have better facilities than ever to turn out a strictly high class line of Arts and Crafts florist baskets.

I have designed a variety of new styles and shapes which I feel confident will please.

Any order or inquiry addressed to the above firm will have my personal attention.

Various Notes.

The growers at Maywood are this season putting their mums on the market in better shape and at cheaper cost for transportation than ever before. Instead of the big wood "coffins" of other years they are using corrugated pasteboard boxes, 10x24 and five feet long. These boxes are light, cheap and strong—strong enough to go back and forth as long as the mum season will last. Enough of these boxes for the entire community were ordered in one lot, of the Thompson & Norris Co., Brookville, Ind., and shipped to Henry Wehrman for distribution to the growers. This ordering of supplies in combination is getting to be quite a feature.

George Walther has been appointed one of the administrators of the estate of Percy Jones and has made an arrangement with Mrs. Jones whereby he will personally conduct the wholesale business in the Flower Growers' Market. Mr. Walther was one of the closest personal friends of the late Mr. Jones. He took hold of the business November 1 and is giving his entire time to it, leaving his sister in charge of his own retail business at 535 West Sixty-third street and the greenhouses on Lowe avenue.

Joseph Foerster, of Kyle & Foerster, accomplished the almost impossible November 1, when he secured his excuse from jury service. Since the jury-fixing scandals which have agitated the daily newspapers, it has taken an extremely plausible man to talk himself out of a term of service after his name was drawn.

E. C. Amling has started his third ticket machine, the intention being to have enough billing facilities so that there need be no delay on that score.

Mrs. Manheim, wife of Harry Manheim, of the J. A. Budlong staff, is recovering from a month's critical illness.

Wieter Bros. began cutting Bonnaillon early last week, and say this marks the height of the chrysanthemum season.

The directors of the Flower Growers' Market corporation held a meeting October 30 and elected John Sinner as manager, as forecasted in last week's REVIEW.

The Wholesalers' Employees' Club finds a most satisfactory balance as a result of its dance October 27.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says the retailers fight shy of the Touset mum, one reason being that unless handled with great care more or less of the flowers will crack off at the neck.

Vaughan & Sperry say the boxwood recently received is of much better quality than that available early in the season, and that it is selling well.

The E. F. Winterson Co., which supplied a carload of wild smilax for decorating the Coliseum for the flower show, reports that the car came through from Evergreen, Ala., by freight in three and one-half days, which is thought to be record time.

L. R. Bohannon has invented a clasp for use in attaching a bunch of violets to the customer's corsage. It is an attractive article, shaped like a safety-pin, with a loop bent up in the center to go around the stems and with a pin sticking into the stems from the loop, to hold the bunch firmly. The supply houses are handling the clasp.

Zech & Mann have put up a glass partition along the balcony on which their office is located, to give comfort and privacy.

Within the last few days the Peter Reinberg establishment has brought in a large crop of Richmond roses.

Hoerber Bros., appreciating that the market was likely never to be lower, some time ago bought 2,000 boxes of glass

"The Review is a fine paper, full of good advertising."—A. H. Faxon, Southbridge, Mass.

"Our last special adv. brought a nice order from Holland, and inquiries from France and Germany, as well as orders and inquiries from nearer home."—E. Y. Teas Co., Centerville, Ind., November 2, 1909.

The E. Wienhoeber Co. had the decoration for the McCormick dinner November 1, one of the finest jobs of the season.

The Fleischman Floral Co. will soon be on the street with a swell new automobile delivery car, built expressly for their work, with fifty horse-power, by the Stoddard-Dayton people.

Frank Farney is still confined to his bed.

Frank Hayden, of the George Reinberg store, buried his father-in-law this week.

John Kruchten says the dark colors in pompon chrysanthemums sell much better than the light colors.

H. R. Hughes had large doings at his store Hallowe'en. He gave a children's party that taxed the capacity of the establishment and attracted so much attention that he secured a front page notice with three column illustration in the Daily News.

The A. L. Randall Co. has its supply department decked out in elaborate style this week in honor of the flower show visitors. The decoration and display of samples was arranged by T. E. Waters.

Bassett & Washburn report an order from Johannesburg, South Africa, for field-grown plants of their O. P. Bassett carnation.

E. H. Hunt's are gradually getting their exhibition room for supplies into shape.

Weiland & Risch grew a lot of Killarney plants in the field this season.

WHEELING, W. VA.—John Hellstern, the Pleasant Valley florist, has added two greenhouses.

NASHUA, N. H.—George E. Buxton recently celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his establishment in business. He started on Vine street with a single house, 18x90, but his glass was soon increased to four times that area. In June, 1896, he removed to his present fine location on Concord street, where his houses now cover more than an acre. For ten years a store was run in connection with the business, but in July, 1904, the store was transferred to Mr. Buxton's clerk, W. W. Powers, who still conducts it.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

No decided activity in social affairs is manifest just yet, though each day adds some one of importance to the resident world, and the inclination to announce winter plans seems more marked than usual. The brides are still in the center of the stage. The first of the debutante teas is only a fortnight or so in the future and, once these hospitalities begin, the list is sufficiently long to keep them going till the holidays, and the florists of the nation's capital expect to be kept quite busy with the many comings-out of the season.

Various Notes.

A number of Hallowe'en decorations were put up, Z. D. Blackistone probably having the most elaborate, a ballroom decoration at the home of a prominent resident of the northwest section. A usual, pumpkins and autumn foliage were quite in evidence. The decoration was much to the credit of Mr. Schottmeier. Mr. Blackistone's head decorator.

The Washington Florists Co. is a booming matrimonial bureau, another match being added to the list last week, the marriage of Miss Blanche Dart, who for the last six years has been their book keeper, this affair being the fourth at fair of this kind in the last three months.

F. H. Kramer's new store is rapidly being completed and when once occupied will be one of the best shops in the city.

The auto delivery wagon of Gude Bros. Co., while making a delivery last week, in some way caught fire and was considerably damaged. W. F.

Roi d'Italie, a yellow variety grown outdoors in Virginia, surpassing even Appleton, but shown here as very small. Beatrice May was fine, but, as usual, lacking in foliage.

Everybody was looking for the President Taft. We thought it the W. M. Moir, of Totty's introduction, and Fidelity, the best bloom in the show, may also be that variety, but was placed rather high for proper examination.

The following were beautifully grown and bore enormous exhibition blooms: Glitter, Mrs. W. Duckham, Mary Donnellan and Col. Ducrosiet, all yellows; Leon Truelle, Lanona, Rose Pockett, Merstham Blush, L. Rousseau, O. H. Broomhead, Mrs. J. Wells and Dazzler, the last the best crimson possible. In the singles we noted an orange salmon seedling, a cross of Rayonnante with a single.

The staging reflects the greatest credit on Mr. Burns, whose courtesy and patience to visitors win him a host of friends.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Large quantities of stock have been arriving at the commission houses, but it is cleaned up fast, for business is good. Carnations are still scarce; the few arriving are sold almost before unpacking. Roses are just about equal to the demand. Chrysanthemums clean up well at about the usual prices. Not many of the pompon and anemone types arrive at the commission houses, although these newer kinds are quite popular.

Club Meeting.

Considering the bad weather, there was a good attendance at the meeting of the Florists' Club, Monday evening, November 1.

Immediately after calling the meeting to order, President Plumb asked Vice-president George E. Browne to preside, which he did in a very able manner.

Chas. Distelrath was unanimously elected a member. M. Bloy, of the exhibition committee, reported that in view of the fact that mums are so late this season it would not be advisable to hold the show will mark another step forward, for interest is keen. The officers of the club are: F. H. Kramer, president; John Robinson, vice-president; W. F. Gude, treasurer, and O. A. C. Oehmler, secretary. As usual, George Cooke is manager of the show.

Mums at Agricultural Department.

At the greenhouses of the Agricultural Department about 240 varieties of mums are on show to the public, free, for a week. It struck us that too much had been attempted and the wrong bud of many taken. This was palpably so with our little annual show until the latter part of the month. After consideration, the date was set for the evening of November 19. The show will be held in the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

The kind invitation of J. E. Smith, of Wyandotte, to be his guests was accepted and the date set for Monday evening, November 8. All the members of the club are invited. The party will leave the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange about 6:30 p. m. Mr. Smith has a whitefish supper in store for his company and those few who paid him a visit last year know what that means.

Mr. Plumb suggested that the recent articles under heading of "The Employer and the Employee," which appeared in the REVIEW, be read at the next meeting and then discussed.

The meeting was adjourned early and the members left in the hands of the entertainment committee, who provided a good time for all.

Messrs. Karins, of Dreer's, and Green, of Bayersdorfer's, were present at the meeting.

Various Notes.

One of the busiest men in the party of Detroit florists at Adrian last Saturday was Ferdinand Kolbe. Note book in hand, Mr. Kolbe was making notes of some good things to grow another year.

The artistic abilities of E. A. Feters are known, not only in Detroit but in other cities as well. Recently Mr. Feters was called upon to make up a number of baskets of Killarney for the table decorations of a swell affair in Fremont.

Many employers made a wise move last Saturday in taking their foremen or other head men along to Adrian. This is encouraging to these men, besides giving them a chance to broaden their knowledge.

C. H. Maynard is thinking of attending the coming show at St. Louis.

B. Schroeter is showing many of Aloys Frey's novelties in pompons and anemone mums, and finds a ready sale for them.

H. S.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business has shown a decided improvement in this city, and everybody experienced a fair increase during the last week. There is a fair demand for cut flowers. Funeral work is brisk and calls for social purposes are rapidly developing into a healthy and acknowledged feature of the situation. Carnations at wholesale rule at 1½ cents to 2 cents; violets, 50 cents per hundred; roses, $2 per hundred and up, and mums at from $1.50 to $4. The demand for the latter is more active than the local supply can compete with, and many of the mums brought in by the local growers are only about half ripe. As the season advances, however, the supply will keep pace with the call and this defect will be obviated.

Various Notes.

Frank L. Budlong, with J. A. Budlong & Sons Co., Auburn, declined to run for renomination as a member of the Cranston town council this year.

Richard H. Dunbar, of Bristol, reports that he has located a quantity of window glass and frames which were stolen from his greenhouses on Wood street some time ago. He made an investigation of a place some distance from his houses, and discovered the missing glass secreted at the bottom of an old cistern.

Howard Vose, of Vose & Son, Main street, Woonsocket, was passing round cigars last week. It's a girl, and mother and child are reported as doing well.

William Hay had a number of large pieces, including a $125 gates ajar, October 26, for the funeral of Aaron S. Haven, town auditor of Cranston.

F. Macrae & Sons are cutting some fine Harrisii. Last week they shipped 1,000 to Philadelphia and secured a good figure.

James Hacking has been reelected superintendent of the Moshassuck cemetery, at Central Falls.

Johnston Bros. had several fine pieces for the funeral of Mrs. William Halkyard, October 25.

The Westminster Greenhouses, Mr. Scott, manager, 1205 Westminster street, have commenced the erection of a small house, 16x50, in addition to its range of eight houses.

J. G. Jensen, of the Park Greenhouses, has commenced cutting some fine carnations from his new houses. He has several houses of fine mums coming on rapidly.

William B. Hazard has been driven with funeral work the last week or ten days. He had no specially large orders, but general work.

William E. Chappell had the decorations for the ladies' night of the Corinthian Lodge of Masons at the Eloise, October 27. He also reports a good funeral business.

annual meeting and election of officers of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island will be held. The entertainment committee will have an enjoyable program for that occasion.

S. J. Toher, of Concord street, is a new grower of carnations for the wholesale market. He has one house, 100 feet in length, well benched, and is cutting good, strong stock. He expects to erect several more houses in the spring.

C. W. Morey, of the Woonsocket Hill Nurseries, Woonsocket, is booking numerous good orders for shrubs, trees and vines for spring delivery.

The reported sale of William Hay's range of houses on Dyer avenue in this column last week has occasioned considerable controversy as to who the purchaser is. His name remains a mystery, however.

James B. Canning is busy with funeral work, having had nearly a dozen large pieces October 28. His social work is also unusually large. W. H. M.

WICHITA, KAN.—Voluntary bankruptcy proceedings have been commenced by Claude L. Shanks, a florist at Newton. Assets aggregate about $10,000, with $13,000 liabilities. The first meeting of creditors has been set for November 5.

PLEASE discontinue the advertisement; it has brought us all the orders we need.—B. HAMMOND TRACY, Wenham, Mass.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.—A. L. Warner, proprietor of the Pleasant View Greenhouses, has been making extensive repairs at his place this fall.

NEW BRITAIN, CONN.—George W. Traut and Frank L. Traut have sold the greenhouse property which lies between Arch street and Kensington street to Clayton A. Parker. The plot of ground is laid out in beautiful flower gardens. It is understood to be Mr. Parker's purpose to sell it off in building lots.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cut flower business cannot enthuse during the continuance of the election excitement and the summer temperature. When the flower shows are all over and the crisp days around Thanksgiving arrive, the long-expected boom should materialize. If general expectation is a guide, and the prophecies of the leading retailers come true, this is going to be a banner season. The retailers are all optimistic. Their stores are better decorated and more artistically than ever before, and there are more splendid new stores opening than usual, by a large majority, so early in the season.

There is an abundance of everything, especially in roses and carnations, and prices do not deviate much from day to day; 25 cents seems to be the top for Beauties, 4 cents for other roses and 2 cents for carnations. Quotations on small selected lots of anything are not a fair estimate of the general market. It is the general trend and the average that constitute a reliable guide. So many new roses are bidding for popular favor it is difficult to specify exactly the figures they command. Killarney and My Maryland are universally approved. Orchids have lessened in shipment, and prices are advancing slowly. Gardenias bring $2, $3 and $4 per dozen for the best, and there are none too many. The opening of the big opera houses next week and the horse show and society weddings, now numerous, will use any available supply.

Carnations are now perfect, and the price is hardening. For the good novelties 3 cents to 4 cents is bid. The general shipments hold steadily at 2 cents, in large quantities. Valley is firm and lilies abundant and lower. Violets are improving in quality as the weather grows colder. This warm spell has again deteriorated them in quality, and large quantities were unsalable last week because of it. It is just about the right time now to make the first shipments of violets to the New York market. It will take many weeks to raise them to where they rightfully belong. The glory of the chrysanthemum is at its height. No finer stock has ever reached this market. The big flower shows this week and next week will emphasize their place at the head of the procession. Every retail window is ablaze with color and profusion.

Various Notes.

The council of the Horticultural Society of New York sent out invitations for a private view of the great exhibition of plants and flowers for Wednesday evening, November 3. Secretary Nash thinks the crowds will overtop anything ever known at a flower show in this country. If the right publicity has been utilized to wake up this blasé community, his prophecies may be realized.

Next week the Chrysanthemum Society of America will have its annual exhibit at the American Institute, West Forty-fourth street, where a grand display may be depended upon. The White Plains and Mount Kisco shows will be held this week also. Everywhere at these fall exhibitions the quality of the exhibits has been superb.

Monday evening, November 8, the New York Florists' Club will hold its most important session of the year at its rooms in the Grand Opera House building, on West Twenty-third street. A fine exhibition of mums may be anticipated.

ready for occupancy, and the whole place in keeping with its surroundings.

William Elliott & Sons are in possession of their first consignment of nursery stock from Holland, which they are offering at Tuesday and Friday auction sales.

Mr. Julias, the florist, immortalized himself by presenting an eight-foot floral horseshoe to Candidate Hearst at the big Madison Square meeting Sunday evening, when 40,000 tried to crowd into a space where only 15,000 can find standing room.

Saturday, October 30, the House of Flowers opened at the corner of Forty-fifth street and Fifth avenue. It comes fully up to expectations. There is nothing just like it in the country. If Thorley should concentrate all his retail enterprises here, it would not surprise the trade. The store is almost opposite the headquarters of Alex. McConnell in the Arcade.

The Charles Zeller & Son place, in Flatbush, will pass next year into the hands of that ever youthful Parisian, Louis Schmutz. A few months ago the property sold for $25,000; today you cannot buy it for $35,000. That is the way florists make money down here. The new subways and the enormous increase in population are at the bottom of the rise.

Close to Zeller's is Charles Koch's fine home and valuable real estate, formerly the property of Kretschmar Bros. A part of the land sold by Mr. Koch a short time ago has doubled in value, and he is out thousands by not waiting "just a little longer." But he has a nice slice left and is on Easy street.

Carl Wilk has rented his place to Carl Woerner, who grows a nice assortment of plants and cut flowers and is doing well. The old Arnold greenhouses, next door, are gone, and it would have been a blessing to one of the old-time florists if they had been destroyed fifteen years ago.

The big plant of Louis Schmutz, on Clarkson street, is fast resolving itself into lots worth $2,000 apiece. The city is putting a new street right through the center of the houses, and must pay dearly for them. The veteran need not care whether school keeps any longer or not. He is living on the wide thoroughfare of developing prosperity.

Charles A. Dards, at Madison avenue and Forty-fourth street, with a branch store on Seventy-second street, in the aristocratic section of the city, has been extremely busy this week with wedding decorations. Monday two weddings and three large funerals used up an immense amount of valley and over 400 cattleyas.

The Rosary, on Thirty-fourth street, displays some grand retinospira in tubs from the nurseries at New Rochelle. Mr. Troy is dipping into politics and running for alderman in the third ward, at New Rochelle, on the Republican ticket.

Harmony has again descended on the wholesale district. The day of boycotts is past.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

BOSTON, MASS.—J. J. McCormack has opened a new store at 31 Pleasant street.

GREENWICH, CONN.—McMillen & Co. have moved from Arch street to their new quarters in the Carroll & Willard building.

The Market.

The feared glut and slump have not yet taken place and prices are holding up well, being but little changed from a week ago. Chrysanthemums now include most of the midseason varieties, the earliest being practically over. Old favorites, like Bonnaillon and Ivory, are still much in evidence. There is little change in prices. Roses are lower in price, as is usual during the mum season, but are cleaning up quite well. Some fine Killarneys, Beauties, Chatenays and Richmonds are coming in.

Violets are much more abundant, but have so far cleared out well. Carnations are in heavy oversupply and are harder to move than anything else in the market. Many of the growers now have a heavy crop and, as a consequence, prices show a sagging tendency. Lilies are in only moderate supply, as are callas. Lily of the valley is scarce, but in strong demand. A pleasing feature is the excellent call for pompon and single mums, which have at last found favor with the trade.

There are now quite a few Cypripedium insigne coming in, an abundance of cattleyas and a good supply of other seasonable orchids. Green stock is in fairly good demand.

Various Notes.

There is an extremely satisfactory entry for the chrysanthemum show, which opens Friday, November 5. The date suits cut blooms, but is a trifle early for some of the pot plants. Indications are that all hall space will be utilized. A full report will appear in next week's REVIEW.

Herman Bartsch, manager for W. W. Edgar Co., has about 6,000 azaleas coming along for Christmas and excellent batches of poinsettias, Lorraines and other plants.

All the local bulb dealers report an extremely active demand, varieties for outdoor planting being in special request.

At the Gardeners' and Florists' Club meeting, November 16, in addition to the lecture on "Jottings of a Journey Abroad," by Miss L. L. Hetzer, there will be nominations of officers for the

We are offering these roses at $4.00 per 100. They include all the varieties we grow. Do not overlook the fact that these roses are all cut on day of shipment. WAYSIDE NOTES.

The ever busy A. N. Broadhead, at Jamestown, N. Y., gave the writer an idea that the Lake View Rose Gardens intend pushing the wholesale branch of their big business by the erection of a large building adjoining the store, to consist of a storehouse with a palm house overhead. It is the intention to do all shipping downtown, which will greatly facilitate the execution of orders. The conservatory will be a thing of beauty, and Artist George Heelas will scour the metropolis for the latest ideas in furnishing. Lawrence Cotter—"Larry," as known for years by his Boston chums—is producing some great roses. He admires Sunrise and Sunset, remarking that "these are golden reminders of the absence of the real thing just now." Carnations are increasing in length of stem and will be in abundance right along.

F. A. Dorman, of Jamestown, has no fault to find with the season's business. His place is a model and some of the larger growers can get some excellent pointers here.

Eliot Worden, of Jamestown, finds the medium sized flower is the most profitable to grow and he is one of the first to bring in a good crop of early blooms.

Chas. G. Offerle, of Erie, has completed two new houses, 26x100, for Beauties. The gutters rest upon 1½-inch piping, set in cement walls.

The Baur Floral Co., of Erie, Pa., has completed the two new houses, 42x300, of King construction, and they are the highest yet built. It is intended to add others to correspond, and within a year the firm will have a plant that will be unique in construction, thoroughly up-to-date in every particular.

John V. Laver, of Erie, has everything in apple-pie order. Those little Dutch shoes, filled with flowering bulbs, are all right and would have brought good prices

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

October closed with brisk demand for Hallowe'en and All Saints' day; nothing remarkable, but just a good, lively demand, believed to be greater than last season. November has opened quietly, the sultry weather of Monday and election on Tuesday having their effect. The rose market has been most affected, roses being more in excess of the orders than any other flower on the list. This does not apply to Beauties, but to all the other roses. Carnations have reached a point where the supply is fully equal to the demand. At times the stock exceeds the call and then the poorer grades suffer. Orchids have shortened wonderfully, cattleyas advancing in price, labiata being over, and Trianae not yet in, except the scouts. Sweet peas are more abundant. Pansies are in brisk demand. Easter lilies are hard to sell at fair prices, the supply being far ahead of the demand. Most of the good valley finds an excellent market. Gardenias are more sought, apparently as a substitute for orchids. Mignonette is improving. Choice greens are in better demand.

Chrysanthemums continue to lead the market. While there is no especial rush for them, the growers generally are able to market their stock as fast as it ripens at satisfactory prices. The midseason varieties are in full glory. Col. Appleton is at its best. Yellow Chadwick is just appearing. White is represented by an immense stock of well-grown Ivory, with Mrs. Henry Robinson and Lynnwood Hall for fancies. William Duckham and Maud Dean are the best pinks. A few of the varieties mentioned last week can still be had in fair numbers. A limited quantity of Golden Age is arriving. The bulk of the fancy stock is required for suburban teas and shipping orders.

Pompons have improved in quality and in varieties. Klondyke and other leaders have arrived, also Garza.

Violets are improving in quality; both singles and doubles are important factors in the flower market.

Banquet to Mr. Lonsdale.

As readers of this column have already been informed, a complimentary banquet was tendered to Edwin Lonsdale on his leaving for California to take charge of the new Burpee seed farms. The affair was held at Dooner's hotel, Tenth and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, Thursday, October 28. The list of those present was given last week. The program of toasts was as follows:

Toasts.

"We'll have a speech straight. Come, give us a taste of your quality."—Hamlet.

Chairman, Joseph Heacock, president Florists' Club of Philadelphia.

Toastmaster, Hon. Wm. B. Smith, ex-mayor of Philadelphia.

"Where McGregor sits, that's the head of the table."—Scottish Proverb.

Address by Chairman.

Remarks by Toastmaster.

"Many are called, but few are chosen."

"Our Honored Guest," response by Edwin Lonsdale, Philadelphia.

"Horticulture," Patrick O'Mara, New York City.

"The Seed Trade," W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia.

"Floriculture," Elijah A. Wood, Boston, Mass.

"The Nursery Trade," Thomas B. Meehan, Philadelphia.

"The Seed Growers," W. C. Langbridge, Albany, N. Y.

"The Society of American Florists," F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.

"Possibilities East and West," John Burton, Philadelphia.

"Our Friends, the Botanists," W. R. Smith, Washington, D. C.

"The Men Who Do Things," J. Otto Thillow, Philadelphia.

"Our Friends, the Sports," John Westcott, Philadelphia.

Edwin Lonsdale was the recipient of a handsome Victrola, or improved talking machine, with all the latest songs. It was given him by his friends at the farewell banquet at Dooner's hotel, October 28.

Early Flowering Chrysanthemums.

Among the plants of especial interest selected by J. D. Eisele on a recent visit to Riverton were several frames of early-flowering chrysanthemums. These chrysanthemums were in full bloom during the third week in October, protected merely by sash at night. They were several weeks in advance of the hardy pompons under the same treatment, a great ad-

A Word of Explanation.

Under the head of West Grove, which appeared in this column two weeks ago, was a brief description of the Conard & Jones Co. place. The introductory sentence said that West Grove boasted two live concerns and one that was not so live.

This was intended for a mild joke, the live concerns being the Dingee & Conard Co. and the Conard & Jones Co., both growers of roses and other plants. The third concern makes caskets. It seems, however, that some of the REVIEW readers, not being aware of this fact and possibly not having read the article headed "D. & C. Expansion" which appeared in this column in the previous issue, came to the conclusion that the one that was not so live must be the Dingee & Conard Co. To correct this error these lines are written, with respectful admiration for the energy and ability that made it possible for the D. & C. Co. to absorb Heller Bros., as personified in P. Joseph Lynch.

Various Notes.

The Joseph Heacock Co. exhibited two fine vases of Carnation Dorothy Gordon at the Florists' Club's meeting, and Mr. Heacock read an account of the carnation. William Kleinheinz sent a few words of hearty endorsement of this splendid variety. Pennock-Meehan Co. staged two handsome vases of White Killarney grown by A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn. Charles Henry Fox will speak at the December meeting.

Charles M. Weaver and Mrs. Weaver, Ronks Station, Lancaster county, visited this city on their bridal trip.

The Robert Craig Co. has contracted with D. T. Conner, representing Lord & Burnham Co., for one propagating house 21x300, to be erected immediately at the new plant at Norwood.

Samuel McClements, of Randolph & McClements, Pittsburg, and W. J. Palmer, Buffalo, were among our recent visitors.

Charles W. Cox, in charge of the Pennsylvania hospital, will succeed Edwin Lonsdale as superintendent of the horticultural department of Girard College.

J. Bancroft Swayne, Kennett Square, and Miss Helen Bernard were married recently and left for a trip in the south.

Henry M. Weiss & Sons, Hatboro, Pa., have ordered material for one propagating house 150 feet long from Lord & Burnham Co., D. T. Conner representative.

Eugene Bernheimer reports that the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., have completed their corridor house connecting their mammoth greenhouses with the office and cooling room. It is 40x35.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. has issued duplicate postals to its customers and friends asking whether they prefer having a price list mailed direct or published each week in the REVIEW. Phil hopes that anyone who has enjoyed this column and believes it is of value will vote in favor of the REVIEW.

A hardy chrysanthemum show is being held by the Henry F. Michell Co. from November 2 to November 6. Flowers have been received from Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons' Co., White Marsh, Md.; the Amon Heights Nurseries, Merchantville, N. J., and Thomas Meehan & Sons Co., Germantown, Pa.

Edwin Lonsdale expects to leave for Lompoc, Cal., November 10.

The genial Paul Berkowitz reports October business larger than last season, with indications of phenomenal volume by New Year's.

Lynnwood Hall, as sent by William Swayne, of Kennett, to W. J. Baker, is a white chrysanthemum of fancy quality.

Robert A. Craig is justly proud of four magnificent houses of begonias, Lorraine, Lonsdale Pink and Agatha, that are better than last season. Mr. Craig, by the way, was privileged to deliver the valedictory speech at the Lonsdale dinner.

Arthur Zirkman, of M. Rice & Co., returned last week from a successful New England trip. Mr. Zirkman reports an

* RAMBLING JOTTINGS.

F. X. Dienst, of Middletown, N. Y., reports good business and is preparing for a banner season.

E. A. Lorentz, of Middletown, was out gunning for bear. Meanwhile business was being well taken care of by his side partner.

J. K. Lamereaux, of Port Jervis, N. Y., has a rush of funeral work and is a born artist in that line.

E. B. Holtslander, of Liberty, N. Y., left this busy sphere, passing into the great beyond recently, after a long siege of illness. He was the friend of all who knew him and had built up a nice business, which is being taken care of by his widow, who shared for many years the labors connected therewith. She has the best wishes of the REVIEW for continued success.

Josephine is the choice of A. H. Woeppel, of Corning, N. Y., for the best early mum, being a bright, early yellow. It can also be grown for Christmas, by late propagation. It is a capital variety for bench or pots and a good sort for the small grower. Carnations are very promising here and Richmond roses never looked better. It will take a good one to beat this sterling rose.

W. A. Wettlin, of Hornell, N. Y., had no idea so many primulas and cinerarias were sold until he advertised his stock in the REVIEW and received a batch of orders that will take many of the well grown plants.

The illness of Mrs. W. H. Wright, of Sidney, N. J., has compelled her to relinquish the business.

Mrs. B. Ackley, of Oneonta, N. Y., is reported seriously ill. She is a pioneer florist and has built up a good business, now being taken care of by Mr. Ackley. It is hoped she may soon be well again.

E. F. Quinn, of Norwich, N. Y., finds the cement refrigerator recently built a fine investment, a money saver. Stock keeps well without ice.

C. H. Wilbur, of Binghamton, N. Y., is the first fellow craftsman to own an auto in that city, and finds it quite an ad. M.

LIGUSTRUM SINENSE.

Ligustrum Sinense forms a good subject for the back of a shrubbery, an isolated lawn specimen, or a bold group in the wilder parts of the garden, for it is a vigorous growing shrub, which blossoms freely and possesses the additional advantage of bearing ornamental fruit at a later period. Many of the privets are too stiff in habit to be called really ornamental plants, but the one under notice is exempt from that criticism, for the habit cannot be objected to at all. Under certain conditions, it assumes the proportions of a small tree, with a trunk nine inches or a foot in diameter, but more frequently it adopts the habit of a large-headed bush, sixteen to twenty feet in height. The leaves are oval, but smaller and thinner in texture than those of the oval-leaved privet. The flowers are borne profusely in elegant panicles, three to four inches long, and are quite white. The flowering time, according to a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine (English), is July. About September, the bushes are again conspicuous by reason of the tiny black fruits which quite cover the branches. As is the case with the majority of privets, this shrub can be grown without trouble even in poor soil. It, however, like most other plants, assumes

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Business the last week has been brisk, and with the arrival of cooler weather the shortening of all kinds of stock had a telling effect on the wholesale market. While prices have not materially advanced, conditions have brightened perceptibly. All Saints' day brought unusual activity into the retail stores. The Sixth street flower market was a busy place last Saturday, with delightful weather. Every one of the stand-holders was well pleased, and it is astonishing to see the amount of stock sold on an occasion of this kind. Chrysanthemums, of course, were in the lead. American Beauty roses are about equal in supply and demand. Tea roses, in all varieties, are more plentiful, and are rapidly improving in quality, prices ranging from $2 to $6 per hundred.

Chrysanthemums are being received in fine condition, and the demand is good; the prevailing prices ranging, for medium stock, from $3 to $12; extra well grown blooms of midseason varieties from $15 to $25. Carnations are not proving equal

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. O. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE Dutch bulbs are getting well cleaned up.

LAST week's boat from Holland brought to New York only forty-two cases of bulbs.

ALBERT DICKINSON, president of the Albert Dickinson Seed Co., Chicago, was 68 years of age October 28.

PETER HENDERSON & Co., New York, received 356 bags of garden seeds on the boat from Rotterdam, October 26.

DISCOURAGING reports are to hand from Erfurt, Germany, where the seed growing district is said to have suffered heavily from recent storms.

THE first valley pips of the 1909 crop arrived at New York October 28, on the steamer Bluecher, eight cases consigned to Wm. Hagemann & Co.

ONE of the wise old heads of the trade still believes seed shortages never are so serious as they are made out to be; if one variety is short something else takes its place.

R. W. LAUGHLIN, of the Laughlin Seed Co., Kenton, O., has been making a trip among the onion growers of central New York and reports the crop good and the industry flourishing.

MARSHALL H. DURYEA, vice-president of the American Seed Trade Association, was in Chicago October 30, hastening home from the northwest to New York to begin a term of jury service November 1.

THE Ozark Seed Co., Springfield, Mo., has completed its organization and is awaiting the completion of the remodeling of its building, which will be early in December, when the concern will at once open for business.

THE president of the American Seed Trade Association, J. C. Robinson, of Waterloo, Neb., is a member of the jury in the Federal Court at Omaha that is hearing the case against the bandits charged with holding up the Overland Limited near Fremont, Neb., May 22.

THE two-story seed storage house at Fifteenth and Proovst streets, Jersey City, N. J., owned by Jacot & Mullen, of 1 Water street, New York city, was damaged by fire October 28 and $50,000 worth of grass and other seeds destroyed. The firemen poured water on the burning seed bags for nearly four hours. The total loss is $70,000. The firm carried $50,000 insurance on stock, $40,000 on machinery and $10,000 on the building.

WE do not seem to be able to get along without the REVIEW.—L. L. OLDS SEED Co., Madison, Wis.

Are You Customer Or Client?

A client is one who buys regularly—an active account. A customer is one who buys once—a transient account. A client is a vital part of the good will of a firm, whereas a customer is not. We welcome the customer of course, because it is by securing customers that we make clients. Naturally a client has a decided advantage, being part of the organization. His requirements, his peculiarities and manner of doing business are better known and respected, and business with him is conducted very easily and to mutual advantage.

When a client buys Bulbs, he realizes he is making an investment; whereas a customer generally considers it a mere purchase or speculation. We make clients out of nine-tenths of our customers because Horseshoe Brand Bulbs are as good an investment as a capable grower can make in his business. They bring the best returns when properly handled.

We import all kinds of Bulbs, some Plants, Nursery Stock, and such odds and ends as Bamboo Canes, Cycas, Stone Lanterns, etc.

VIRGINIA BULB GROWERS.

D'Alcorn & Sons, the bulb growers of Portsmouth, Va., have leased their greenhouses and land to the Hubert Bulb Co., of that city, and are now located at Congress Heights, D. C., in the Randall mansion. They only arrived September 6 and have up to the present turned eight acres of golden rod into a bulb garden. Being too late to get houses erected, they bought 100 sashes of the Sunlight Double Sash Co., Louisville, Ky.

It will be remembered that D'Alcorn & Sons bought out the American Bulb Co., of Petersburg, recently. This business they have resold to the Hubert Bulb Co., and so the whole industry in this country is now in the hands of three Englishmen.

THE VALUE OF SEEDS.

Views of Seedsmen's League.

The values of seeds as suggested by the directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League have now become available to the general seed trade, having been held back for one week from those not members of the organization, by motion adopted by the Board. The secretary's circular is as follows:

Secretary's office, Bristol, Pa.,
October 21, 1909.

On Wednesday, the 20th of October, consequent upon a call issued by the secretary by direction of President F. W. Bruggerhof, a special meeting of the board of directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League was held at the Hardware Club, New York City, to consider the subject of wholesale trade values of seeds as influenced by the conditions of the past summer.

E. E. Bruggerhof, representing J. M. Thorburn

W. E. Langbridge, representing J. B. Rice Seed Co.
Burnet Landreth, Jr., representing D. Landreth Seed Co.
Many subjects were considered looking forward to the betterment of seed trade conditions, but the principal business of the meeting was the discussion and determination of what appeared to be the present trade values of seeds as debated by the board, initial prices for the autumn season, prices not binding on anyone but expressive of the view of the directors assembled, men who have made a study not only of the crop returns in America and Europe but of the supplies on hand—all this in connection with probable wants of consumers.
The list of various garden vegetable seeds so passed upon numbered 203. It is not probable that at the November meeting of the board, on the 17th, any reduction in the values will be suggested, but to the contrary it is quite possible if shortages prove yet more serious that many of these suggested values will be advanced.

BURNET LANDRETH,
Secretary of the League.

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $28,914.

THE ONION CROP.

The marketable crop of onions east of the Rocky mountains and north of the Ohio river will amount to 4,016,000 bushels, or practically the same as last year, according to reports compiled by one of the agricultural papers. The crop is unevenly distributed, certain sections showing up better than a year ago, others deficient; still others, for example Connecticut, seem to be working out of the onion business and into crops regarded as more profitable.

Thus this money crop is distributed somewhat unevenly this year, and has brought disappointment to a good many growers. For example, the important Green Bay territory of Wisconsin is practically out of the race the present season. The spring was wet, this was followed by a dry summer, and finally magots got in their work, practically ruining earlier prospects. Uneven conditions have prevailed in northern Illinois and in Michigan.

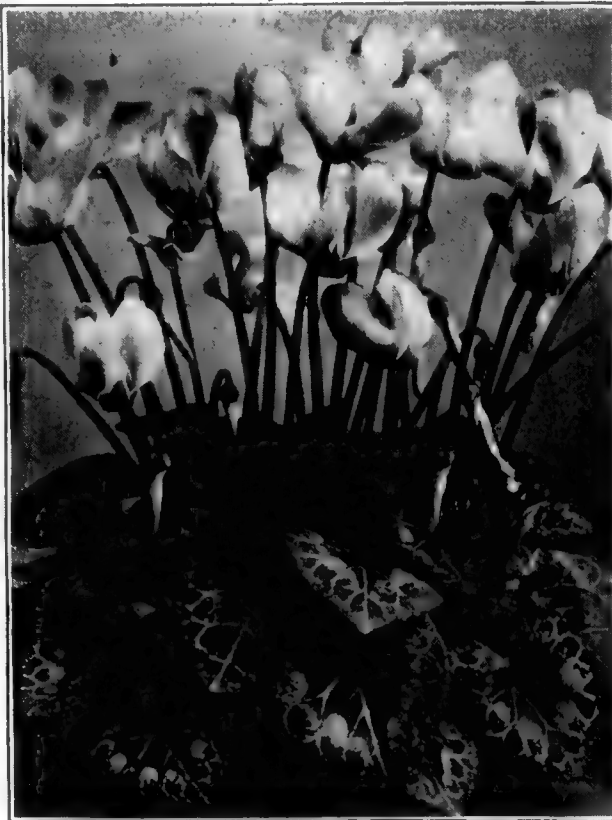

Late summer drought interfered with the crop in New York, but ultimately the weather turned for the better. This is also generally true of the Connecticut valley, where the cultivation is handled in the most thorough manner. The following summary shows acreage and crop in leading states:

	Acres.	Bushels.
Massachusetts	1,450	580,000
Connecticut	300	45,000
New York.....	3,850	1,155,000
Ohio	3,700	1,184,000
Illinois	900	135,000
Indiana	2,000	550,000
Michigan	750	169,000
Wisconsin	600	105,000

The Ohio crop is always tremendously important in volume, and, therefore, in the shaping of autumn and winter values. Advices indicate that a good many onions are being put into storage rather than accept present bid prices of 36 to 42 cents. While many of the smaller growers are selling, large operators are placing in storage in such onion counties as Hardin, Wayne, Ashtabula, etc.

The onion crop of New York is largely found in Orange county, as usual; also Madison county, Long Island and others have a full to increased acreage. The main crop is about ten days late, although more or less of it has been marketed. Insects caused some damage, checking the growth, and many onions are under-size, although the stock is good and sound.

TROUBLE WITH WORMS.

A small green worm, similar to the cabbage worm but much smaller, is working on our lettuce in the greenhouses. We have never been bothered with this pest before. It works on the under side of the leaves. Kindly give a remedy at your earliest convenience. H. F. H.

At this time of year many growers are troubled with worms on all kinds of vegetables inside. Sometimes they are brought in with young plants and sometimes they hatch inside, from eggs laid by the many different kinds of moths and butterflies. They are usually hard to get rid of, because fumigating does not affect them, and poison is out of the question, on account of the danger.

The first precaution would be to kill all butterflies as fast as they appear in the house. Then go all over the plants one at a time, turning the leaves carefully in places where one has been eating. It is a tedious task, but going once or twice over a crop will catch enough of them so that what are left will do little damage. H. G.

WORMS ON CUCUMBER LEAVES.

We have a house in winter cucumbers, which seemed to be all right until the last few days, when we noticed small worms working on the leaves. They resemble a measuring worm and are from one-half to a little over an inch in length. They are just eating up the leaves. We have tried Paris green and fumigating paper, but do not like to use the gas for fear of killing the tips of the vines. R. & S.

It is difficult to tell what the worm is without seeing it, but if it is the fellow I am familiar with, I would advise you to go over every plant carefully, look sharp for places where they have been eating and catch them at it. A person can hunt over a lot of young plants in a half day and I believe this is the best way to get rid of them. There will probably not be any more after these are picked off now.

Fumigating will do no good, even with gas, in this case. Paris green is liable to injure the foliage. Sometimes similar pests can be poisoned by taking some lettuce or cabbage leaves, over which Paris green has been sprinkled, and laying them around on the bench near the stalks of the cucumber vines. H. G.

WORMS ON LETTUCE.

Will you please tell me what I can do to get rid of a worm that is working on my lettuce? It resembles a cabbage worm, but is a little darker. I am sending you three or four specimens in a box. Last winter I was not bothered with them, but it was the first part of December before I sowed any seed, and in a new greenhouse. This year I took plants from the open ground September 1, and the worms are about to take the crop. G.

The worms, although similar to cabbage worms, are not the same. Just what they are I am unable to say, but they undoubtedly were carried in from the outside with the plants and will probably change into some kind of butterfly soon. If they do, the butterflies should be caught and killed before they lay any eggs.

It will be a hard proposition to get rid of the worms now. You cannot do it by fumigating or by poisoning them. If they do not hatch out at once, they must be picked off by hand. It will be a tedious task, but probably the only way to save the plants. Little chicks might hunt them, but would probably eat the lettuce too. Going twice over the crop by hand ought to save it. H. G.

VEGETABLE AND CARNATIONS.

Please tell me how to fumigate my greenhouse. I have carnations in it and also vegetables. Will the smoke hurt the vegetables? I have put some phosphate on the soil now. Will this do, or will I have to use something stronger? What is the best to use?

I wish to force some asparagus under the bench. Can it be done? I have nice three-year-old roots.

How shall I treat tomatoes to have good success and how about their diseases? Are they much more trouble than carnations? I have forced vegetables in hotbeds only and am less acquainted with the methods in large greenhouses. J. M.

Your vegetables will stand as much smoke as your carnations ought to have. If tobacco smoke is too strong, it takes the color and smell out of the flowers.

A nice way to fumigate is to get an old wash boiler or similar article and tie a rope to one handle, make a fire in it of paper and a handful of dry stems, then put on the damp stems and drag it through the house slowly, filling the house well with thick smoke, but take the smoking can out with you when you get to the end. The time to smoke is before you see insects. Keep them from breeding by light fumigations each week and you will avoid lots of trouble.

As to fertilizer, I could not say without more particulars. Was the soil good and fresh when put in? What else have you in the house, and are they all growing fairly well now, or not? A sick plant, like a sick person, needs little food. If healthy and growing well, more can be used.

You can force the asparagus under the benches in a bed of soil about a foot deep. Pack the root clumps close together and fill in between them with soil. Water them well. When done bearing, throw them away and have more clumps ready to replace them. Since asparagus likes a warmer temperature than your other crops, it will come slowly with you and may not pay you.

Tomatoes should be trained to a single stem, keeping all branches picked off as fast as they show. A plant about five feet tall, with six or seven nice clusters of fruit on it, makes a fairly good plant. They can be grown in rows, fifteen inches apart in the row and the rows about three feet apart, or one row only on a 3-foot bench. Carnations and lettuce must be grown in cooler houses than tomatoes, asparagus and cucumbers. There are three or four diseases which make tomato growers some trouble. H. G.

PACIFIC COAST.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

Business conditions at present are as good as in any former year, and probably better. Stock seems somewhat scarce, but there are prospects of a good supply of first-class cut flowers. The supply of carnations is not equal to the demand, and good roses have not appeared in plenty yet. Asters were plentiful and the quality good, so these, along with other outdoor stock, have kept something on hand. The Crego asters were especially good. The writer had a few other kinds, such as Henderson's Invincible and Carlton, but Crego proved the best.

Various Notes.

Carnations have done well since being planted in. The Northwestern Floral Co. and A. A. Hinze grow them under glass all the season. No one makes much of an attempt at rose growing under glass around Tacoma. Our damp, cloudy, foggy weather does not prove an ideal kind of weather for rose growing, anyway, so the roses mostly come from where there is more sunshine.

John Hamilton has received a new hot water boiler of the Kroeschell style, and it certainly will do the work wanted.

There has not been much going on in additions to greenhouses for flowers, but some have gone up for vegetable growing, which pays as well as flower growing, or better. Lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers are all ready sellers at good prices, and practically there is never an over-supply of any of them. Several of our leading growers have carnations for the winter, but throw them out to make room for tomatoes early in the season. They say the latter pay better than flowers. We know of some who throw them out then and buy them for the extra demand they get through the season. Stock in general looks well at all the places.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The banquet given by the Chamber of Commerce, for President Taft, was beautiful and unique. The Shrine auditorium was elaborately decorated for the occasion by the Roth-Reymond Floral Co., who are among the leading florists. On the stage, where the President's table was placed, a Spanish patio was built. The pergola was covered with grape vines, bearing large clusters of fruit. The effect was carried out by a drop curtain at the back of the stage, on which was painted a Spanish garden. Palms and flowers were so arranged as to make the vista seem real. The President's table was decorated with a centerpiece of orchids, valley and maidenhair. There were seventy tables, each having centerpieces of roses, with many full blown roses scattered loosely over the cloth and ribbons. The girders were festooned with plumosus and smilax and from them hung forty baskets seven feet in diameter, while from the chandeliers hung baskets twelve feet in diameter, brilliant with electric lights. Near the President was an electric fountain which sent forth California violet water. On the wall was an electric map of the United States, about fifteen feet square, each state outlined by white electric lights, while with

The great Portola festival has come and gone, and the city has resumed its usual appearance again. Although there were probably 300,000 visitors in town during the last week, reports from the various retailers do not agree as to the increase in the volume of business caused thereby. Some are inclined to doubt that the florists derived much business from the influx, while others report a decided gain from the situation. It is apparent, however, that business was at least fifty per cent better than at the corresponding period of last year. The greatest demand was for flowers of the Portola colors, and anything in the line of red or yellow was quickly disposed of.

At the present writing the prices of stock have declined somewhat, while the quantity is greatly on the increase. Carnations are in splendid form and color, and roses are getting better than they have been at any time since early summer. Chrysanthemums are the most popular flower at present, and the prices on both inside and outside stock have a tendency to point downward. This is due to a great extent to the favorable weather with which we have been blessed for the last month.

Violets are quite plentiful, and the price remains stationary at 75 cents per dozen bunches. Sweet peas, gladioli and dahlias are practically out of the market. Orchids, from Santa Cruz principally, are in steady demand. Several of the Alameda county growers are apparently rather late about showing their stock. Cut asparagus and maidenhair are still plentiful, and will be so until a few days

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.
Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

THE Crystal Springs Nursery has been incorporated at Seattle, Wash., with a capital of $10,000, by M. Furuya, W. L. Gazzam and W. A. Kuene.

THE Granville Nursery Co. has been incorporated at Granville, N. Y., with a capital of $5,000. The directors are John A. Farmer and John Farmer, of Granville, and Edgar B. Farmer, of Quincy, Mass.

A FEW years ago a nurseryman could do a pretty good business with nothing except fruit trees on his grounds, but nowadays he finds ornamentals pretty nearly essential and herbaceous stock a valuable department.

A. C. STOWER, of the Stower Nursery Co., Beaumont, Cal., recently purchased about fifteen acres of land, thus increasing the area of the firm's property to something over sixty acres. The ground will be planted to apple, cherry, pear and peach trees.

THE way the nursery business has developed under the hands of some of the good managers in the trade is little appreciated by those whose acquaintance with nurseries is gained from an occasional visit to some local retail tree farm. The approaching census should do something to show the true importance of the industry.

HALL SUCCEEDS SEAGER.

George C. Seager has resigned as secretary of the American Association of Nurserymen and F. H. Stannard, president of the association, has announced the appointment of John Hall, of Rochester, to fill the vacancy until the next annual election.

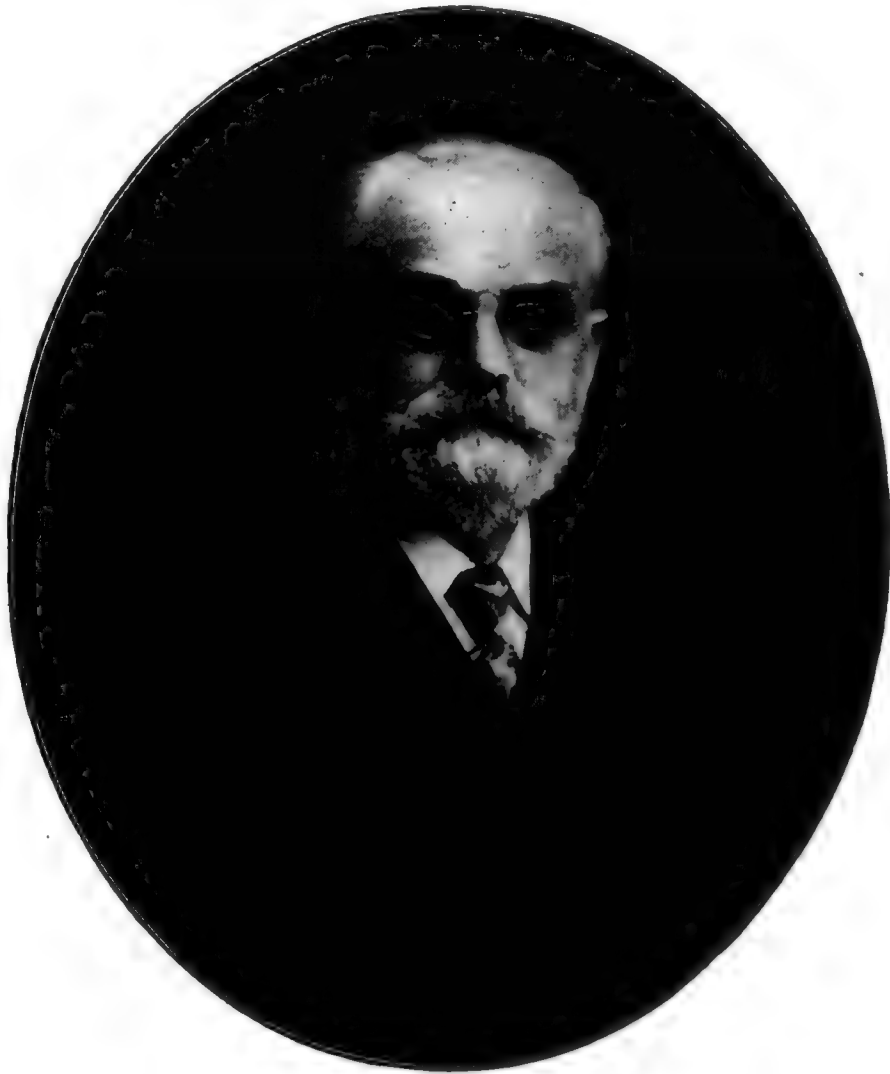

John Hall is widely known among the trade as the secretary and treasurer of the Western New York Horticultural Society, with offices at 204 Granite building, Rochester. He has filled this position for twenty-one years, and the society now has a membership of nearly 1,500. Mr. Hall is also a member of the board of park commissioners of Rochester. He had an early training in newspaper work and stenography, and was for nearly fifteen years associated with the firm of the late James Vick, so that his experience includes practically all branches of the trade. Mr. Hall's appointment has been received with much approval by those who have heard of it. William C. Barry, of Ellwanger & Barry, who is president of the Western New York Horticultural Society, when informed of it, said: "I am glad to know Mr. Hall has been appointed secretary of the national association. I consider his appointment an extremely good one, for he is exceedingly well qualified to fill the office. The association is fortunate in its selection."

George C. Seager has been secretary for sixteen years, having been first elected at the world's fair meeting in Chicago. He wanted to withdraw at the Rochester meeting, but was not then permitted to have his way. In all its thirty-three years the association has had but the volume of business handled during the month just past was far in advance of that of previous years. Stock of all kinds is arriving in generous quantities, and is only equal to the demand. A marked improvement in roses and carnations is a pleasing note, and incidentally the shortening up of the large amount of poor stock.

The lateness of the chrysanthemum season has been felt to a certain extent so far, but many of the midseason varieties will soon be ready to meet the demand, which promises to be brisk.

John Hall.

(Appointed Secretary American Association of Nurserymen.)

three secretaries preceding Mr. Hall: D. W. Scott, of Galena, Ill., from 1876 to 1887; Chas. A. Green, Rochester, from 1888 to 1892, and Mr. Seager, for the latter half of the life of the organization.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The weather has not been so favorable as we would like to see it at this time of the year, but it may be hoped that the next two weeks will force the mercury to take a downward course.

It is quite agreeable to observe that

Violets are arriving in better form, the bulk of the supply coming from the Hudson river district. Some good singles are being sent in by local growers. Valley has become a proposition, since the demand has increased so fast that it is difficult for the growers to regulate the quantity needed for each season's forcing. The few local orchids are snapped up quickly.

Various Notes.

The William L. Rock Flower Co. has executed several big wedding decorations recently, and has had parties galore. Mr. Rock says that every indication is favor-

J. H. Austin is nicely located near the intersection of Linwood boulevard and Troost avenue. Mr. Austin has the advantage of a splendid location in the heart of a fashionable district.

The windows of the Alpha Floral Co. were weirdly dressed last week, with pumpkin Jack-o'-lanterns and a nice showing of mums. Mr. Elberfeld reports a satisfactory business.

Samuel Murray received quite a good many favorable comments upon his display of English hothouse grapes, which he grew for a novelty. Mr. Murray succeeded in capturing most of the prizes offered in the horticultural department of the Missouri Valley Fair, held recently at Electric park. M. C.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.
 Officers for 1910: Pres., F. H. Stannard, 901 E. 10th St., Kansas City, Mo.; Vice Pres., W. P. Stark, 1001 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.; Secy., John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., F. Yates, Rochester, N. Y.; Hon. Secy., J. C. Seager, Denver, Colo.

The Crystal Springs Nursery has been incorporated at Seattle, Wash., with a capital of $10,000, by M. Finny, W. L. Gorman and W. A. Kneue.

The Granville Nursery Co. has been incorporated at Granville, N. Y., with a capital of $5,000. The directors are John A. Farmer and John Farmer, of Granville, and Edgar B. Farmer, of Quincy, Mass.

A few years ago a nurseryman could not do pretty good business with nothing except fruit trees on his grounds, but nowadays he finds ornamentals pretty nearly essential and herbaceous stock a valuable department.

A. C. STOWER, of the Stower Nursery Co., Beaumont, Cal., recently purchased about fifteen acres of land, thus increasing the area of the firm's property to something over sixty acres. The ground will be planted to apple, cherry, pear and peach trees.

The way the nursery business has developed under the hands of some of the good managers in the trade is little appreciated by those whose acquaintance with nurseries is gained from an occasional visit to some local retail tree farm. The approaching census should do something to show the true importance of the industry.

HALL SUCCEEDS SEAGER.

George C. Seager has resigned as secretary of the American Association of Nurserymen and F. H. Stannard, president of the association, has announced the appointment of John Hall, of Rochester, to fill the vacancy until the next annual election.

John Hall is widely known among the trade as the secretary and treasurer of the Western New York Horticultural Society, with offices at 204 Granite building, Rochester. He has filled this position for twenty one years, and the society now has a membership of nearly 1,500. Mr. Hall is also a member of the board of park commissioners of Rochester. He had an early training in newspaper work and stenography, and was for nearly fifteen years associated with the firm of the late James Vick, so that his experience includes practically all branches of the trade. Mr. Hall's appointment has been received with much approval by those who have heard of it. William C. Barry, of Ellwanger & Barry, who is president of the Western New York Horticultural Society, when informed of it, said: "I am glad to know Mr. Hall has been appointed secretary of the national association. I consider his appointment an extremely good one, for he is exceedingly well qualified to fill the office. The association is fortunate in its selection."

George C. Seager has been secretary for sixteen years, having been first elected at the world's fair meeting in Chicago. He wanted to withdraw at the Rochester meeting, but was not then permitted to have his way. In all its thirty-three years the association has had but the volume of business handled during the month just past was far in advance of that of previous years. Stock of all kinds is arriving in generous quantities and is only equal to the demand. A marked improvement in roses and carnations is a pleasing note, and incidentally the shortening up of the large amount of poor stock.

The lateness of the chrysanthemum season has been felt to a certain extent so far, but many of the midseason varieties will soon be ready to meet the demand, which promises to be brisk.

three secretaries preceding Mr. Hall: D. W. Scott, of Galena, Ill., from 1876 to 1887; Chas. A. Green, Rochester, from 1888 to 1892, and Mr. Seager, for the latter half of the life of the organization.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The weather has not been so favorable as we would like to see it at this time of the year, but it may be hoped that the next two weeks will force the mercury to take a downward course.

It is quite agreeable to observe that

Violets are arriving in better form, the bulk of the supply coming from the Hudson river district. Some good singles are being sent in by local growers. Valley has become a proposition, since the demand has increased so fast that it is difficult for the growers to regulate the quantity needed for each season's forcing. The few local orchids are snapped up quickly.

Various Notes.

The William L. Rock Flower Co. has executed several big wedding decorations recently, and has had parties galore. Mr. Rock says that every indication is favor-

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

A week of delightful fall weather may have been responsible, but whatever the cause, business was very good and stock of all kinds cleaned up at fair prices. Among the wholesalers, cleaning up every day was the rule, which was much better than any week for some time previous. Stock of all kinds is coming in, fine roses are exceptionally good and chrysanthemums are beginning to come just a little faster than the trade is asking for them. The shops all have a look of prosperity, and every one of them seems to be doing better than last season.

Various Notes.

Frank Friedberg, of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, was a visitor at the Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co. He is making an inspection of the more modern houses, as he expects to rebuild a part of their plant. While in the city, Mr. Friedberg visited the mum show at Phipps' Conservatories and expressed himself as astonished at the magnitude and quality of the exhibition, and said no wonder people come from a distance, as it would open their eyes, and well repay people in the trade to visit such an exhibition. It is estimated that over 20,000 people visited the show last Sunday.

November 1, being the Club's field day, attracted many out-of-town growers and dealers, who are members, to visit the various greenhouses in the city.

E. C. Reineman, who is closely identified with the trade, has the sympathy of his many friends in the loss of his mother.

E. C. Ludwig, of the Allegheny market, is one of the florists who has abolished the undertakers' discount. He says he wants their business and proposes to get it, but not by giving all the profits to someone else.

A young woman, employed by G. & J. W. Ludwig, committed suicide last Friday by taking carbolic acid.

John Bader is visiting in Virginia where he will combine business and pleasure. Hoo-Hoo.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL. — Robt. M. Dale, formerly in business as a grower of small fruits and vegetables at Normal, Ill., took possession October 1 of the greenhouse plant of A. R. Knowles, at 1201 East Emerson street, in this city. Mr. Knowles is farming at St. Helen, Mich.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Prior to last Thursday we were treated to typical fall weather, with cold nights, which kept the market in a wholesome condition. This was followed by a warm spell, lasting over Sunday, which brought on stock in a rush; but the demand being equal, there was no cause for complaint. Roses were very plentiful, likewise American Beauties, which are of high grade now. Valley, violets, snapdragons and mums all moved well. The carnation is still holding its own, for there has been no oversupply as yet. Reports are that shipping trade continues brisk.

Flower Show.

With most of the florists the coming fall flower show, which opens Thursday, November 11, is the topic of conversation, and after all that has been said and done thus far, it ought to be a success, and no doubt will be, if the weather is favorable and the retail florists co-operate. Premiums for the various classes will be awarded as follows: Thursday, November 11—Mums, both cut and pot plants; also orchids, palms, ferns, miscellaneous flowering and other plants and miscellaneous cut blooms and cut flowers. Friday, November 12—Carnations. Saturday, November 13—Roses. Table decorations to be exhibited and judged November 12, 13 and 14. Entries, up to time of writing, have come in very satisfactorily.

Various Notes.

Holton & Hunkel Co. are cutting some choice American Beauties and mums.

SEEING IS BELIEVING

Therefore we ask everyone interested in Carnations to come and see our new white Carnation Shasta growing. Plants benched early in August are in full crop now, carrying from 10 to 20 buds per plant. Have been cutting good blooms since Sept. 15. As a money making carnation it has no equal. The quality is right, too. Scored 85 points at Indianapolis, April 11, 1908; 85 points, Indianapolis, Jan. 12, 1909; 89 points, A. C. S., at Indianapolis, January 27-28, 1909. Traveled to Boston, Mass., in Feb., 1909, and scored 87 points; 89 points at Springfield, Ill., in March, 1909. Never scored less than 85 points. You can see it growing at either Indianapolis or Tewksbury.

We are booking orders now for January delivery, at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

At the C. C. Pollworth Co. plant they were very busy packing palms and ferns for the Chicago show. They will also exhibit carnations.

Among other growers who think they have prize stock and will exhibit at Chicago are Nic Zweifel, of North Milwaukee; Mueller & Schroeder Co., and Manke Bros. E. O.

DOROTHY GORDON

growing and judge for yourselves of its good qualities. Orders for 60,000 rooted cuttings have been booked without spending anything for printers' ink.

Dorothy Gordon is beyond question the best commercial pink Carnation in sight today. Its pedigree, Lawson on Enchantress, alone should recommend it to every Carnation grower; but pedigree is by no means its chief merit.

It possesses many of its own, such as

- 1st. VIGOROUS CONSTITUTION and FREEDOM FROM DISEASE.
- 2d. Size. Blooms average OVER 3 INCHES, OF EXCELLENT FORM.
- 3d. Color. Resembles Rose-pink Enchantress, but is superior to that variety, in being more uniform.
- 4th. Long, stiff stem.
- 5th. Fragrant.
- 6th. Keeping qualities of the best.
- 7th. Blooming qualities, 30 PER CENT greater than Enchantress.

We had a stock of 6000 plants last winter. The flowers were all sold at the holidays to the trade in Philadelphia at $12.00 per 100, and uniformly sold for 50% more than we got for Enchantress during the rest of the season.

Dorothy Gordon will be disseminated during the winter of 1909 and 1910 at the popular price of $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000. Strictly on its merits. No Carnation grower can afford to be without it. Come and see it growing, examine our books and decide for yourself. It must be sold on its merits or not at all. Orders filled in strict rotation.

ADMIRATION

This carnation we offer to the trade as being one of the finest Carnations of any color that we know of up to date. Being a beautiful shade of pink, somewhat lighter than Winona, having that beautiful satin finish, always showing up well either in natural or artificial light. Plants benched in August are now coming into full crop, carrying from 10 to 20 buds. We have been cutting since September 10th. As a money maker you will find no equal.

The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, excellent form, well built up in the center, with the petals so arranged as to make it stand the general requirements of a good fancy commercial variety. A grand keeper and shipper.

The habit is ideal, upright with no surplus grass and every shoot going into flower. Its freedom and earliness make it nearly the ideal carnation. The calyx is very tough and seldom bursts. Can be handled with great success either from the field or grown inside all summer. No one has to be an expert to handle this variety. It scored 86 points at the American Carnation Society meeting at Indianapolis, January 27 to 28, 1909.

Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

DES MOINES, IA.

The Market.

Business was good last week, with plenty of social functions and some funeral work. Roses and carnations continue scarce, with indications of a good crop coming on for Thanksgiving.

Various Notes.

The J. S. Wilson Floral Co. has bought one and one-quarter acres of land adjoining their greenhouses for $5,000. With this addition, the firm now has the entire block fronting on Thirty-fifth street and 300 feet on Ingersoll avenue. This company had the decoration at the Auditorium Friday night, for the Flora Wilson concert.

Frank Riley, of the Iowa Seed Co., fixed up an attractive Hallowe'en window display, which seemed to be greatly admired by the public, judging from the crowds which blocked the sidewalk, especially in the evenings.

William Trillow is greatly improving his office and salesroom, adjoining his greenhouses, by putting in a fine new corner show window and enlarging the store space. His fast increasing business compels him to make these improvements.

The fine new corner show window of the Guthrie-Lorenz Co. is always attractive and shows off well on this busy corner.

Mrs. J. S. Wilson returned home last week from the Cincinnati convention, having extended her trip by visiting friends in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

The Alpha Floral Co., of this city and also of Chicago, tells us it intends opening a wholesale house in Minneapolis, Minn., shortly. BOOSTER.

THOMPSONVILLE, CONN.—The Brainard Floral & Nursery Co. is building a greenhouse, 25x75 feet, at the nursery and seed department on Maple street. In anticipation of the fall trade, the office and cut flower department on Garden street has been renovated and repainted, and the company is also out with a newly painted and neatly lettered business wagon.

EUREKA SPRINGS, ARK.—The Civic Improvement Association of this city has issued the premium list of its seventh annual chrysanthemum show, to be held November 4 and 5. C. S. Barnett, who is a member of the association's executive committee, makes a specialty of chrysanthemums and has won first prize here for six years.

The Market.

Trade is good, and getting better every day. Stock is fine and there is plenty of it. Mums are moving better than last year at this time, with better prices. Some extra fine Appleton are to be seen, which command the top-notch price. Bonaffon has also made its appearance, and is always a good seller. Halliday also is fine, and is a good second to Appleton. Touset is about all cut out. Pink and white Ivory are just coming in, and are fine. Everyone here is of the opinion that the mum season is going away ahead of last year.

Roses are quite plentiful and the quality is fine, especially Bride, Maid and Killarney. There are quite a few Richmond coming in, but they are not extra long at present. Beauties are moving fairly well, considering the amount of stock in the market.

Carnations are more plentiful, and quality is all that could be desired. Violets are also more abundant.

Various Notes.

The club decided to try to find a suitable hall for the future meetings.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business has been good with everybody, especially in funeral work. Several large funerals were held, one being that of William I. Buchanan, who died in London. The house was decked with flowers from all the eastern cities, and all large work. The local florists all had their share of it, too.

Chrysanthemums are the main attraction now, and as the later varieties come in we see some grand blooms. Roses and carnations are good and sell well. Plants are much in demand now, and a little scarce. Mum plants are selling the best, as cyclamen and begonias do not show up so well as yet.

Various Notes.

The latest addition to the florists' line is a store opened right in the heart of the city. They are selling artificial instead of the natural.

Charles E. Schoenhut covered himself with glory last week in the William street carnival. The affair was held to celebrate the business interests of the street, and our worthy florist was president. It was a big success.

WICHITA, KAN.—W. H. Culp & Co. have sold their property on Market street and are removing the greenhouses from that location to their suburban place in Riverside, a splendid residence section, only two miles from the center of the city. The Market.

The latter part of the week warmed up, and as a result a good crop of roses, mums, lilies, etc., came to this market. Carnations are still scarce and high priced. Greens are scarce in town. Violets are coming to the front, both double and single.

Various Notes.

James Souden is now sole owner of the firm of Souden & Desmond, and will continue the business under his own name. Mr. Souden finds his business increasing daily, and he is looking forward to a record-breaking season.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is cutting some fine long strings of smilax.

Club Meeting.

The Northern Indiana Florists' Association held its fourth regular meeting here October 20. This was the largest and most interesting meeting the society has ever held.

After being royally entertained with a fine lunch by the city florists, George Pastor and Bieberich & Co., the members repaired to Bieberich & Co.'s potting shed and proceeded to discuss the flower business in general.

Five florists were elected to membership. Wabash, Ind., was selected as the next meeting place, and the third Wednesday in January as the time.

George Pastor and Bieberich & Co. have fine, large greenhouse plants, well stocked and all in splendid condition.

WESTFIELD, MASS.

C. H. Jacobs, the Smith avenue florist, has purchased the business of Henry Barton, at 58 Elm street, and also Mr. Barton's greenhouses, on Noble street. Mr. Jacobs has thus added considerably both to his business and his equipment. Mr. Barton had been in business for nearly ten years and had built up a good trade.

James Nicholas, on Dennis street, who has been located here for the last ten years, is pushing his business energetically and successfully and has recently added several greenhouses. As his greenhouses are some distance from the center of the town, he has opened a flower stand in the store of J. W. Craig, on School

Which shows that we are making headway. A good pointer for all. Look! People are getting smarter and wiser from day to day. They have discovered the secret that their success in business is due to Godfrey Aschmann, the wide-awake Philadelphia florist, the plants which he sells having taught them how to better their condition and increase their income. He certainly has opened their eyes, so that they now know what and when and how to buy, and from whom to buy it to yield the most profits.

TESTIMONY FROM MICHELL.

I personally visited Mr. Aschmann's greenhouses September 21, 1909, and found that the Araucarias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Boston, Whitmani, Scottii, Amerpohilli, Todeaoides ferns, Rubber Plants, Kentias and *Areca*s are indeed A No. 1. Have never seen any better plants. The Gloire de Lorraine begonias in 6-in. pots are a perfect wonder, bushy and clean. Have never seen his greenhouses filled with plants as good as they are now.

F. J. MICHELL, of the firm of Henry F. Michell Co., 1018 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 6, 1909.

Mr. Godfrey Aschmann, 1012 W. Ontario St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Sir: I enclose my check. Please receipt and return the bill. The Begonia Gloire de Lorraine (6 in. pots) came to hand in perfect condition and are very nice plants. I will have my gardener see other gardeners, including Mr. Heinz, and invite them to take a look at them and give them your name. I appreciate your promptness and the good quality of the plants. Very truly,
Wm. E. Lincoln, 1206 Union Bank Bldg., Pittsburg, Pa.

Is Your Whole Heating Plant Ready To Fire Up At Short Notice ?

Boiler tight? All the grates sound? No boiler parts lost or broken? All pipe connections tight, and pipes fastened up securely?

Better drop us a line at once and we'll come and look over the whole system, and put in whatever is necessary, or send it to you and let you do it. Whichever way, get after it now—It will save a lot of worry and needless hurry expenses when the first cold spell hits your greenhouses.

Greenhouse Heating.

If subscribers will state clearly the details of their heating problems, the REVIEW will give in this column the opinion of a man thoroughly familiar with the practical side of greenhouse heating.

GROWERS will appreciate their interest in the subject of railroad freight rates when they stop to consider that many of them are paying in freight twice what the coal is worth at the mouth of the mine.

A GROWER whose stock did not produce as it should invested in a recording thermometer and said nothing to his night man, whereupon the reason for poor results became plainly apparent. When introduced to the iron box with the clock in it the average night man, instead of becoming angry because he is being watched, is pleased that he now has the chance of showing what a really good man he is, and proceeds to make the machine mark a perfectly straight line during the hours he is on duty.

A RANGE OF FIVE HOUSES.

I am figuring on heating a plant with a hot water boiler. I have two houses running north and south, 23x126. How many 2½-inch flows and how many 1½-inch returns will be needed for each of these houses, one of them for roses and the other for carnations?

I have two more houses, 23x100, running east and west. In these I expect to grow lettuce, in solid beds twenty feet wide. The boiler is about twenty feet away from these two houses. How much piping will be necessary to keep these houses at 50 degrees at 10 degrees below zero? There is also a small house, 16x50, at the north side of these. J. P. M.

In order to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees for the rose house, it will be necessary to provide about 1,200 square feet of radiating surface. This will require three 2½-inch flow pipes and fifteen 1½-inch returns. For a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees in a carnation house, three 2½-inch flows and eleven 1½-inch returns will be needed.

The lettuce houses can be carried at a somewhat lower temperature. For those that are twenty-three feet wide, three flows and ten returns will answer. In the house 16x50 feet, one flow and seven returns can be used.

PIPING IN EASTERN NEW YORK.

I have two greenhouses, running north-east and southwest. One house is 13x25 and the other 25x120. The side walls measure five feet six inches to the eaves, with two feet of glass in the southeast wall, but no glass in the other side. The gables are fourteen feet high. The boiler-pit, six feet deep, is at the end of the small house. I should like to get directions for piping these houses for hot water.

desired. For 50 degrees the number of returns should be reduced about one-fourth. As the location of the doors is not indicated, it is also impossible to advise definitely regarding the arrangement and location of the coils. As I understand your description, the main building is 25x120 feet, with a wing 13x25 feet along one side, at the end of which house there is a boiler-pit six feet deep.

A 4-inch flow pipe should be carried from the boiler to the middle of the main building, from which point a 3-inch overhead main should lead to each end of the main house. From those points, wall coils should be arranged. Those on the northwest side should follow the wall around to the boiler-room, where they can be joined and connected with the heater by means of a 3-inch return pipe. The coils along the southeast wall should extend from either end to the center, and from that point be connected with the boiler by a 3-inch return. There should be eight 2-inch return pipes in the coils upon the southeast wall and seven returns in each of the coils along the northwest walls.

LARGER PIPES NEEDED.

I am enclosing herewith a diagram of my greenhouse, and wish to know if I will have enough heating surface to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees in zero weather. If not, how much more would be required?

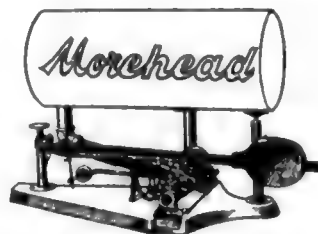

The pipes are all seventy feet long. The top of the boiler is four inches below the return. There is a 50-gallon expansion tank, which is thirteen feet above the boilers. The greenhouse is partly protected by other buildings on the north, south and west sides. I am located in Illinois.

C. W. H.

From the sketch the house appears to be 15x80 feet, with fifteen inches of wooden wall surface exposed. There is one 2½-inch overhead flow pipe and the returns are as follows: One 2½-inch pipe, one 2-inch, one 1½-inch, two 1½-inch and seven 1-inch, in coils that are seventy feet long, making a total of about 425 square feet of radiating surface.

This radiation is almost exactly correct, but it does not appear likely to give satisfactory results for two reasons: First, one-half of the radiation is supplied by 1-inch and 1½-inch pipes, which are too small for use in houses of this length, where the returns are so nearly at the same level as the boiler. Better results could be secured with five 2-inch pipes in place of the seven 1-inch and two 1½-inch pipes. The amount of radiation is also too great for the single 2½-inch flow pipe, as it now has to supply twelve returns. I would advise taking out the 2½-inch return and using it as an overhead flow pipe. This change alone would materially improve the circulation.

OIL FOR FUEL.

We have been considering the proposition of fuel oil for use in greenhouse boilers, and find that we can get it, laid down here, at 8 cents per gallon, by the barrel. Coal screenings cost us, at the greenhouse, $1.68 per ton. We have about 10,000 feet of glass, heated by steam, using two boilers, thirty horsepower and eighteen horse-power, respectively.

Can you give us some information regarding the use of oil as a fuel, the way it is used, the kind of burners needed, etc., and whether or not it would show any advantage over coal at the above-mentioned prices? H. F. C.

The use of fuel oil for the heating of greenhouses has several advantages over that of coal. Much less attention is required, and a more even heat can be secured. The lessening of dust and dirt, and the elimination of the labor and cost of removing ashes when oil is used, also favor the use of oil. However, at the respective prices mentioned for fuel oil and coal, the latter would be found considerably cheaper, even though the cost of handling the ashes is considered.

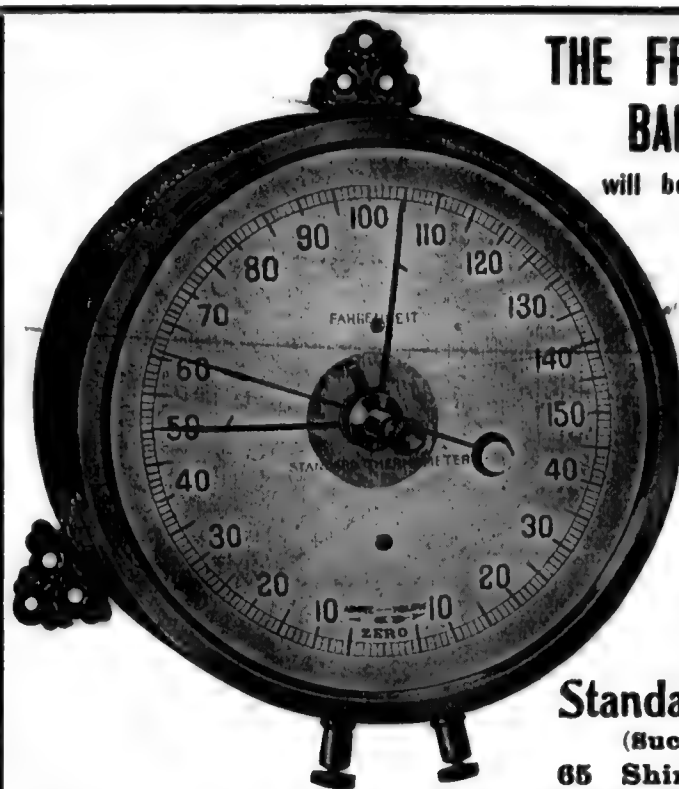

For the burning of oil a pipe is used to carry the oil from the storage tank to the heater, and in most burners a jet of steam is used to inject the oil.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The local market was in first-class condition last week. There was plenty of everything seasonable, and all the leading retailers say they had a splendid business week, and the wholesalers, also, were much pleased with both local and shipping trade. The uptown florists had considerable to do for weddings, receptions, dinners and funerals; the downtown florists all did a splendid transient trade, filled many orders and had large designs for funerals. All stock is becoming of better quality, and prices range according to the demand.

Chrysanthemums, of course, are the leaders in the market at present, and all varieties are coming in, but as yet not in an oversupply, with prices for the extra fancy at $3 per dozen. Roses have been in good demand. At present Beauties are overstocked. Richmond also is more plentiful than the demand. Bride and other white roses sold well, also Killarney and Maid; $5 to $8 is about the top price for fancy stock. Carnations have been scarce, and anything good in this

Another Thing About Quick Repair

We have said, "In case of any accident to the sections of Improved Capitol Boilers, quick repairs can be accomplished more quickly and easily than with any other boiler."

There is something else, though.

Should it be necessary to make use of the quick repair feature, the permanent repair can be made with less expense. Why? Because Capitol Boilers have divided sections. The sections being in halves, it is not necessary to purchase a section for the entire width of the boiler, but for only one half.

line sells well. The leading varieties are Enchantress, White Perfection and Beacon, $4 per hundred being asked for fancy stock.

California violets are having a better demand since the quality has improved. Doubles do not, as a rule, sell well here, but the market had plenty of them last week. Lily of the valley is being received in extra fine quality, and there is plenty of it, with good demand at $4 for extra fancy stock.

In greens the market has everything the trade needs, extra good smilax, green and bronze galax, asparagus strings and bunches of adiantum, and common and fancy ferns.

Various Notes.

R. W. Peterson, of Cincinnati, called on the trade last week in the interest of his father's business and reported a good trade.

Julius Dilhoff, representing Schloss Bros., of New York, was also a visitor last week, and is popular with the trade here.

Henry Emunds, of Belleville, called last week. Mr. Emunds says that he will have a big cut of fancy mum blooms this season, also a good crop of carnations. The bulk of his stock is used for home trade.

orate, at the Columbian Club last week. Five thousand Killarney roses were used and ever so many cases of wild smilax and several loads of decorative plants.

R. J. Windler, at 2300 South Grand avenue, is making attractive window displays, which are drawing some attention in that section.

Ostertag Bros. furnished the decorations for a Hallowe'en party for the members of the Missouri Athletic Club. The decorations consisted of pumpkins cut in all shapes, together with cut flowers and plants. The display was attractive and much admired.

The Riessen Floral Co., on South Broadway, had a good run of trade of late, and was kept busy by President Taft's recent visit.

George Ostertag was acting park commissioner last week, as Park Commissioner Scanlan was away with the members of the board of public improvements on their trip down the river with President Taft.

Miss T. Meinhardt, president of the Ladies' Society of American Florists, says the St. Louis ladies of the society will entertain all visiting lady florists during show week with a theater party.

The Florists' Club's trustees, Messrs. Bentzen, Ostertag and Schoenle, are making big preparations for the entertainment of visiting florists during next week's flower show.

Harry Young, of the firm of C. Young & Sons Co., has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his oldest son, Wheeler H. The young man was 19 years of age, and sick only a few days. The funeral, which was private, took place Saturday, October 30, from the family residence, 5511 Waterman avenue.

Walter Sanders, who was recently married, left for Pecos, Tex., a week ago for his health, and may remain there. His young wife will follow next week. He takes with him the best wishes of all in the trade, and the hopes that he will be successful wherever he locates.

Next week is flower show week here, and the members of the executive board of the St. Louis Horticultural Society are busy arranging every detail so as to be ready for the opening night, Tuesday, November 9. As the show is going to be held in the big arena of the Coliseum this year, a great amount of work will have to be accomplished between now and the opening day. Now that the society and the club are working in harmony, a grand success is promised.

Our wholesalers, C. A. Kuehn, H. G. Berning, W. C. Smith and George Angermueller, say all visiting florists during show week should make their headquarters at their places, and all will be taken care of.

The members of the Florists' Club should not forget that Thursday afternoon, November 11, the club will hold what is called an all-together meeting in Odd Fellows' hall at 2 o'clock. J. F. Ammann will read an interesting paper, and a large number of visitors attending the flower show will be present at the meeting. After the meeting, a smoker with refreshments will be held at a nearby cafe, from which the party will go in a body to visit the flower show in the Coliseum. J. J. B.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy against the Michel Plant & Bulb Co. was filed October 25 in the United States District Court. The petitioners are Leo Rassieur, who has a claim of $500; Eugene H. Michel, $709; Louis Wolgast, $150, and several smaller creditors. They allege the firm admitted in writing its inability to meet its obligations and its willingness to be adjudged bankrupt.

Will all members of Ladies' S. A. F. and other visiting ladies at the St. Louis flower show come to Miss M. Meinhardt at the Coliseum building, Tuesday, November 9, 2 to 5 and 7 to 9 p. m., as she wishes their names?

The Market.

Business continues good. Numerous decorations, coupled with some little funeral work, are keeping the retailers busy. The flower market is one mass of chrysanthemums now, and the price is in keeping with the quantity. The prices on market are less than half those of the retail stores. Mums of the medium grades are selling well, but there is little room for the high-priced blooms. Pompons are coming in quantity and are moving well. Carnations are improving, and are bringing a good price, considering this is the chrysanthemum season. Beauties are continuing in good quality and are selling well. Brides, Bridesmaids, Killarney and Richmond are also enjoying a ready sale, with Killarney in the lead. A number of the department stores have recently held sales of Boston ferns at prices ranging from 13 cents to 25 cents. I do not think these sales will stimulate the flower buying public, as these ferns are shipped without the pots and lie around two or three days before they are sold. After buying, the purchaser pots them in his own way, and you can imagine how long these ferns will last. I think if the wholesaler, who sells these ferns to the department stores, would stop and consider, he would find that he is cutting his own throat.

Various Notes.

Smith & Young are sending in quantities of labiatas.

Sidney Smith says there is more money in raising prize Plymouth Rock roosters than in chrysanthemums, as he says that you cannot even give the mums away on market.

Aphine

Is the new Insecticide that kills

Plant Lice of every species

This has been demonstrated in tests made by the highest scientific authorities of the land, and is proclaimed an infallible remedy for all outside plants.

For the Greenhouse and Conservatory it has no equal among the various insecticides now in use.

APHINE is a combination of essential and ethereal oils, combined with nicotine, in a readily soluble and available form, and can be applied as a spray, wash or dipping solution.

It is used at an average strength of one part APHINE to forty parts water—full directions on each can.

Price, $2.50 Per Gallon

Collier's Weekly says: "Aphine has a future as long and wide as the United States."

Mr. Chas. H. Totty says: "Aphine will do all you claim and more."

Prof. John B. Smith—"You can guarantee your material to be effective against Plant Lice. I know that from personal experience."

Prof. Edmund B. Southwick—"I have given your preparation for the destruction of Aphids a very thorough trial; for this special purpose I have found nothing that compares with it."

Another says—"Aphine will do the work; if you don't believe it, try it."

APHINE is now on sale in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Boston, Rochester, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis, with negotiations pending for agencies in other cities in the United States and Canada.

Business here is about the same as usual. Flowers are quite plentiful just now. Carnations retail at 50 cents and 60 cents per dozen. Mums are now in full swing. Some nice Halliday are seen. The prices range from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Roses are of good quality; they retail at $1.50 and $2 per dozen. Violets retail at $1 per hundred blooms.

All outdoor flowers are now gone, as there was a heavy frost last week. The fall weather here has been fine.

Various Notes.

GREENHOUSE WHITE

Will not chalk, scale or peel. Not affected by dampness, mildew or moisture. A clear, strong white.

John Lucas & Co.

Philadelphia — New York — Chicago — Boston

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Trade has shown a decided improvement and, now that all outside flowers are gone, we may look for good business. The mum season is upon us, and everything in the line of mums sells readily, but somehow they are not as good as usual. The stems are strong, the foliage clean and healthy, but the flowers are lacking both in size and quality. Probably the warm weather has interfered with their development. At any rate, they are below the usual grade, and the growers are all complaining about them.

There is enough stock to meet all demands, except carnations and violets. Roses, except white, are becoming overplentiful, but the funeral of a prominent citizen at the close of the week created a big demand, which almost cleaned up all available stock. There has been an unusually large number of weddings during October this year, which have materially helped the volume of sales. Quite a number of introductory parties and receptions booked for the near future ought to assist the sale of choice stock.

Various Notes.

A recent visit to the greenhouses of the L. S. Donaldson Co., of Minneapolis, found everything there in apple-pie shape, under the skillful guidance of Jerry Jorgenson. The carnations—some 18,000 plants—are exceptionally fine. Perfection, White Enchantress, Pink Enchantress, Beacon and Lawson are the principal varieties grown. A house of cyclamen looked promising, while a bench of araucarias carried through the summer constituted the largest and finest stock of this desirable evergreen to be found in the Twin Cities. This firm has such a large outlet for its products through its retail store that nothing goes to waste. They have recently received a contract for supplying flowers and plants to a new hotel for a year, running well into five figures.

Holm & Olson have completed their new house and boiler-room, and already have it well filled. Plans are being made for an additional range of five houses next season. This firm has also started a nursery of hardy perennials and shrubs for growing stock for their landscape department.

William Swanson, formerly in business with Carl Haugen, has purchased the plant of his late partner and is growing violets and pot plants. Mr. Haugen has retired from the business, temporarily at least.

Charles Keiper, who went west two years ago, has returned to this city and has started in business again at his old stand on the west side.

H. J. Puvogel, on Grand avenue, has built a new and up-to-date salesroom in connection with his greenhouses.

A SWELL LITTLE PLANT HOUSE

Graceful roof lines—Just the right length for its width. The vestibule entrance is so handled that it gives exactly the desirable additional touch of ornamentalness. It perfectly fits the location, for which it was designed.

Being our Sectional Iron Frame Construction, it will last for all time—or pretty close to it.

There is a 50 foot, two compartment cut flower house just back of the plant house.

We erected the range for Mr. A. L. Stevens, Detroit, Mich. Let us send you photographs showing several other views of this splendid layout.

The Only Up-to-Date Sprayer on the Market

A Bonanza for Florists and Fruit Growers

Saves time and material. Will not clog. For water painting, spraying trees and plants, whitewashing, etc.

No. 3—12 Gallons, Net Price, $15.00.

a small amount of liquid, making it a very economical sprayer. The spray will not clog, as the strainer has very small openings through which the liquid must pass before entering pump. The strainer cannot clog, because the agitator passes over openings in it with each stroke of pump, brushing off any dirt or grit that may have any tendency to choke it. The agitator also keeps the liquid thoroughly stirred while using sprayer.

All parts of the machine are made of the best materials obtainable. The hose is of the very best quality. The reservoir is made of heavy, galvanized iron. All essential fittings and valves are made of brass, making it very strong and durable. The pipes are black wrought iron, of good quality. The body of the pump is cast iron, well ribbed to prevent breakage. The screen is of heavy perforated brass and will last many years. The pump frame can easily be removed from tank when it needs cleaning and by running water through machine after using, the entire machinery can be easily and thoroughly cleaned.

PARAGON SPRAYER

Awarded Certificate. Highly commended at S. A. F. Convention, Cincinnati, August, 1909

Its Advantages Over Other Machines

This machine is portable, durably constructed, and so arranged as to be easily operated by one man. It can be brought in close proximity to the work, thereby eliminating the use of a long, expensive hose. Our patented, self-cleaning strainer prevents the necessity of first straining the liquid to be sprayed. This is a point that should not be overlooked, as straining liquid whitewash in particular is a slow and disagreeable task. The spray nozzle has only a 1/32-inch outlet and spreads the liquid well, thereby covering a large surface with

IF YOU ARE A BUYER in the Chicago Market you are interested in buying roses and carnations RIGHT, for these flowers constitute the bulk of your orders. We can sell you this stock RIGHT for several reasons, viz.: We grow more of these flowers than anyone else; we ship flowers on the day they are cut; we figure on doing business every day in the year and we treat you right today, knowing that we will thereby get your business tomorrow; we handle only our own flowers, so we do not have to put in any stale ice-box stock in order to make returns to a consignor, and for the same reason we send you a uniform grade of stock on each order instead of annoying you with a different grade with each shipment. Remember we ship only fresh cut flowers and we sell a good medium grade of roses for 4 cents.

Central Seed & Bulb Co.

Chicago Office, 52 Wabash Ave. Gardens at Benton Harbor, Mich.

Caters to the catalogue trade, and exclusive control given of new varieties. We have a specially prepared booklet showing some of these new things, in addition to the standard varieties, which we should be pleased to mail you free on request. The half tone engravings and the paper are the finest that could be procured, and the printers were given a free hand to produce the best possible work. They did well and you will be interested.

This season we have grown at the Leaflet Park Gardens, Benton Harbor, Mich., over a quarter of a million Gladiolus and 30,000 Dahlias, 75,000 Gladiolus Augusta, 25,000 America, and all the best standard varieties. Many of our bulbs are three inches in diameter. Full lines of Japan and German Iris, Tiger Lilies, Tritomas, Peonies and Oxalis.

Benton Harbor is in the best of the Michigan fruit belt, and the peach and other tender fruits grow to perfection. Here the Gladiolus, Dahlias, Lilies, Iris, and other outdoor flowers thrive in all their glory. We shipped Dahlias to the Chicago Cut Flower Market on Oct. 18th, past. This little booklet shows several of these things. The engraving of Thompson's Hybrids shows the line on which we are working in improving the Gladiolus. Correspondence invited on any American out-of-door bulbs.

Thompson's New Dahlias and others of the bulbs we grow can be procured through the well known and reliable seedsmen:

THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

CHICAGO.

The Chicago flower shows have for years been notable as the largest and most successful from a financial standpoint of any held in the United States, and the exhibition of last week achieved a success especially notable when it is considered that it followed the great national flower show and had to stand comparison with that unparalleled event. From the public point of view this year's Chicago show did not suffer by comparison with the national exhibition. It demonstrated that 75 cents is not too much to charge for admission to an exhibition the size of those given in Chicago, and it turned out that an excellent profit was made for the Horticultural Society of Chicago, in spite of the fact that the show cost between $9,000 and $10,000. The weather was excellent up to Sunday, the closing day, when an all day's rain cut off several hundreds of dollars at the gate, for Sunday the last two years has been among the best days the show has had.

From a trade point of view the number of entries was somewhat disappointing, especially in chrysanthemums and miscellaneous plants, but the arrangement of the cut blooms of roses and carnations on an elevated platform at the end of the hall gave an opportunity for excellent display, the landscape plan was perfect and it was the public's verdict that the general effect of the show was the best yet seen in Chicago. The public knows nothing of number of entries; it is general effect and special features that count.

The Retail Exhibits.

Throughout the week the retail booths were among the specially attractive features and to them a large part of the success of the exhibition must be credited. The retailers were privileged to rearrange their exhibits daily, and judgment was passed each day, the premiums of $100 and $65 in each class being determined by the highest average score. In practically every case the change made in the exhibits was through the renewal of the flowers with some other variety than had previously been used. The table decoration showed the use of a different flower each day, and the wedding booths also demonstrated the effectiveness of different classes of materials. The booth arranged by Miss Schiller became the notable one toward the end of the week, because of the wall decoration which showed her rare facility in the arrangement of flowers, the background used being Asparagus decumbens. Possibly a better decoration than the one photographed and reproduced in this issue was that in which the white pompon chrysanthemum Diana was used. The scores of the retailers were as follows:

Mantel decoration, J. F. Kidwell & Bro., two firsts and four seconds; Schiller Estate, four firsts and two seconds.

Table decoration, E. Wienhoeber Co., six firsts; C. A. Samuelson, six seconds.

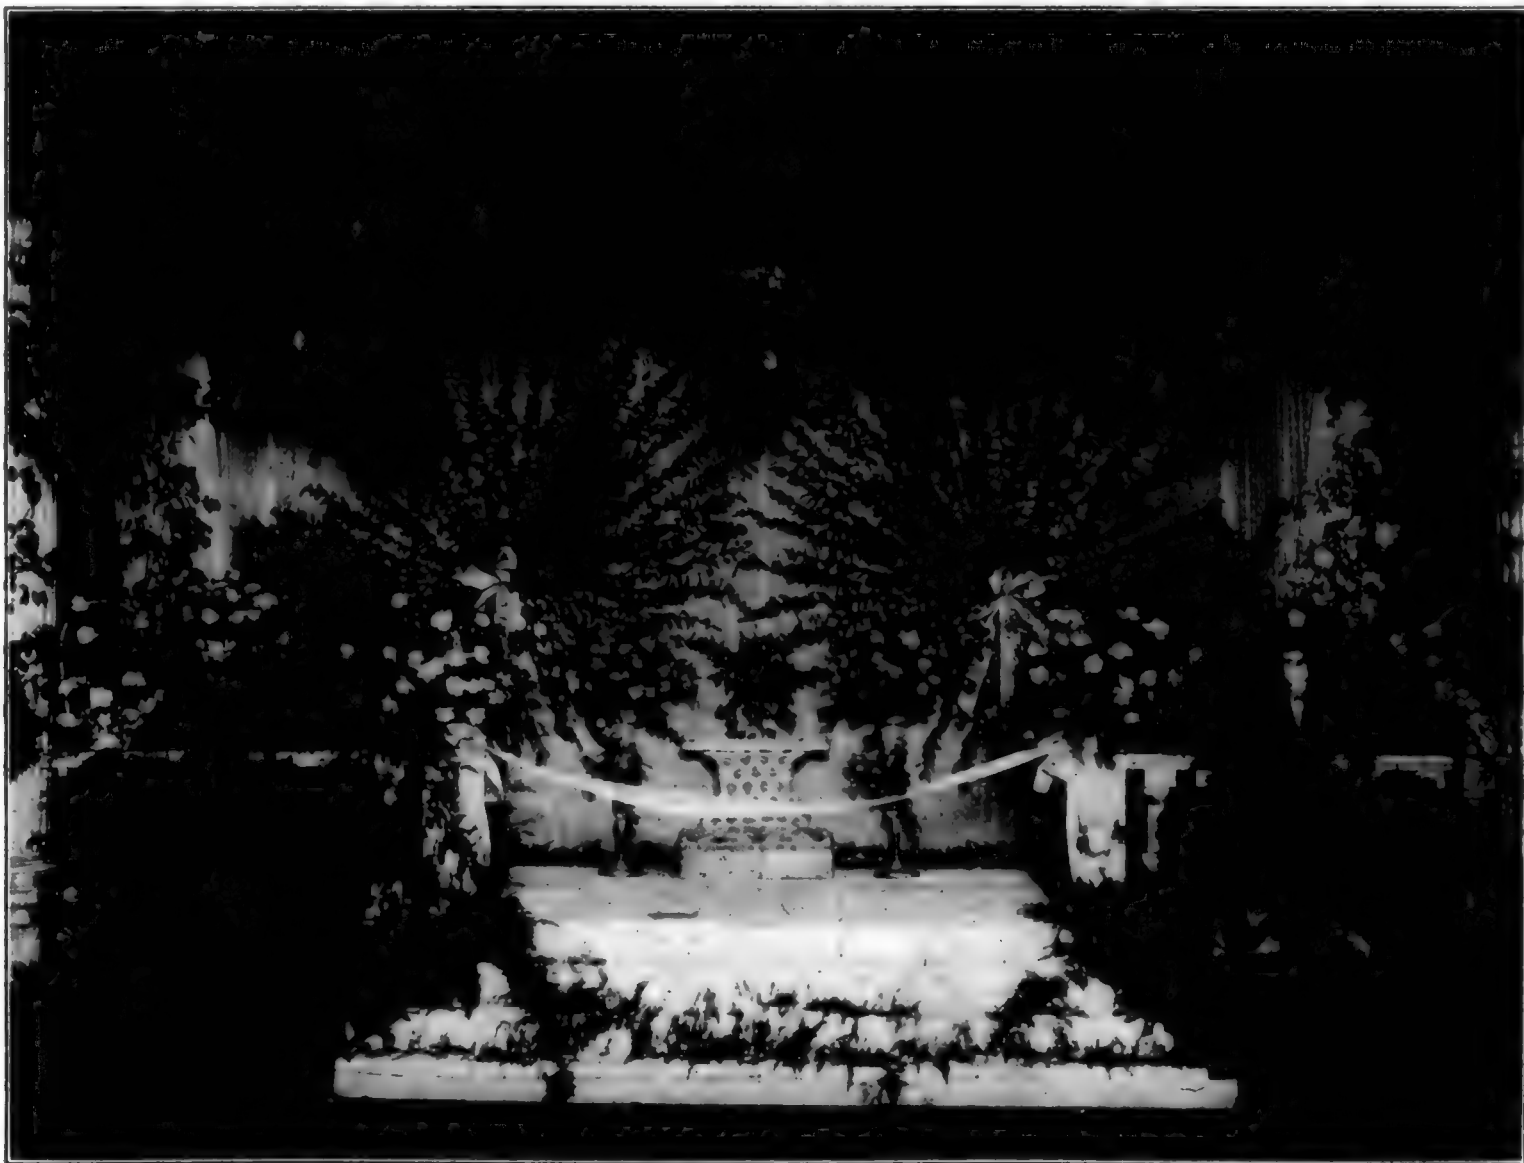

Wedding decoration, Schiller Estate, four firsts and two seconds; A. Lange, two firsts and four seconds.

Considering that the quality of carnations in general this autumn has been below the standard, the exhibits were such as to excite the unbounded admiration of growers. THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

CHICAGO.

The Chicago flower shows have for years been notable as the largest and most successful from a financial standpoint of any held in the United States, and the exhibition of last week achieved a success especially notable when it is considered that it followed the great national flower show and had to stand comparison with that unparalleled event. From the public point of view this year's Chicago show did not suffer by comparison with the national exhibition. It demonstrated that 75 cents is not too much to charge for admission to an exhibition the size of those given in Chicago, and it turned out that an excellent profit was made for the Horticultural Society of Chicago, in spite of the fact that the show cost between $9,000 and $10,000. The weather was excellent up to Sunday, the closing day, when an all day's rain cut off several hundreds of dollars at the gate, for Sunday the last two years has been among the best days the show has had.

From a trade point of view the number of entries was somewhat disappointing, especially in chrysanthemums and miscellaneous plants, but the arrangement of the cut blooms of roses and carnations on an elevated platform at the end of the hall gave an opportunity for excellent display, the landscape plan was perfect and it was the public's verdict that the general effect of the show was the best yet seen in Chicago. The public knows nothing of number of entries; it is general effect and special features that count.

The Retail Exhibits.

Throughout the week the retail booths were among the specially attractive features and to them a large part of the success of the exhibition must be credited. The retailers were privileged to rearrange their exhibits daily, and judgment was passed each day, the premiums of $100 and $65 in each class being determined by the highest average score. In practically every case the change made in the exhibits was through the renewal of the flowers with some other variety than had previously been used. The table decoration showed the use of a different flower each day, and the wedding booths also demonstrated the effectiveness of different classes of materials. The booth arranged by Miss Schiller became the notable one toward the end of the week, because of the wall decoration which showed her rare facility in the arrangement of flowers, the background used being Asparagus decumbens. Possibly a better decoration than the one photographed and reproduced in this issue was that in which the white pompon chrysanthemum Diana was used. The scores of the retailers were as follows:

Mantel decoration, J. F. Kidwell & Bro., two firsts and four seconds; Schiller Estate, four firsts and two seconds.

Table decoration, E. Weinhoeber Co., six firsts; C. A. Samuelson, six seconds.

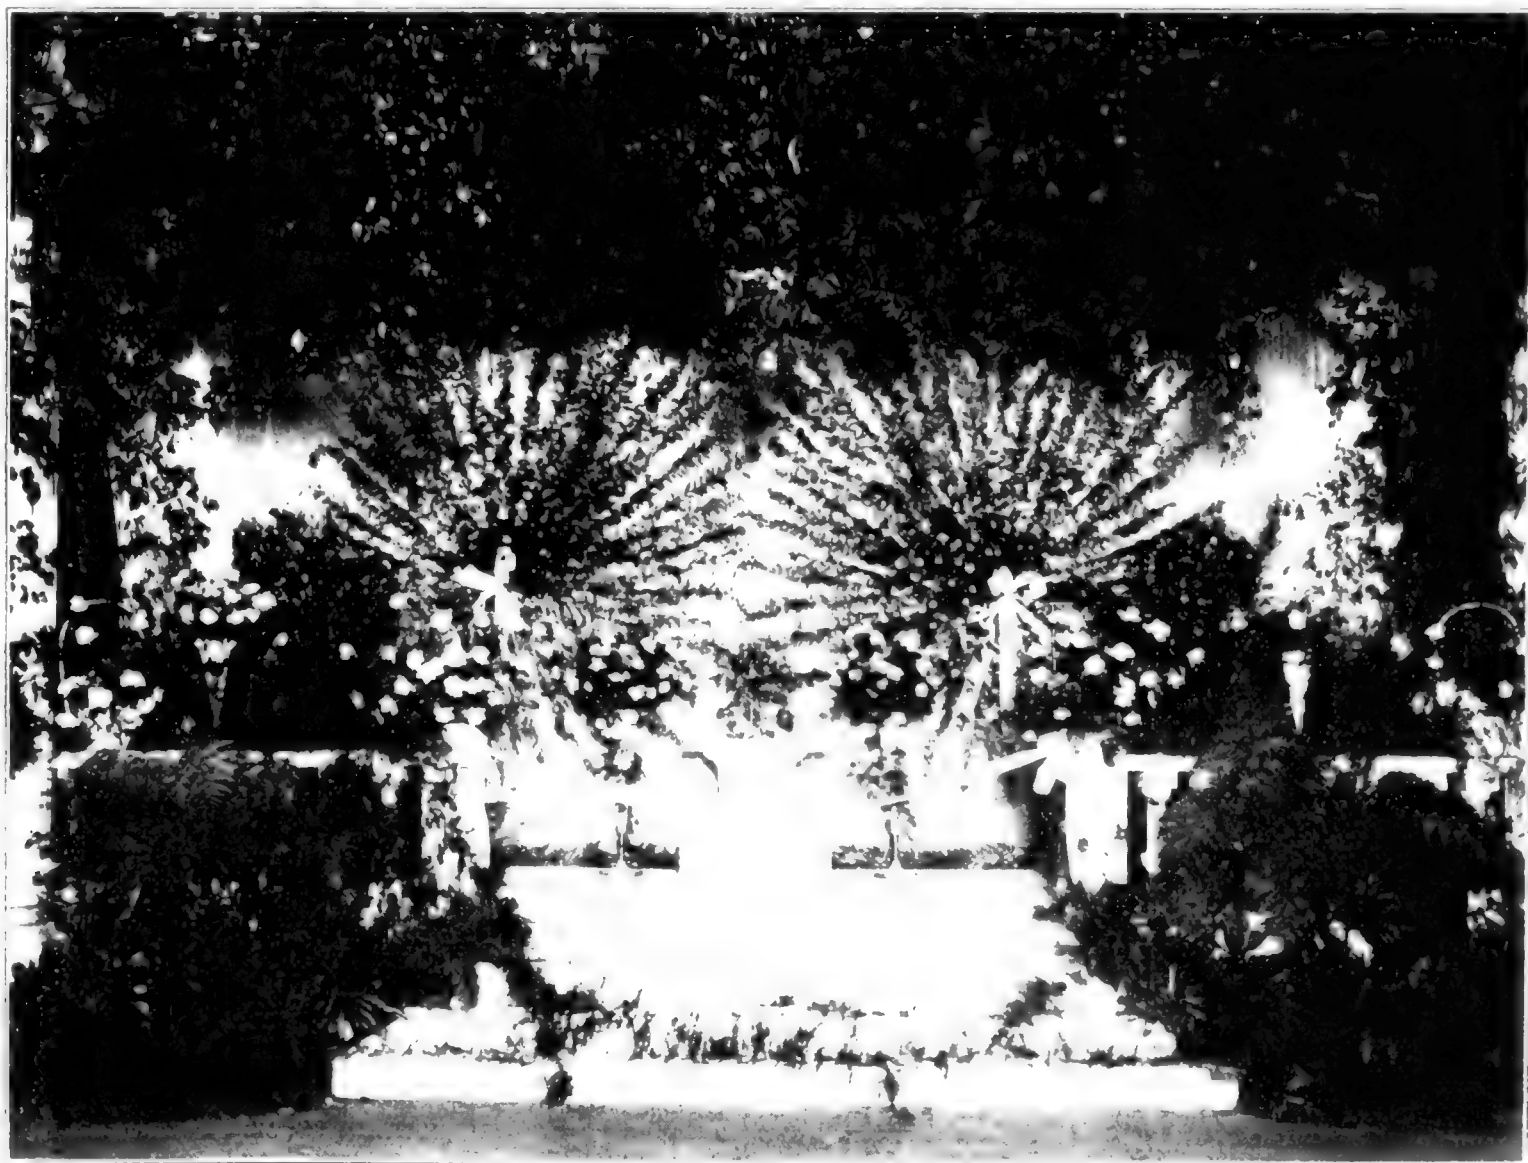

Wedding decoration, Schiller Estate, four firsts and two seconds; A. Lange, two firsts and four seconds.

Booth in which the principal feature was any other than the above, George Wittbold Co., four firsts and two seconds; C. A. Samuelson, two firsts and three seconds; J. F. Kidwell & Bro., one second.

One hundred American Beauties with accessories, arranged for effect, Bohannon Floral Co., first; C. A. Samuelson, second; Schiller Estate, third, five entries.

The Carnations.

Carnations were the special feature at the show, November 4 and were the most notable feature of the entire exhibition. Considering that the quality of carnations in general this autumn has been below the standard, the exhibits were such as to excite the unbounded admiration of growers. Another feature to cause special comment was the fact that Milwaukee growers came down in force and cleaned up some of the best awards. Part of the Roses and Carnations at the Chicago Exhibition, November 2 to 7, 1909.

Beauty prize in the rose classes the day before, was the principal event of the show from a trade standpoint. Nic Zweifel, C. C. Pollworth Co. and Manke Bros. all showed splendid stock. White Perfection was easily the leader in its color, and the finish on Zweifel's 100 blooms of this was exceptional, and Pollworth's Perfection in the class for fifty blooms also gave Chicago growers a new conception of Milwaukee prowess. Mr. Zweifel's Winsor also were notable for the season, and local growers admired this vase as much as anything in the show. Among the new sorts Zweifel's 100 blooms of Bright Spot showed that the variety has been well named. Good growers predict a future for this. It defeated in the class for 100 blooms, dark pink, two splendid entries of Afterglow and Lawson.

Among the other new varieties Dorothy Gordon, sent from Philadelphia by the Joseph Heacock Co., attracted much attention. The growers all seem to like its looks. It was not entered for competition. Neither did Shasta compete, but a vase of it was exhibited by Baur & Smith, Indianapolis. The Chicago Carnation Co. won the premium for 100 any other color, with its new variety Conquest, and Sangamo, which A. C. Brown and the Chicago Carnation Co. are jointly disseminating, carried off the premium for 100 light pink. Mary Tolman was exhibited by A. E. Hunt & Co., Evanston, Ill., and the Chicago Carnation Co. Charles Knopf Floral Co., Richmond, Ind., had its new pink, Admiration, and a seedling of promise, No. 1A. The Miami Floral Co., Dayton, O., showed Miami Queen, a pink which is to be disseminated this season, and No. 140, a pink, the result of crossing Enchantress and Nelson Fisher, but this latter had traveled badly. Bassett & Washburn showed a new pink, No. 36.

The awards on carnations were as follows:

Fifty White Lawson, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first.

Fifty White Enchantress, C. C. Pollworth Co., first; Chicago Carnation Co., second.

Fifty White Perfection, C. C. Pollworth Co., first; Chicago Carnation Co., second.

Fifty Victory, Nic Zweifel, first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second.

100 light pink, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Sangamo; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second, with Winona.

100 dark pink, Nic Zweifel, first, with Bright Spot; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second, with Afterglow; Poehlmann Bros. Co., third, with Lawson.

100 red, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Beacon; Bassett & Washburn, second, with O. P. Bassett.

100 any other color, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Conquest.

Saturday the seedling carnations were on view, but their number was few. In the class for twenty blooms white, F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind., was the only exhibitor, with No. 68-05, which scored 86 points and later took the sweepstakes cup for best seedling entered in any of the seven classes. Dorner & Sons Co. also had the only red, Hoosier Lad, which scored 85 points. In the class for flesh pink the Chicago Carnation Co. entered Mary Tolman, which scored 79 points. In the class for light pink the Chicago Carnation Co. put up Sangamo, which scored 85 points. For dark pink N. Zweifel showed Bright Spot, which scored 85 points. All scoring 85 or more were given the society's certificate of merit.

New Chrysanthemums.

There was light competition in the class for chrysanthemum cut blooms of seedlings, sports and undisseeded importations. In the class for six white, E. G. Hill Co. was first for a variety exhibited as No. 97, but later named Eloise Papworth, which scored 88 points on the commercial scale and 87 on the exhibition scale. In the class for six pink lighter than Morel, F. Dorner & Sons Co. was first with a variety No. 1-08, which scored 83 points on the commercial scale and 77 on the exhibition scale. For six any other color, E. G. Hill Co. was first with a lavender sort designated as No. 109, which scored 85 points on the exhibition scale. The sweepstakes cup awarded to the best exhibit in the above classes went to the Hill Co. for Eloise Papworth. E. D. Smith & Co. exhibited a red seedling designated as 410-9-08 and a white seedling known as 42-4-08.

The private gardeners had their day November 5. The awards were:

Display of not less than 500 lily of the valley, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; H. N. Bruns, second. The Bruns exhibit consisted of 500 spikes, that of Poehlmann Bros. Co., of several times that number.

After the rose awards had been announced, it was found necessary in conformity with the rules to rejudge several of the classes in which the same exhibitor had made more than one entry. The results of the rejudging were as follows:

100 Beauty, Bassett & Washburn, first; Peter Reinberg, second; Poehlmann Bros. Co., third.

Forty Richmond, Bassett & Washburn, first; Peter Reinberg, second; Poehlmann Bros. Co., third.

Forty any other variety, Peter Reinberg, first; Bassett & Washburn, second; Poehlmann Bros. Co., third.

100 Richmond, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Peter Reinberg, second.

100 White Killarney, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first.

The judges concluded their work with recognition of the merit of the exhibits in the annex, which were not for competition, mentioning those of Winterson's Seed Store, George Wittbold Co., Axel Setterberg, Maywood Nursery Co., Leesley Bros. and Vaughan's Seed Store. Their report concluded: "Alois Frey, Crown Point, Ind., has a fine exhibit of single chrysanthemums, worthy of a certificate. Lincoln park, Chicago, has an extensive exhibit of well-grown collections of palms and fine decorative plants. South park has a fine group of palms and decorative plants and also a very choice exhibit of Adiantum Farleyense, orchids and a group of cyclamens. Special commendation should be given to the park exhibits, as they are very worthy."

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

One of the largest exhibits of the show was that of Wietor Bros., who staged eight varieties of roses, five of the big exhibition mums and eleven varieties of pompons and singles. The display was not for competition, but was arranged for decorative effect.

F. H. Lemon & Co., Richmond, Ind., put up an attractive vase of mums arranged for effect. The two varieties were Heston's White and Winter Cheer, red, an equal number of blooms of each color, arranged so that the two colors alternated perfectly through the hundred or more in the vase, like a checker board.

Alois Frey, Crown Point, Ind., staged twenty-eight varieties of single mums, of his own raising, and including many fine kinds.

The Glencoe Violet Farm exhibited 400 of its trademarked flowers.

H. P. Smith, Piqua, O., sent a vase of a yellow sport of Tousey, which attracted much attention.

F. Dorner & Sons Co. had vases of two yellow chrysanthemums that showed up strongly. One was Golden Eagle and the other Merry Jane.

The Schiller Estate sent a group of Nephrolepis Superbissima that made an attractive feature.

W. N. Rudd showed a vase of his white carnation, Mrs. J. C. Vaughan.

N. Zweifel staged a few blooms of his dark pink seedling, Badger State.

Hospitalities.

Instead of the annual banquet to visitors, a stag party was given in the Coliseum annex, Thursday evening, November 4. Those present numbered 314, eighty-one visiting florists and 233 locals.

While the gentlemen were gathered in the Coliseum annex, the visiting ladies to the number of some thirty, chaperoned by Phil Foley, possibly selected because of his matronly proportions, were entertained at Ben Hur at the Auditorium and later at supper.

Jottings.

Judge John T. Temple says that the reason the Milwaukee carnation growers were so successful is that they doubtless watered their stock with the product that made Milwaukee famous, the stimulating properties of which are well known.

The green substance that the attendants scattered on the floor before sweeping was Kildust and N. J. Wietor, president of the Kildust Kemical Kompany, defied anyone to detect dust in the air.

C. W. Johnson states that the variety of chrysanthemum with which Mt. Greenwood Association won for best 100 blooms, was Mrs. Charles Razer. It closely resembles Virginia Poehlmann, but is a little more closely incurved and of purest white.

The third prize for twenty-five American Beauties should have been credited to L. A. Coles instead of W. W. Coles, his father. The young man has recently started in business for himself at Kokomo and has one house of Beauties.

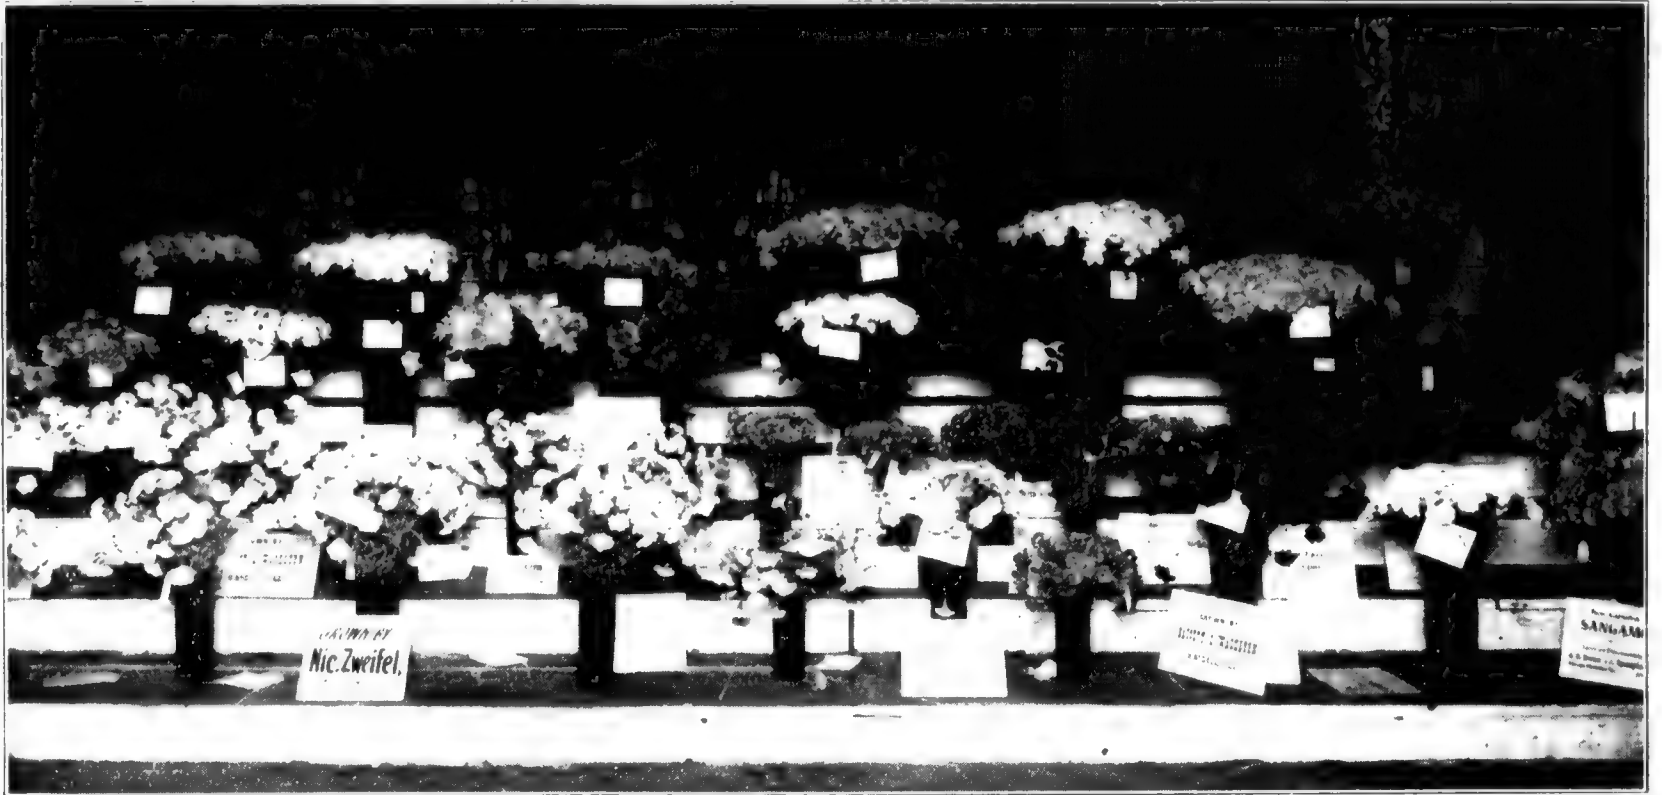

H. E. Philpott worked indefatigably in charge of the booth for the sale of flowers and the Chicago Florists' Club will find its treasury enriched by a good, round sum as the results of the efforts of Mr. Philpott and his assistants.

Friday, November 5, the Chicago Carnation Co., A. T. Pyfer, manager, took a party of visitors to Joliet on a special car leaving at 11:45 a. m. and arriving at the greenhouses in time for luncheon. The trip was specially for the purpose of seeing Conquest, Sangamo and Mary Tolman growing.

Saturday the seedling carnations were on view, but their number was few. In the class for twenty blooms white, F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind., was the only exhibitor, with No. 68-05, which scored 86 points and later took the sweepstakes cup for best seedling entered in

C. W. Johnson states that the variety of chrysanthemum with which Mt. Greenwood Association won for best 100 blooms, was Mrs. Charles Razer. It closely resembles Virginia Poehlmann, but is a little more closely incurved and of purest white.

The third prize for twenty-five American Beauties should have been credited to L. A. Coles instead of W. W. Coles, his father. The young man has recently started in business for himself at Kokomo and has one house of Beauties.

H. E. Philpott worked indefatigably in charge of the booth for the sale of flowers and the Chicago Florists' Club will find its treasury enriched by a good, round sum as the results of the efforts of Mr. Philpott and his assistants.

Friday, November 5, the Chicago Carnation Co., A. T. Pyfer, manager, took a party of visitors to Joliet on a special car leaving at 11:45 a. m. and arriving at the greenhouses in time for luncheon. The trip was specially for the purpose of seeing Conquest, Sangamo and Mary Tolman growing.

All the halls were well filled with exhibits for the Boston fall show, which proved successful, both as regards exhibits and attendance. The arrangement throughout was excellent. Chrysanthemums are less a feature than some years ago, as interest has somewhat waned, the reaction to smaller blooms and medium sized plants being perhaps more pronounced in Massachusetts than in any other state. Boston holds about a dozen large exhibitions each year, and for this reason the autumn show is different from that in other cities, which only hold a single show a year. Boston gives a less varied schedule than cities which center their activities in one exhibition, but the quality of the exhibitions is always good.

Specimen plants are less numerous than a decade ago, but some excellent ones were forthcoming on this occasion. W. A. Riggs had four superb specimens, which took first prize. He also secured a silver medal for the best plant in the show and the C. S. A. trophy for the most meritorious exhibit of chrysanthemums. His varieties were: Mrs. Tranter, L. Boehmer, Mrs. R. H. Pearson and Mayor Weaver. M. F. Plant, T. W. Head superintendent, was a good second, and Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener, third. The last named secured a bronze medal for a plant trained in arm-chair shape. Thomas E. Proctor, James Marlborough gardener, had fine specimens of the single varieties, Mrs. E. A. Isaacs and Helen Totty.

For twenty-five commercially grown specimens, W. H. Elliott captured first with some fine bushy plants; J. S. Bailey, W. McGillivray gardener, second. W. H. E. MacMulkin had the best 300-foot group of foliage and flowering plants; Mrs. J. L. Gardner, W. Thatcher gardener, second. For the group of orchids and foliage plants, Wheeler & Co. led with a tasteful arrangement; E. MacMulkin, second.

Broomhead, Beatrice May, Mrs. F. Pierce, W. Duckham, Cheltoni, Mrs. W. Duckham, Merza, Reginald Vallis, Leslie Morrison, Mrs. H. Barnes, Yellow Miller, President Viger, W. M. Moir, Clara Wells, Mrs. J. C. Neil, Frank Payne, Mrs. Felton, Mrs. H. Partridge, Brighthurst, Glenview, F. S. Vallis and Ben Wells. William Swan was a good second and E. D. Jordan, W. Abraham gardener, third.

For six vases ten distinct blooms, Winthrop Ames, Daniel Whyte gardener, had the field to himself. Mrs. Lester Leland had the only entry of twelve incurved. For twelve Japanese, Thomas Howden led with a heavy lot of blooms; E. D. Jordan, second; M. F. Plant, third. For twelve Japanese incurved, M. F. Plant was first and Thomas Howden, second. The variety Wells' Late Pink took everyone's eye, being the best variety of its color in the show. There were several other fine exhibition sorts.

A collection of 150 varieties of apples proved an educational exhibit. In the lower hall vegetables were shown in goodly number. For twenty varieties arranged for effect, Edward Parker led; E. L. Lewis, second.

Admission charges were double those of 1908 on the first three days, but this had no appreciable effect in the attendance. The exhibition was favored with cool but pleasant weather. Visitors from a distance were unusually numerous.

Ritchie gardener, had the best collection of anemones and also won for twelve vases of singles; Mrs. Frederick Ayer, George Page gardener, second; W. A. Riggs, third. There was a strong entry in this class. The pompon prizes were taken by Peter B. Robb, E. K. Better and Bellevue Nurseries.

For ten blooms pink, M. F. Plant was first, with Brighthurst; W. W. Edgar & Co., second with Dr. Enguehard. For red, M. F. Plant won with fine Mrs. H. Partridge; W. A. Riggs, second, and P. B. Robb, third, each showing Shrimpton. The last named, with superb Merzas, led in the class for white; J. S. Bailey, second with Nellie Pockett; W. W. Edgar & Co., third with Eaton. M. F. Plant, with splendid flowers of Mrs. W. Duckham, was first for yellow; J. S. Bailey, second with the same variety; P. B. Robb, third with Cheltoni. In any other color, M. F. Plant was again in the lead with the biggest lot of flowers in the show, on Leslie Morrison; Mrs. F. Ayer, second; F. H. Kennard, third.

For the best six new varieties, introductions of 1909, M. F. Plant secured first with excellent blooms of Rose Pockett, Charles Beckett, Mrs. F. Thorne, O. H. Kahn, Frank L. Payne and Leslie Morrison; Mrs. L. Leland, second with Pockett's Surprise, President Taft, Merstham Blush, Yellow Miller, Mrs. C. H. Totty and Leslie Morrison.

For seventy-five specimen blooms arranged in the society's large china vases, there was a strong entry. W. A. Riggs won, with a mixed vase; W. W. Edgar & Co., second, with fine Eatons; E. MacMulkin, third, with Bonaffon. For the best vase of Mrs. Jerome Jones, James Nicol won with a superb vase of fifty. As grown by Mr. Nicol, there is no white chrysanthemum the superior of this grand old variety. Thomas Howden was a good second.

For the best dinner table decoration for ten covers the exhibits were less numerous than usual. E. MacMulkin was first, using Savannah, a yellow pompon; Mrs. E. M. Gill, second, with single pink variety, and W. H. Creed, third, with a brownish-yellow single.

T. D. Hatfield, gardener to Walter Hunnewell, received a silver medal for an extensive and artistic display of chrysanthemums and foliage plants. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. received a similar award for a superb collection of conifers. They also had a table artistically arranged with dahlias, Lorraine begonias, Nephrolepis Whitmani, etc. W. W. Rawson & Co. had a beautiful collection of named and seedling nerines, which attracted much favorable notice. Carl Jurgens had fine lily of the valley and Beauty roses; Mrs. A. W. Blake a big specimen Nephrolepis Whitmani; Mrs. E. J. Clark, John Ash gardener, Boston violets and a collection of single chrysanthemums grown to a single bloom on a stem.

William Whitman had a display of chrysanthemums and foliage plants; F. W. Fletcher, seedling coleus and Ficus altissima; Mrs. E. M. Gill, a general display; Bellevue Nurseries, a large collection of hardy pompon chrysanthemums. They also showed Anemone Japonica Prince Henry, awarded a first class certificate. R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. had over 100 varieties of pompons, which proved interesting to visitors, awarded a bronze medal. This class of flower seems to be gaining in favor in and about Boston. Julius Roehrs Co. and Lager & Hurrell each had tables of orchids. The first named firm received a certificate of merit for Croton F. Sander.

W. N. Craig received a bronze medal for his collection of single seedling chrysanthemums. Peter Fisher received a certificate of merit for Carnation May Day, shown in fine condition. M. A. Patten had excellent vases of Shasta, awarded honorable mention; also Winona and May Day. S. J. Goddard received honorable mention for a fine vase of Pink Delight. A. Roper showed a new scarlet, William Penn, and H. A. Jahn a new variegated variety.

N. F. Comley had large china vases of Bonaffon, Eaton and Shrimpton chrysanthemums. William Tricker showed the pretty new alternanthera, Jewel. C. H. Totty had a collection of single mums, also a number of the new Wells Pockett 1910 varieties, which arrived in good shape. The variety Wells' Late Pink took everyone's eye, being the best variety of its color in the show. There were several other fine exhibition sorts.

A collection of 150 varieties of apples proved an educational exhibit. In the lower hall vegetables were shown in goodly number. For twenty varieties arranged for effect, Edward Parker led; E. L. Lewis, second.

Admission charges were double those of 1908 on the first three days, but this had no appreciable effect in the attendance. The exhibition was favored with cool but pleasant weather. Visitors from a distance were unusually numerous.

The judges were J. Stewart, Thomas Atkinson and E. C. Moore.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The New Haven County Horticultural Society held its annual autumn exhibition November 2 to 4 at Music hall, it being one of the best shows in the history of the organization. The display was notable both for number of entries, quality of stock and the number of people who attended. The exhibitor winning the highest number of points was Walter Angus, of Chapinville, with a total of 51; J. T. Burns, of Saugatuck, was second, with 44. Thomas Head, superintendent of the M. F. Plant estate at Groton, had some notable entries, on seven lots of stock winning six firsts and one second. Many of the premiums were donated by firms in the trade.

GLENCOVE, N. Y.

The fifth annual fall show of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., October 28 and 29. The show was a record one for this society in every respect. Chrysanthemums were, on the whole, much better this year than in previous years, and there were more exhibits than usual. Vegetables were excellent, which gave the judges no small task in awarding the premiums. A novel feature was introduced at this show by Mrs. Stern's prize for a model flower garden. M. Sims, assistant for J. Ingram, Oyster Bay, showed considerable skill in his model, which was awarded first prize. B. Beaton, assistant for S. J. Trepass, won second with a neatly executed design. E. Mouquin, assistant for G. Wilson, also showed good taste in the arrangement of his model.

The principal winners in the chrysanthemum classes were: A. Mackenzie, superintendent for Paul Dana; J. E. Elmslie, superintendent for W. L. Harkness; W. Eccles, superintendent for M. Schiff, and J. Robinson, superintendent for C. Hoyt, Oyster Bay. W. Eccles and J. E. Elmslie showed exceptionally fine blooms, Mr. Eccles' vase of Beatrice May in the six white class being the finest ever seen. Mr. Eccles was awarded the prize for the largest bloom in the show, with a bloom of that variety. He also staged a fifty-foot group of mums, the class of stock used and the arrangement both being fine.

The principal exhibitors and prize winners in other departments were: W. Eccles, A. Mackenzie, S. J. Trepass, V. Cleves, C. W. Knight, G. Wilson, J. MacDonald, J. Ingram, J. Robinson, J. F. Johnston, J. Elmslie, R. Cartwright, J. Ross, J. W. Everett, H. Grant (gardener for H. L. Pratt), A. Reidenbach, H. Matz, F. Petrocchia, G. Highton, J. O'Brien and H. Gaul.

H. Matz was awarded a certificate of merit for a floral design and a cultural certificate for violets. Mr. Matz also won first prize for a vase of Gerbera Jamesoni.

The judges, W. Turner, Oceanic, N. J.; J. F. Huss, Hartford, Conn., and P. Duff, Orange, N. J. performed their task creditably. Mr. Duthie made an admirable manager of the show. W. H. M.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

"The most successful show we ever held, both in attendance and the number and excellence of exhibits," is the report of Secretary Cottam. Fine weather favored both days, which materially helped to swell the attendance. More than 2,000 tickets were sold before the opening day. The admission charge of 25 cents is popular and was taken advantage of by all lovers of the chrysanthemum, which was seen at its best. Some of the finest blooms ever seen by your correspondent were on exhibition and the whole show was all that could be desired.

The large and handsome armory was prettily decorated for the occasion. Cedar trees, with a lavish use of autumn foliage, together with a fine lot of standard bay trees loaned by the Saltford Flower Shop, made an excellent setting. Overhead were draped the stars and stripes. A musical feature was the placing of an up-to-date Victoria machine at one end of the hall, from which the latest grand opera productions were given.

Some grand Beauties occupied a long table in the center. The divine flower occupied a cross table, and finer blooms of Enchantress, both white and pink, would be hard to find.

The trade was well represented. Valentine Burgevin's Sons, of Kingston, staged roses and carnations. The Saltford Flower Shop had a splendid group of flowering and foliage plants. The Yuess Gardens Co., of Newburgh, occupied an alcove with a display of flowering and foliage plants and bulbs for commercial use, for which a certificate of merit was awarded. They also exhibited a collection of new single and double varieties of mums from Chas. H. Totty, for whom they are agents for the Hudson valley. A vase of blooms of Ivory, a lovely rose-pink shade, was shown by Saltford and believed by many to be a sport. It was a clever optical illusion, and illustrated how well a special color can be obtained to order, as it were.

The collections of vegetables competing for the A. T. Boddington prize were simply perfect, while the exhibit of fruits made one's mouth water and required a strong will power to resist the temptation of sampling each plate.

William Howell, superintendent of parks, was a new exhibitor and staged a highly creditable group. He was justly proud of having grown a gloxinia upon which he counted forty-seven blooms.

Harold G. Cottam, the energetic secretary, is an enthusiast on fruits and promises to be one of our leading pomologists in the near future.

Single chrysanthemums were well shown by H. J. Osterhoudt, of the W. P. Clyde estate. The best four of the Totty introductions, as agreed upon by Louis Wood, of Wood Bros., and the veteran Robt. W. Allen, of Hudson, are: Pretoria, yellow, with green spot in center of calyx; Jessie Curtis, wine color; Chas. Groves, straw yellow; Mrs. J. Roberts, pink.

A West Point cadet, who irreverently suggested that many of the specimen blooms could be well used as swipes for the new guns, received a call-down from "Lou," who agreed that, while F. S. Vallis, a lemon yellow flower, was big enough to cover the head of any of Vassar's sweet girls, most of the varieties shown were good commercial kinds and did as well on the bench as exhibition blooms. A few were enumerated: Merza, a grand all-around white; W. H. Mohr, Mary Mason, Mrs. Wm. Duckham, Cheltoni, Appleton, Golden Dome, Wm. Duckham, Bonnaffon and Beatrice May.

The prize winning table was a beauty, though simple in arrangement—Cattleya labiata, with maidenhair fern, with gardenias as favors. M.

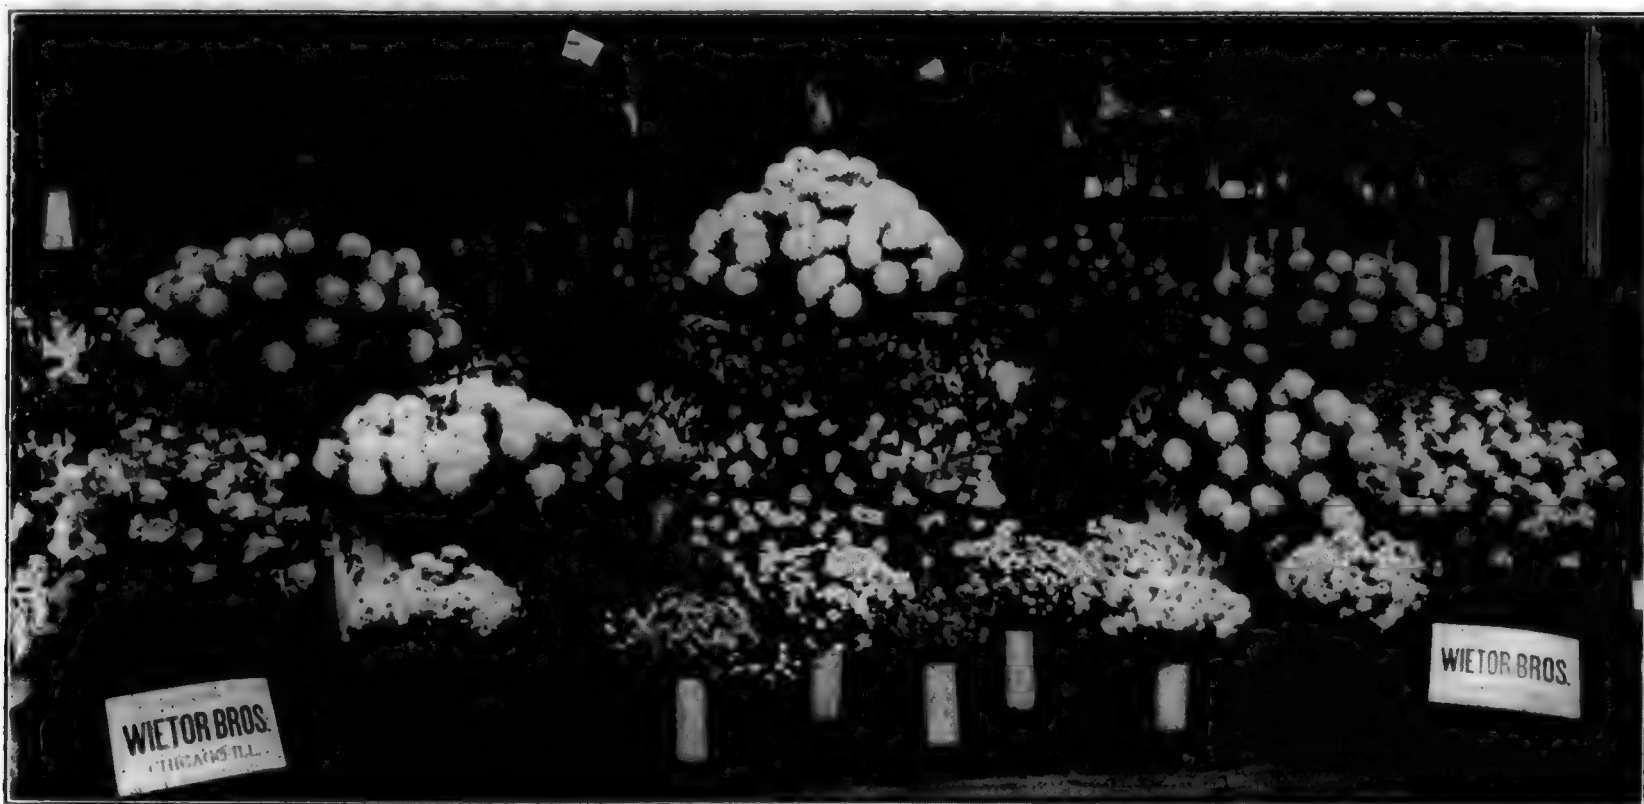

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.

The eleventh annual exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in St. John's hall, White Plains, November 4 to 6. The exhibits in all the classes were excellent, and fully up to the standard of the exhibits of previous years. The competition in many of the classes was very close. In the table decorations there were three tables, all deserving a first prize, but, unfortunately, the donor of the prize offered only one—a silver cup.

The F. R. Pierson Co. put up a fine exhibit of new ferns, including Nephrolepis viridissima, a variety to be disseminated later; also Nephrolepis elegantissima compacta, superbissima, etc.; also several fine vases of Killarney and White Killarney roses. A beautiful exhibit of apples was put up by Mr. Underwood, superintendent for William A. Read. Scott Bros. were awarded a certificate of merit for a fine exhibit of roses, chrysanthemums, etc. Henry A. Dreer received a certificate of merit for a specimen plant of Acanthus montanus. One of the most striking exhibits was four beautiful specimen plants of Gloire de Lorraine begonias, exhibited by William Rockefeller, for which he received a special prize. Miss Blanche Potter also received honorable mention for a fine new rose, Duchess of Wellington. Mrs. F. A. Vanderlip was awarded a certificate of merit for a specimen plant of Nephrolepis elegantissima.

The following prizes were won by members of the trade, in addition to the special awards already mentioned:

Silver medal for any new flower, foliage or decorative plant, won by F. R. Pierson Co. with Nephrolepis viridissima.

Best six ferns for table decoration, pots not to exceed 6-inch, Theodore Trevillian, second.

One hundred double blue violets, Richard Langley, first.

Twenty-five blooms of carnations, one variety, Kretschmar Bros., first; Herman Bowman, second.

Certificate of merit for six blooms of carnations, seedling not yet disseminated, won by F. R. Pierson Co. with new pink seedling carnation No. 40.

Twenty-five blooms of roses, one variety, F. R. Pierson Co., first.

Outside of the trade, the principal prize winners were as follows:

Wm. Rockefeller, George Middleton gardener; Mrs. Henry Siegel, Thomas Aitchison gardener; Joseph Eastman, Robert Angus gardener; Mrs. F. A. Constable, James Stuart gardener; Wm. A. Read, Andrew McKinley gardener; D. E. Oppenheimer, John I. Goff gardener; Chas. Mallory, Wm. J. Sealey gardener; Mrs. M. E. Sands, Thos. A. Lee gardener; E. H. Weatherbee, Francis Milne gardener; Miss Blanche Potter, George Wittlinger gardener; Mrs. Isaac N. Seligman, John Brunger gardener; Frederick Potter, Wm. C. Roberts gardener; Emil Berolzheimer; F. W. Vanderbilt, Henry J. Allen gardener; Mrs. L. P. Child, W. H. McGinness gardener; Ferd. Hermann, Chas. J. Weeks assistant gardener; Osborn Estate, James Bell gardener; S. Godney; Mrs. H. Pullan; F. A. Vanderlip, M. J. Welsh gardener; Miss Alice Neubrand; Harold G. Neubrand; Adolph Bartl; John J. Riker, Wm. Inglis gardener.

Special prizes were contributed by many firms and individuals, including the following members of the trade: F. R. Pierson, Pierson U-Bar Co., Arthur T. Boddington, Julius Roehrs Co., Henry A. Dreer, Burnett Bros., Peter Henderson & Co. and Lord & Burnham Co.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Connecticut Horticultural Society held an excellent exhibition at Putnam Phalanx armory, November 3 and 4, which attracted an unusually large attendance. The exhibition included not only plants and cut flowers, but a considerable section for fruits and vegetables. The arrangement was excellent, and the show by many was said to be the best thus far held in the state. The judges were: F. Heeremans and A. H. Wingett, of Lenox. The principal exhibitor was J. F. Huss, superintendent for J. J. Goodwin. Other exhibitors in the section not restricted to amateurs included Charles M. Beach, R. Cawte gardener; J. A. Weber, Neil Nelson, W. S. Mason, Carl Peterson, Charles T. Beasley, John Coombs, George W. Smith, Walter Angus and Thomas J. Dryden.

WASHINGTON.

The annual flower show given by the Washington Florists' Club in the old Masonic Temple is in progress this week. At this writing, the first day of the show has proven to be quite a success, the hall being thronged with visitors, both in the afternoon and evening, each visitor on entering the hall receiving a souvenir in the way of a choice cut flower.

In the center of the hall are a number of columns, forming a pagoda and answering as a reviewing stand, from which point the whole floor may be seen. The spectators can pass through these aisles, which is quite a treat in itself.

At four corners of the pagoda are four large urns filled with specimen chrysanthemums, with chrysanthemums and ferns about the base. Two of these urns were filled by George Cooke, the other two by Gude Bros. Co. Gude Bros. Co., in addition to the urns, has quite a display, of which the writer will give further details at the next writing.

The Washington Florist Co. is exhibiting some specimen palms, for which they are noted. Among them are kentias, arecas and Cocos plumosa. These palms form a background for the exhibit, with chrysanthemums and roses in the foreground. Their new rose, Mrs. Taft, was greatly admired.

The National Botanical Gardens had quite a collection of curios, while the private collection belonging to Mrs. L. Z. Leiter was beautiful and attracted a great deal of attention. Messrs. Marche and Mayberry & Hoover were well represented, a number of displays of pompons being prominent.

With over 100 singing canaries and music by Pistoria's band, and a number of vocal selections by noted singers, things were kept quite lively.

The amiable Mr. Cooke, who has the show in charge, is much to be praised for the manner in which things are conducted.

Last but not least is the side-show issue, in the shape of a tarantula loaned by Mr. Schmid.

PHILADELPHIA.

The opening of the Philadelphia show, held under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, in Horticultural hall, November 9 to 12, was retarded by some belated exhibits that were not staged until long after the hour set for the judges to commence work. Secretary Rust took the bull by the horns by starting the judges on one of the most difficult tasks that ever has confronted them. This was especially true of the cut flower classes, where something like a dozen entries were made in a single class. A glance over the show is all that time will permit in this issue.

It is a chrysanthemum show to a greater degree than for many years past. The autumn queen predominates everywhere. The average quality of the cut flowers is fine, the specimens in vases on the main stairway attracting admiration from the experts. The plants are good and rather taller than usual, filling the entire main hall, except for some fine groups of foliage and flowering plants arranged for effect, and the stage, which Henry A. Dreer has filled with a choice selection of palms and ferns. A collection of orchids in bloom beautifully arranged with ferns from John Wana-maker is a striking feature. The specimen palms and ferns are of great merit. In the lower hall the Henry F. Michell Co. has a handsome bulb exhibit effectively staged. The exhibition is fully as large as in former years. PHIL.

The opening of the Philadelphia show, held under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, in Horticultural hall, November 9 to 12, was retarded by some belated exhibits that were not staged until long after the hour set for the judges to commence work. Secretary Rust took the bull by the horns by starting the judges on one of the most difficult tasks that ever has confronted them. This was especially true of the cut flower classes, where something like a dozen entries were made in a single class. A glance over the show is all that time will permit in this issue.

It is a chrysanthemum show to a greater degree than for many years past. The autumn queen predominates everywhere. The average quality of the cut flowers is fine, the specimens in vases on the main stairway attracting admiration from the experts. The plants are good and rather taller than usual, filling the entire main hall, except for some fine groups of foliage and flowering plants arranged for effect, and the stage, which Henry A. Dreer has filled with a choice selection of palms and ferns. A collection of orchids in bloom beautifully arranged with ferns from John Wanamaker is a striking feature. The specimen palms and ferns are of great merit. In the lower hall the Henry F. Michell Co. has a handsome bulb exhibit effectively staged. The exhibition is fully as large as in former years. PHIL.

NEW YORK.

The Horticultural Society of New York is to be congratulated on the success of the exhibition held November 3 to 7 at the American Museum of Natural History. The way the public thronged to the exhibition was most encouraging to the management. The total attendance for the week was 30,734, and it is interesting to note the way the attendance increased from day to day. The record by days is as follows: Wednesday, 2,085; Thursday, 3,384; Friday, 5,679; Saturday, 8,358; Sunday, 11,228. The total attendance at the show held at the same place during November, 1908, was 8,411, the attendance this year being, therefore, over three and one-half times as great. One of the gratifying features of the attendance was the large number who came in private equipages. Another notable feature was the Sunday attendance, which was an average of over 2,800 an hour.

Everyone expressed admiration of the ideal character of the place in which the exhibition was held. The spacious foyer could not be excelled for the display of large specimens, and the long radiating halls furnished excellent places in which to display the smaller exhibits. The authorities of the museum placed every facility at the disposal of the management of the flower show, and much of its success is due to this.

The collection of orchids in the north hall was remarkably fine, being the of the opportunity; he put up a table decoration of orchids which was a center of interest.

In the rose classes F. R. Pierson Co. made a splendid show, being first on 100 Beauty, 100 Killarney, 100 Maryland, 100 White Killarney, 25 Maryland and 25 White Killarney; second on 25 Beauty. L. A. Noe, Madison, N. J., was first for 25 Beauty, 25 Maid and 25 Bride; second on 25 Killarney.

In the carnation classes F. R. Pierson Co. was first on 100 scarlet. The Cottage Gardens Co. was first for 100 Lawson shade, for best new variety, and secured the sweepstakes silver medal for the best 100 blooms in the show. The other carnation premiums were won by the gardener on the Untermyer estate.

Trade exhibitors secured the following awards in the plant classes:

E. O. Orpet also received a silver medal for collection of hybrid orchids.

The judges were C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; A. J. Loveless, Lenox, Mass.; E. O. Orpet, South Lancaster, Mass.; T. W. Head, Groton, Conn.; I. L. Powell, Milbrook, N. Y.

This show seems to indicate that at last flower shows are to receive the recognition in New York which they should have had long ago, and a word should be said for the members of the committee which made this show the success it proved to be. F. R. Pierson was chairman of the committee, and George V. Nash secretary. The other members were F. H. Traendly, J. E. Lager, P. O'Mara, John Young, Leonard Barron, Peter Duff and J. A. Manda, the latter acting as manager of the show, and acquitting himself with high credit.

The display of 100 varieties of evergreens by Bobbink & Atkins was one of the features of the show. The entire lot was sold before the second day.

Charles Weber, of Lynbrook, appears to have a good thing in his new pink seedling carnation.

Richard Vincent, of White Marsh, was on his way to Florida when he visited the show.

Charles H. Totty did not compete for prizes, but staged some splendid blooms of his new chrysanthemums.

Judge I. L. Powell had a fine vase of mums arranged with Sprenger.

The seventh annual exhibition of the Westchester County Horticultural and Agricultural Society, held at Mt. Kisco, N. The society needs a larger hall, for the patrons include all the many millionaires within a radius of this beautiful town nestling in the Westchester hills. The quality of all the exhibits was of a high order, for most of the display was drawn from the private establishments of the wealthy amateurs.

AMHERST, MASS.

The class in floriculture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College held an exhibition November 5, of table decorations, there being ten tables, each being the work of two men entering as a team. Chrysanthemums were the flowers used. First prize was awarded to H. F. Willard and C. J. Green, second to I. W. Davis and E. M. Brown. The judges were H. W. Field, Prof. A. S. Kinney and Dr. W. B. Lancaster.

For Long Tables.

For a long table get a number of very small pumpkins and attach at irregular intervals along a line, composed of a number of strings of smilax, which extends from one end of the table to the other. Some may stand right side up, the vine passing up over and around the stem and down again. Others may lie on their sides, but some may be scooped out and a small vase set in to hold a few suitably sized flowers. The line of smilax should take a meandering course along the center of the table. Set a few candles, with pumpkin-colored shades, on brass candlesticks along at intervals between the pumpkins. If it can be done without crowding the table or obscuring the vine, scatter some deep yellow mums on the table, keeping the stem lines in coincidence with the smilax line.

Another, for a long oval or rectangular table: Have a round center plaque of flowers or ferns, and at each end a low crescent of fruit and flowers pointing toward the center. Have nothing scattered about between these fractions of the decoration. Their lines will keep their relations apparent. Any other feature would make a confusion of lines.

An all green piece might be made of grapes and adiantums, but one can scarcely resist adding some violets or pink to the color plan.

Yellow or bronze seems to be the Thanksgiving color, as scarlet is the Christmas color, and how to use a few chrysanthemums on an ordinary table in an out-of-the-ordinary way is the problem for the average customer.

Mums With Leaves or Fruit.

Here is something easy to describe and easy to do: Make a little support of green moss, three or four inches high, on the center of the table. Bind together carelessly a half dozen or nine incurved mums and a bit of autumn foliage with wire. Cover the wire with a narrow band of birch bark, and lay the bunch on the moss so that the flowers will be free to swing and hold up from the table in the reclining position.

Something else: Lay a convenient number of chrysanthemums in a narrow

Table and window displays are the two things which demand the attention of the average florist for Thanksgiving, with the addition of some corsage bouquets or occasionally some wedding work. In many cases a table decoration for the window or front of the store would be a telling advertisement. Let the table be set with silver in the best manner possible, and let a neat, simple decoration be added and changed each day.

Among the accessories of cut flowers for the Thanksgiving dinner table are the autumn leaves, bittersweet berries, pepper tree branches, milkweed pods, cattails and all such wild material of which we never grow tired, and the wheat, pumpkins and fruit. The newness of the decoration will not appear so much in the material used as in the way in which it is used. The few examples which shall be given here are not intended to be rigid patterns, but as mere suggestions, which shall stimulate each one to seize upon other suitable material from his hamper so that the flowers shall extend out of the basket at one end and the front. See that the stem ends are in water in the hamper, and drop the lid of the hamper. Tie loosely at the clasp of the lid with some cord, to correspond with the color of the flowers. On top of the lid lay a choice cluster of grapes. Extend the design by using loose mums and grapes at each end of the hamper, as the length of the table requires.

For individual place decorations: Cut off large incurved or semi-double mum flowers entirely from the stem, and set upright like a plate. Line with an adiantum leaf and fill with nuts or confectionery.

Natural or bleached wheat is among the good accessories for mums. How to use it is the query. In a window decoration it can be used as a floor background, in a shock, in a stack of sheaves with flowers between or with wisps of wheat among the flowers, or it may be easily adapted to the shape of a handle basket or as a tie for a cluster of mums lying flat; also with autumn leaves as a setting for a vase or basket.

A Window or Store Display.

For a window or store display piece: A large, rough basket of vegetables or fruit, well arranged, with a stuffed bird perched on the edge, looking down upon the feast; a liberal display of mums close by will complete the decoration. Or, a hollow stump, open at the top and one side, displaying pumpkins, apples, etc., with ferns and chrysanthemums clustered generously around the stump and as far back as space will permit.

Apples are difficult to arrange. One good setting for them is red beech leaves. They can be wired on the branches among farfugium and numerous others which your stock of plants will suggest.

PLAN DELIVERY ASSOCIATION.

Retailers Get Together at Chicago.

Times without number the REVIEW has sought to impress upon the retail florists of the country that the business might be greatly enlarged to the advantage of all by pushing the feature of the delivery of flowers in distant cities on mail or telegraphic orders. Wherever retailers have made effort to enlarge this department of the business they have met with much success, whether they sought to secure orders from the public for transmission to florists in distant cities, or whether they sought to make known to the trade their facilities for handling such orders as might be entrusted to them.

The business of the exchange of orders has finally reached such large proportions that there was a meeting of some twenty retailers at Chicago, November 5, on the call of the president of the S. A. F., to consider the organization of a retailers' delivery association under the auspices of the Society of American Florists.

The meeting was called to order by President Valentine, who asked for a nomination for chairman; Irvin Bertermann was selected for the post, and W. N. Rudd was made secretary. There was full discussion of the project, ending only on motion of E. Wienhoeber that the chair appoint a committee with J. A. Valentine as chairman, and power to add to its numbers at its discretion, to prepare a complete outline of organization, to be presented to another meeting of membership would not be lightly forfeited.

J. A. Valentine outlined the idea with a written statement of the situation as it appears to him, which is published in full in another column.

Among those present at the meeting were:

RETAIL DELIVERY ASSOCIATION.

President Valentine's Plans.

We are here in response to a call issued by me as president of the S. A. F. to see whether some plan can be devised whereby our society can render such definite and valuable service to the retailer as will make its membership necessary and attractive to him.

Prior to the last annual convention of the society, I was impressed with the fact that, while there were nearly a thousand florists enrolled, this number included very few retailers who were not also owners of greenhouses.

The men who were exclusively retailers had not, as a class, found membership in our society attractive to them. I therefore recommended to the society that instead of carrying on its work as heretofore, in one large assembly room, the work should be divided into sections which should hold their sessions in different rooms, and that a section should be organized devoted to the interests of the retailer.

This recommendation met with the unanimous approval of the convention, and it was ordered that a plan should be prepared and submitted to the directors of the society at their next meeting. That meeting will be held in Rochester, N. Y., early in March.

In order that the suggestions submitted might be complete and satisfactory to the retailers, it seemed wise to have them get together so that their needs could be formulated, and it would be certain in advance that the plans adopted would meet with the approval of the people it was desired to interest.

To determine whether I was right in thinking that the retailers would be glad to join a movement of this sort, I wrote nearly a hundred letters to such store men as I knew, or had previously had dealings with, making no attempt to have the list complete or exclusive. It was simply to see what response would come from a fairly representative list. The letter sent out stated the action taken at the summer convention of the S. A. F. and the proposal to organize a retailers' section. It asked for their endorsement, and the privilege of quoting the recipient as favoring it in a general way. The letter further asked for suggestions.

The response was so prompt and so general as to leave no doubt that the movement would have cordial support. I have had but one unfavorable reply. The following firms have permitted the use of their names:

the leaves, either to lie flat to decorate walls or as overhead tree-like branches. Scattered among the fruit or fastened to the branches like the apples, may be used any kind of light pink, loosely built roses, preferably full blown.

Fresh prunes or dark colored plums may be similarly used with the green beech leaves and combined with yellow chrysanthemums. Other kinds of foliage which can be used with mums are Rex begonia leaves, fancy caladiums, coleus,

In the discussion, in which most of those present participated, it appeared to be the consensus of opinion that membership should not be limited, but that the responsibility of members should be guaranteed, membership being made to cost enough, either through a membership fee or a deposit of cash, so that Delivery in Other Cities.

Probably there is not a retailer present today who has not, at some time, been worried as to how he could properly effect a delivery at some distant point. Most of us have had some unpleasant experience resulting from selecting a name haphazard from the Florists' Directory. Such a man may have gone out of business, he may have a place largely devoted to vegetables and treat the flower business as an insignificant side issue, or he may be one of those cautious people afraid to hand out the flowers unless he can take in the coin at the same time.

Then there comes the matter of discounts. Some say fifteen per cent should be allowed, others say twenty per cent, and I find that still others say twenty-five per cent.

Some florists will remit as soon as they get a bill; the majority take thirty days and some settle when they have no other pressing need of the money.

The detailed directions for delivery often make it necessary to send long and expensive telegrams. The florist in a small town may gladly fill an order for a dollar's worth of carnations and think himself properly paid at 50 cents per dozen, while the man on Fifth avenue will feel that the expense of a long delivery would make an order for a dollar a nuisance and that high rents compelled him to charge three times as much per dozen as the village florist.

We will have accomplished a great deal if we can form an organization that shall include one or more representatives in every city of the country, who can be depended on to properly fill orders from any other member, at a rate of discount fixed in advance. We must devise some plan where the prompt payment for such orders is made certain.

We must have a telegraph code that is practical, concise and comprehensive. The members should be kept as fully posted as practicable concerning the prices prevailing in different localities.

I think we will find no serious difficulty except in the two points, which may be said to involve the character of the members; viz., will the recipient of an order fill it properly and will the sender pay for the goods?

Of these two questions the former is the more difficult, but I believe it will be solved. Any member should see that his self-interest demands the proper filling of orders intrusted to him by another florist. We must not allow the adoption of any rule that would compel members to send their orders to any given florist. This would be fatal. Each member must feel that the securing of orders is assisted by membership in the organization, but that the retention of patronage depends upon the quality of the service rendered.

An offender may not attend the annual conventions, but he may be sure others will do so, and that they will exchange notes and get a line on how orders are being filled by different people. If services were bad enough it might well be the cause for expulsion, but if it were at all bad the majority of members would soon know about it.

We should encourage our customers to make inquiries from their friends and to report on all deliveries, but in considering such reports we should bear in mind the disposition of some people to complain in season and out of season.

The Credit Problem.

The matter of credits is difficult at first sight, but seems certain of solution. In the first place the membership should cost enough so that it will be too valuable to lose for a trifling bill. In the next place make the annual dues enough so that the organization can afford to exercise close supervision in the matter of accounts.

I have given considerable thought to this particular feature and am inclined to think that the following plan is practical and equitable. In addition to a fixed membership fee, let the member or members from each city pay into the treasury a sum based on the population of their city. If there is only one member from any certain city he should pay it all; if a second member comes in from that city he should pay one-half of the population fee, which should then be refunded to the first member, and so on, no matter how many come in from that one city. The total population fee in the treasury from each city should remain constant, and each member from each city should have paid an equal amount with the other members from his same city.

Let the money so paid be invested and the interest from such investment be combined with the membership fees to form a guarantee fund. Should any member fail or refuse to pay a bill, due to any other member, within a specified time, say sixty days, the bill should be presented to the proper committee and, if it is found correct, it should be paid from the guarantee fund, thus consuming the membership fee of the delinquent member and severing his connection with the association.

In case the account is a disputed one, provide that the debtor may pay, to the arbitration committee, the amount claimed, to await their decision as to what amount is justly due, and in such case his membership would not be affected.

hamper so that the flowers shall extend out of the basket at one end and the front. See that the stem ends are in water in the hamper, and drop the lid of the hamper. Tie loosely at the clasp of the lid with some cord, to correspond with the color of the flowers. On top of the lid lay a choice cluster of grapes. Extend the design by using loose mums and grapes at each end of the hamper, as the length of the table requires.

For individual place decorations: Cut off large incurved or semi-double mum flowers entirely from the stem, and set upright like a plate. Line with an adiantum leaf and fill with nuts or confectionery.

Natural or bleached wheat is among the good accessories for mums. How to use it is the query. In a window decoration it can be used as a floor background, in a shock, in a stack of sheaves with flowers between or with wisps of wheat among the flowers, or it may be easily adapted to the shape of a handle basket or as a tie for a cluster of mums lying flat; also with autumn leaves as a setting for a vase or basket.

A Window or Store Display.

For a window or store display piece: A large, rough basket of vegetables or fruit, well arranged, with a stuffed bird perched on the edge, looking down upon the feast; a liberal display of mums close by will complete the decoration. Or, a hollow stump, open at the top and one side, displaying pumpkins, apples, etc., with ferns and chrysanthemums clustered generously around the stump and as far back as space will permit.

Apples are difficult to arrange. One good setting for them is red beech leaves. They can be wired on the branches among farfugium and numerous others which your stock of plants will suggest.

PLAN DELIVERY ASSOCIATION.

Retailers Get Together at Chicago.

Times without number the REVIEW has sought to impress upon the retail florists of the country that the business might be greatly enlarged to the advantage of all by pushing the feature of the delivery of flowers in distant cities on mail or telegraphic orders. Wherever retailers have made effort to enlarge this department of the business they have met with much success, whether they sought to secure orders from the public for transmission to florists in distant cities, or whether they sought to make known to the trade their facilities for handling such orders as might be entrusted to them.

The business of the exchange of orders has finally reached such large proportions that there was a meeting of some twenty retailers at Chicago, November 5, on the call of the president of the S. A. F., to consider the organization of a retailers' delivery association under the auspices of the Society of American Florists.

The meeting was called to order by President Valentine, who asked for a nomination for chairman; Irvin Bertermann was selected for the post, and W. N. Rudd was made secretary. There was full discussion of the project, ending only on motion of E. Wienhoeber that the chair appoint a committee with J. A. Valentine as chairman, and power to add to its numbers at its discretion, to prepare a complete outline of organization, to be presented to another meeting of membership would not be lightly forfeited.

J. A. Valentine outlined the idea with a written statement of the situation as it appears to him, which is published in full in another column.

Among those present at the meeting were:

RETAIL DELIVERY ASSOCIATION.

President Valentine's Plans.

We are here in response to a call issued by me as president of the S. A. F. to see whether some plan can be devised whereby our society can render such definite and valuable service to the retailer as will make its membership necessary and attractive to him.

Prior to the last annual convention of the society, I was impressed with the fact that, while there were nearly a thousand florists enrolled, this number included very few retailers who were not also owners of greenhouses.

The men who were exclusively retailers had not, as a class, found membership in our society attractive to them. I therefore recommended to the society that instead of carrying on its work as heretofore, in one large assembly room, the work should be divided into sections which should hold their sessions in different rooms, and that a section should be organized devoted to the interests of the retailer.

This recommendation met with the unanimous approval of the convention, and it was ordered that a plan should be prepared and submitted to the directors of the society at their next meeting. That meeting will be held in Rochester, N. Y., early in March.

In order that the suggestions submitted might be complete and satisfactory to the retailers, it seemed wise to have them get together so that their needs could be formulated, and it would be certain in advance that the plans adopted would meet with the approval of the people it was desired to interest.

To determine whether I was right in thinking that the retailers would be glad to join a movement of this sort, I wrote nearly a hundred letters to such store men as I knew, or had previously had dealings with, making no attempt to have the list complete or exclusive. It was simply to see what response would come from a fairly representative list. The letter sent out stated the action taken at the summer convention of the S. A. F. and the proposal to organize a retailers' section. It asked for their endorsement, and the privilege of quoting the recipient as favoring it in a general way. The letter further asked for suggestions.

The response was so prompt and so general as to leave no doubt that the movement would have cordial support. I have had but one unfavorable reply. The following firms have permitted the use of their names:

the leaves, either to lie flat to decorate walls or as overhead tree-like branches. Scattered among the fruit or fastened to the branches like the apples, may be used any kind of light pink, loosely built roses, preferably full blown.

Fresh prunes or dark colored plums may be similarly used with the green beech leaves and combined with yellow chrysanthemums. Other kinds of foliage which can be used with mums are Rex begonia leaves, fancy caladiums, coleus, retailers to be held in connection with the annual convention of the Society of American Florists at Rochester next August, or sooner if found practicable.

In the discussion, in which most of those present participated, it appeared to be the consensus of opinion that membership should not be limited, but that the responsibility of members should be guaranteed, membership being made to cost enough, either through a membership fee or a deposit of cash, so that Otherwise a florist might be badly delinquent in a number of places at the same time and the association know nothing about it until some creditor becomes alarmed, and then the bills would pour in from all directions.

Other Questions Answered.

The secretary of the retail section should be the secretary of the S. A. F., and the membership fees and dues of the section should include the fees and dues of the parent society, so that members would only have to make payment to one person and confusion would thus be avoided. The membership fee of the section should also include the price of the telegraph code book of the association. By buying in quantity the cost of the code book could be very materially reduced.

While the matter of deliveries seems the most vital single question to be taken up, there are countless other questions which could be handled at the annual conventions and which would make the sessions interesting and profitable. Everyone of us should be interested in the best ways of attending to the details of the business.

fusion in handling cards to go with orders?

What do you pay your clerks? What methods have you found effective to awaken their interest and insure their loyalty? Do you know where I can find a good man for my store? Do you believe it pays a retail florist to advertise and what methods are the most effective?

I will venture to say that there are few of you who have not had these questions asked of you. Get together every summer, gentlemen, and discuss them. They will not be settled, for such questions are always alive and unanswered, but it will be a dull man who will not derive some benefit from talking such things over with other men in his line of work.

If tailors and milliners can meet and cooperate in turning the attention of the public toward certain materials and certain styles, why may not the florists make their influence felt in support of their ideas of the beautiful and the artistic?

How widely the trade is awakening to the advantages or the quick transmission of orders, from one retailer to another in a distant city, is shown by the fact that private parties at New York are seeking to organize the International

ADVERTISING BY RETAILERS.

Among men who make a business of advertising it long has been recognized that retail florists were showing a lack of grasp of progressive methods in their failure to take advantage of the great power of advertising. Advertising men have marveled that retail florists who go to such large expense in fitting up and maintaining attractive places of business and who have so interesting a story to tell the public, should be content to let the people find their way to the flower stores unguided by the long, directing, index finger of the daily paper. But gradually retail florists are coming to take advantage of the power of the press. Thus far many are content with a mere business card, something to the effect, "Smith & Co., fresh flowers," but every here and there one bolder than the rest comes out with a real advertisement. In Chicago especially the downtown retailers, and one or two of those located in residence neighborhoods, are making use of space in the daily papers. In the majority of cases, these shrewd retailers are selecting the one paper which they consider reaches the most of their kind of people and are lumping their expenditure to secure a large, attractive advertisement, sure to attract the attention of all the readers of that one best paper. It is the policy which has proved best by test.

That the advertising of Chicago retailers is profitable to them, even though advertising rates are not low in Chicago's leading daily, is apparent to anyone who watches what is going on in the trade, and most of all is it apparent to the wholesalers from whom these retail stores procure their stock. Just to show what good advertising it is possible to turn out for a retail flower store, the accompanying advertisement of Fleischman is reproduced. It occupied 150 lines of agate in the Tribune, or about equal to one-third page of the REVIEW, and advertising rates in the Tribune are about 40 cents per agate line.

COST OF METERED WATER.

In the REVIEW of October 28, page 9, I noticed the inquiry of R. M. with reference to water rates. I noticed, also, the reply on page 17 of the next week's issue, with the intimation that other replies would be welcomed. In Sycamore, Ill., we pay the following rates: First 10,000 gallons, 16 cents per thousand; next 20,000 gallons, 12 cents per thousand; next 20,000 gallons, 8 cents per thousand, and all over 50,000 gallons, 6 cents per thousand. I have 18,000 feet of glass and use the water also for the dwelling house and for the boiler and coldframe, and I use approximately 30,000 gallons per month the year around. The city owns the meter and I pay a rental of 75 cents per quarter, or $3 per year, in addition to the above rate.

here, in Miami, Fla., I beg to advise that the cost is as follows: For a charge of $3 per quarter we are furnished 20,475 gallons of water. For all over this quantity consumed in the three months we are charged at the rate of 14 cents per 750 gallons. We have 3,650 square feet in greenhouse space and about 5,000 square feet set in roses in the open. By reasonable care (not stinginess, but not wastefulness), we make our water bill about $60 to $75 per year for this space, of course dependent upon variable weather conditions. In this state for about half the year we get plenty of rain for the outdoor plants to get along all right without artificial water. The balance of the year we have to water that part as well as the greenhouses. The above will give a good idea of water supply conditions as they are here, which we consider very fair indeed, and much cheaper than when we formerly supplied ourselves by gasoline engine power. This present service we consider excellent.

TRANSPORTATION OF FLOWERS.

[A paper by H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, Can., read at the twelfth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, in Toronto, November 11, 1909.]

The subject upon which I have been asked to read you a paper at this convention is a very important one, and one which embraces so much that I feel it is impossible to dwell long on its several parts.

There are also many theories as to the best way of growing, handling and packing both plants and cut flowers.

However, I will tell you some of my actual experience, both in growing and in receiving through the express companies from wholesale houses, with short and long distances of travel. Having been around with the wholesale growers both in Canada and the United States a great deal during the last few years, I feel I can at least say something which may arouse interest and a helpful discussion.

The express companies will also come in for a few remarks from me later on.

Packing Plants for Shipment.

First, then, we will take up the subject of packing plants for shipment. All will admit that it is a very important one, for no matter how fine and nice the plants are before shipment, if improperly packed, or if they are handled carelessly by the express companies, so that they arrive at their destination in poor condition, dissatisfaction is sure to follow. Therefore we have not only to consider the condition of the plants when shipped, but also the condition of them on arrival at destination.

There are a number of things to be considered in every stage of the proceedings. First see that the plants are in perfect condition for shipping, that is, thoroughly hardened or finished to stand the trip. If to be shipped without pots, the plants should be well rooted through, so that the roots may hold the ball of earth intact. Above all, see that the plants are thoroughly watered before packing.

Shipping in Pots.

The plants being in good condition, the question of shipping with or without pots must be decided, and this will depend upon the requirements of the customer, as well as the needs and nature of the plants.

Palms and other plants not having fibrous roots to hold the soil, should be shipped in pots, some support being necessary to keep the soil from crumbling. The Neponset or paper pots are excellent for this purpose, being light, not subject to breakage, also packing closer in the crate. Packing wrapper or sacking, firmly tied around, is often used instead of pots, and answers the purpose.

In this connection I might say that plants are usually packed without pots unless specially agreed upon, and in the latter case a small additional charge is

It should be provided that the guarantee of the association would not hold good except when the non-payment of accounts was promptly reported. But gradually retail florists are coming to take advantage of the power of the press. Thus far many are content with a mere business card, something to the effect, "Smith & Co., fresh flowers," but every here and there one bolder than the rest comes out with a real advertisement. In Chicago especially the downtown retailers, and one or two of those located in residence neighborhoods, are making use of space in the daily papers. In the majority of cases, these shrewd retailers are selecting the one paper which they consider reaches the most of their kind of people and are lumping their expenditure to secure a large, attractive advertisement, sure to attract the attention of all the readers of that one best paper. It is the policy which has proved best by test.

That the advertising of Chicago retailers is profitable to them, even though advertising rates are not low in Chicago's leading daily, is apparent to anyone who watches what is going on in the trade, and most of all is it apparent to the wholesalers from whom these retail stores procure their stock. Just to show what good advertising it is possible to turn out for a retail flower store, the accompanying advertisement of Fleischman is reproduced. It occupied 150 lines of agate in the Tribune, or about equal to one-third page of the REVIEW, and advertising rates in the Tribune are about 40 cents per agate line.

COST OF METERED WATER.

In the REVIEW of October 28, page 9, I noticed the inquiry of R. M. with reference to water rates. I noticed, also, the reply on page 17 of the next week's issue, with the intimation that other replies would be welcomed. In Sycamore, Ill., we pay the following rates: First 10,000 gallons, 16 cents per thousand; next 20,000 gallons, 12 cents per thousand; next 20,000 gallons, 8 cents per thousand, and all over 50,000 gallons, 6 cents per thousand. I have 18,000 feet of glass and use the water also for the dwelling house and for the boiler and coldframe, and I use approximately 30,000 gallons per month the year around. The city owns the meter and I pay a rental of 75 cents per quarter, or $3 per year, in addition to the above rate.

here, in Miami, Fla., I beg to advise that the cost is as follows: For a charge of $3 per quarter we are furnished 20,475 gallons of water. For all over this quantity consumed in the three months we are charged at the rate of 14 cents per 750 gallons. We have 3,650 square feet in greenhouse space and about 5,000 square feet set in roses in the open. By reasonable care (not stinginess, but not waste-fulness), we make our water bill about $60 to $75 per year for this space, of course dependent upon variable weather conditions. In this state for about half the year we get plenty of rain for the outdoor plants to get along all right without artificial water. The balance of the year we have to water that part as well as the greenhouses. The above will give a good idea of water supply conditions as they are here, which we consider very fair indeed, and much cheaper than when we formerly supplied ourselves by gasoline engine power. This present service we consider excellent.

TRANSPORTATION OF FLOWERS.

[A paper by H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, Can., read at the twelfth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, in Toronto, November 11, 1909.]

The subject upon which I have been asked to read you a paper at this convention is a very important one, and one which embraces so much that I feel it is impossible to dwell long on its several parts.

There are also many theories as to the best way of growing, handling and packing both plants and cut flowers.

However, I will tell you some of my actual experience, both in growing and in receiving through the express companies from wholesale houses, with short and long distances of travel. Having been around with the wholesale growers both in Canada and the United States a great deal during the last few years, I feel I can at least say something which may arouse interest and a helpful discussion.

The express companies will also come in for a few remarks from me later on.

Packing Plants for Shipment.

First, then, we will take up the subject of packing plants for shipment. All will admit that it is a very important one, for no matter how fine and nice the plants are before shipment, if improperly packed, or if they are handled carelessly by the express companies, so that they arrive at their destination in poor condition, dissatisfaction is sure to follow. Therefore we have not only to consider the condition of the plants when shipped, but also the condition of them on arrival at destination.

There are a number of things to be considered in every stage of the proceedings. First see that the plants are in perfect condition for shipping, that is, thoroughly hardened or finished to stand the trip. If to be shipped without pots, the plants should be well rooted through, so that the roots may hold the ball of earth intact. Above all, see that the plants are thoroughly watered before packing.

Shipping in Pots.

The plants being in good condition, the question of shipping with or without pots must be decided, and this will depend upon the requirements of the customer, as well as the needs and nature of the plants.

Palms and other plants not having fibrous roots to hold the soil, should be shipped in pots, some support being necessary to keep the soil from crumbling. The Neponset or paper pots are excellent for this purpose, being light, not subject to breakage, also packing closer in the crate. Packing wrapper or sacking, firmly tied around, is often used instead of pots, and answers the purpose.

In this connection I might say that plants are usually packed without pots unless specially agreed upon, and in the latter case a small additional charge is generally made, to cover extra expense of crates and packing, as plants in pots require much more room and care; it also adds considerably to the expense of shipping, owing to increased weight.

Crating or Boxing

The above conditions being settled satisfactorily, the next step is to prepare the plants for crating or boxing. This will depend to a great extent upon the season of the year and the class of plants.

Such plants as table ferns, asparagus, small roses, chrysanthemums, geraniums, bedding plants, and plants of like nature, should be knocked out of the pots, a little of the top soil removed, and each plant wrapped in a small piece of paper, with the top open in mild weather, and with larger papers and the top closed in colder weather.

In long distance shipments a little damp moss should be placed around the root of each plant.

Larger plants, such as Boston ferns, araucarias, ficus, palms and flowering plants, should first have paper wrapped around the ball of soil, or pot, and then a larger piece of paper, covering the entire plant and coming high enough to

is the boxes or crates to be used in packing.

Crates as light as possible, consistent with strength and safety, should be selected and well nailed.

Experience has taught us that as a rule plants travel better, arrive in better condition and give more satisfaction when packed upright in light, strong crates, with plenty of ventilation in summer or in mild weather. In cold weather boxes should be used instead of crates, and should be well lined with paper. In extremely cold weather, sheet wadding also should be used to keep out the cold.

In every instance the plants should be securely cleated, to hold them in place in the crates, should they be accidentally or carelessly tipped over while being handled in transit.

Packing Plants Upright.

There may be some objections to the packing of plants upright, on the ground of extra expense of packing and transportation; but I believe that in ninety-nine out of every hundred cases the better condition of plants, and consequently greater satisfaction, will more than make up for the additional expense.

I would strongly urge that no boxes or selected, and plenty of excelsior used in the bottom and between the layers of plants to prevent heating and bruising of the foliage.

The crates or boxes should always be well cleated over the top, to secure a low freight rate and the special plant rate of twenty per cent less than regular merchandise rate by express, which is allowed only when plants are well crated or boxed.

The Lettering on the Boxes.

Crates or boxes should be plainly marked on top with the name and address of the consignee; also marked, "This side up with care," "Live plants, perishable," "Keep from extreme heat and cold." Also in express shipments there should be a notice calling the attention of the express agent to the classification, and to the fact that the shipment should be billed at twenty per cent less than regular merchandise rate.

In this paper I have treated the subject in a general way, and taken up points that are of importance to both consignor and consignee. There are, however, special kinds and sizes of plants that require special packing and handling, and they must be treated accordingly, but I cannot enter into details here.

One thing I have always been interested in and have found of great benefit, and that is to watch the various shipments unpacked at the conventions and exhibitions, and profit by adopting their good points and avoiding their mistakes.

This one rule always applies: Pack lightly but securely, with plenty of ventilation in warm weather, and secure from frost in cold weather.

Cut Flowers.

Now as to cut flowers. In the first place, I shall dwell mostly on the carnation, as that is the flower chiefly affecting the Canadian florist.

Carnations should be propagated from clean, healthy stock. I prefer stock grown outside during the summer; these should be properly and carefully handled, to keep them free from disease at all times.

After they are put in the houses, which is generally done during the months of July and August, they should not be allowed to come into bloom until the last part of September or the first part of October. This should be done by carefully pinching back any shoots that are showing buds too early. Care must now be taken to have the bloom in the proper stage of development when cut, so that it will arrive at its destination in the best of condition.

Growing Carnations for Shipping.

It is not a hard matter to arrive at a decision as to how carnations should be cut and handled during the early part of the season, or until the middle of November or the first part of December, when the plants have been given practically no feeding at all, but the hardest time of the year to ship carnations and have them reach their destination in perfect condition, is from December 1 to March 1, and again in the spring when the weather gets extremely warm and the plants make a quick, soft growth. Therefore we will take into consideration the proper way to handle carnations through the middle of winter.

In the first place, the plants should never be given an uneven temperature at night, but the temperature should be prevent the tops from being bruised in transit. In the case of flowering plants, and plants with tender foliage, tissue paper should be used inside the newspaper or other heavier paper, to prevent bruising.

(Mr. Philpott is Vice-president of the Canadian Horticultural Society, and in due order of things should become President at the election to be held at Toronto today.)

Best Style of Boxes or Crates.

The plants being wrapped and collected, the next thing to be considered crates weigh more than 150 pounds, as they can be handled by the express company much more easily. This would then prevent the danger of their being tilted on end, and in some cases turned upside down.

If, however, it seems desirable to pack small plants of carnations, roses, chrysanthemums, and other stock, lying down, then comparatively small boxes should be kept at 48 to 54 degrees, according to the variety.

Feed sparingly, but often, rather than give a heavy feed occasionally. In feeding, use only well rotted cow manure or pulverized sheep manure, as I prefer these to commercial fertilizers. Keep the plants in a steady growth, but do not cause a soft growth to be made from overfeeding or high temperature, giving as much air as possible during the day.

It may be necessary to keep the steam circulating through the pipes to keep up the temperature, so as to allow the ventilation to be open to give the plants as much fresh air as possible, especially on bright, sunny days.

Cutting Carnations.

When the bloom reaches the proper stage of development, which is not quite fully developed, it should be cut with a sharp knife between the joints.

As soon as one or two hundreds are cut, they should be immediately taken to the packing shed, where they should be placed in water. Have the stems in from twelve to eighteen inches of water, if possible. A cold cellar for storing carnations, where the temperature is about 45 degrees, is best.

Never crowd too many carnations into one jar, but give them plenty of room to absorb as much water as possible before shipping.

From three to five hours I consider would be long enough for carnations to remain in the water before packing them, according to the distance they would have to travel. In cases where they are shipped 1,000 miles, requiring forty hours to make the trip, flowers would be best in water from four to six hours before shipping.

Use strong wooden boxes for packing them in, lined with paper inside.

Packing Carnation Blooms.

Now as to packing. There are a variety of ways, some packing flat with wet paper over each layer of stems, others in bunches of twenty-five with a piece of ice laid on paper on the stems; others, again, with no wet paper or ice. I have unpacked thousands of each, and noted results of each way.

I prefer them laid flat with the stems in the center of the box, and wet paper across each layer until the box is full. By wet paper, I do not mean a piece of paper simply put in water and taken out again, but one that is soaked through and through.

Then place two cleats across the stems and nail them down securely, so they cannot shift. The box is now ready for the lid. I prefer the box covered with paper, thus making it as air-tight as possible.

The carnation is the same as everything else; it will only stand so much mistreatment, and the nearer you can keep it to nature the better results we shall have; the better we grow the carnation the more popular it will become and the sooner it will pave the way to be one of our national flowers.

Roses, Sweet Peas and Violets.

I do not propose to say much about the care of roses, the cutting and packing being practically the same as for carnations, except that in long distances a piece of ice is preferred.

As regards the packing of sweet peas, as soon as they are cut, place them in water for two or three hours in a cold room, at about 50 degrees; then pack them with wax paper and no ice. Place a sheet of wax paper between every row of bunches. Use flat boxes and only one layer in each box.

Sweet peas handled in this way can be shipped 1,000 miles and more with good results.

In warm weather keep them as dry as possible and if they get soft in transit it will not hurt them if they are put in water, and placed in an ice-box as soon as unpacked.

The same also will apply to violets, with the addition of wet paper around the stems.

Unsatisfactory Express Service.

I feel I cannot close this paper without reference to the necessity for better equipment for transit, and perhaps more care in handling while en route.

Express cars are not properly equipped for handling flowers, especially those on through trains, such as "Toronto and Winnipeg." In the first place, cars are loaded full and it is necessary for messengers to shift flowers from one part of the car to another, when sorting express matter for the many routes throughout the west. It is impossible to maintain one temperature, or nearly so, as required for safety in handling these shipments during cold weather, unless properly protected.

The only way flowers can be handled with satisfaction under such circumstances is that special compartments be built for them in through cars, about six feet from the side door, in the fore part of the car (this need not be a fixture), and when placed in this compartment they can be kept at almost one temperature and not subjected to draft as at present, while messengers are working local stations.

GLORIOSA ROTHSCILDIANA.

At recent exhibitions in the east, and particularly at Boston, Gloriosa Rothschildiana has been a center of interest. It is a member of the lily family which up to the present season has been offered in only limited numbers and which seldom has been seen outside the larger private establishments, but it is stated that Knight & Struck, New York, have this season come into possession of a quantity of four-year-old bulbs. The following cultural notes are by Arthur Griffin, the well known gardener at Newport, R. I.:

"When it becomes generally known how easily these beautiful plants can be grown, there will be few private places without them, especially as they can be flowered at various months in the year to suit the grower. With sufficient tubers started at intervals they can be had in bloom almost the whole year around, and the beautiful effect they have when trained either on the roof or as specimen plants has to be seen to be appreciated. Their beautiful combination of color, generally made, to cover extra expense of crates and packing, as plants in pots require much more room and care; it also adds considerably to the expense of shipping, owing to increased weight.

Their beautiful combination of color,

with the good-keeping qualities of the blooms, brings them into the front rank for choice table decorations. I have associated them in that work with Cattleya gigas and they have been as much admired as that flower. Also with all-mandas; they present a beautiful effect, harmonizing with them, and giving enough color to make them pretty and effective. And while, like nearly all flowers used for that work, they are better if cut and placed in water a few hours before being used, I have cut them direct from plants, stemmed them so that the foot-stalks stood out from any moisture whatever, in the hottest days of the summer, and used them for table decoration without any signs of wilting at the finish. But if they are cut fresh and placed in water they will keep in good condition a week. And another thing in their favor is that they can be flowered twice a year.

"They make their growths at the end of the tubers and great care should be taken not to injure these ends in any way or the bulbs will be useless, as they will not start from any other part of the tuber. When they have made a growth of about three or four inches they should be placed in their flowering pots, pans or boxes. If I have several tubers started I prefer to grow them in either of the last two mentioned, as they make a much better show than when grown singly in pots, although, for the convenience of handling, four or five tubers can be placed in a 10-inch or 12-inch pot, and they will do equally well. The pans or boxes should be seven or eight inches deep, or a little deeper for large bulbs. As they grow, the growth is sustained by the old bulb, which gradually wastes away, and a new tuber is produced at the base of the growth. They should have plenty of room to develop, as larger tubers are produced than when cramped for room.

"I usually place eight or nine large tubers in a 16-inch or 18-inch pan, covering the tubers all over with about an inch of soil, which consists of about four parts good fibrous loam to one part dried cow manure, but not with all the life dried out of it, placing them in a greenhouse with a temperature similar to that of a rose house, with no shade whatever, even in the height of summer. They require good drainage, as they want plenty of water when growing, and they will be in full bloom five or six weeks after being potted. When they have finished blooming they should be gradually rested until the vines are quite dead, when they can be stored away in a temperature of from 46 to 50 degrees, either in pots or pans in which they have been grown, without disturbing them; or taken from the soil carefully and placed in boxes of sand to prevent them from shriveling, and they remain there until ready for starting up at the option of the grower, according to the time he requires them to flower. If required for winter, or early spring months, they should be started in a temperature of 70 to 80 degrees, either in damp moss or sand, not keeping them too wet, but just nice and moist."

THE THINGS THAT HAPPEN.

W. J. Smyth, at the corner of Thirty-first street and Michigan boulevard, conducts one of the leading retail flower stores in Chicago. The high character of his business adds to the interest with which the reader will peruse a letter which reached Mr. Smyth the other day, addressed in scrawly pencil, "For a florist dealer in flowers and ferns on or near the corner of Thirty-first street and Michigan avenue, City." The letter, printed verbatim, follows:

Wednesday.

A woman told me the push cart with ferns and flowers that passed Thirty-first street was yours. I don't see the cart now. I suppose the weather is too cold, but if it comes my way and if you are still selling geranium slips for five cents a pot, you may send me just three pots for fifteen cents, and if you have a slip of English or Irish ivy for five cents, bring me one slip, and if you have a pot of moss the kind that lives out of doors all winter, for five cents, bring it to me any time and come right to my room. Don't go to any door but my door. On the other side is my address. I think the new number is 217, anyway, I live over the Fair Store in the Thomas building on Thirty-first street, half block west of Wentworth avenue, second floor up one flight stairs. Find flat B. Walk into a private hall. Knock at first door in flat B private hall. I'm here every minute. Don't go up to the third floor to Lairds School. My name is Mrs. Laird. I'm an aged woman and live in flat B. Later on I'll want some ferns. I have a dandy fern that was bought at your place.

Mrs. Laird, the old number was 441 Thirty-first street.

P. S.—I saw a lovely fern that was bought downtown for ten cents, a Boston fern, I think, a very slim, narrow leaf. I have had lots of ferns in my day. I call this narrow leaf fern Tradescantia. If you have this kind, a perfect plant, for ten cents, you may send me one if you wish.

A REVIEW OF THE YEAR.

[A paper by Elmer D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich., president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, read at its meeting in New York, November 10.]

This is our eighth annual exhibition. It hardly seems possible so many years have passed since our initial assembly at Chicago. Well do I recall the many new and wonderful varieties then displayed for the first time, the majority of which have been cast aside and their places filled by newer kinds. This constant trend onward has taken place for years, and thus it will ever continue so long as we bend our energies in this direction. We are mortals of emotion and our enthusiasm of today is tomorrow focused upon a newer and better creation. It is a happy thought and just as it should be. Our aspirations for greater achievement, with power and energy to execute these desires, are the stepping stones to success and mark the epochs of chrysanthemum history. We can not mark time, our course must be onward and upward, for we have not reached the limit. We must have larger and bolder flowers for our exhibitions, a race of commercial sorts which carry foliage to the bloom, and hardier and earlier kinds to withstand our northern winters. Such a type would be of great value to all lovers of border plants.

In accepting the presidency of this society a year ago, it was only the desire to do my part toward furthering the interests of so worthy an organization that induced me to consent. I fully realize the year has passed without achieving all that was desired. Financially we are in about the same condition as a year ago, and the membership has not been greatly increased. These matters are of vital importance and need our careful consideration, with the hope of devising plans to enhance our treasury and increase our membership. There are too many private and commercial growers who hold themselves aloof. Our committees pass upon the newcomers, pointing out those best suited for our purpose. This work alone is of sufficient importance to commend this society to every grower. The two dollars annual dues is certainly a trifling consideration, when the private gardener, from the reports of these committees, can select the best for exhibition purposes, and the florist, the best commercial sorts. There ought to be some way to reach every chrysanthemum grower and impress upon them our desire for their hearty coöperation.

A Cure for Lygus Pratensis Needed.

A very interesting article appeared in last February's number of Technical World upon parasitic insects, their culture and distribution under the direction of the University of Kansas. This article suggested to my mind a possibility of finding a remedy for Lygus pratensis, commonly known as the tarnished plant bug. Letters were written the Department of Agriculture at Washington, and the University of Kansas, but to no avail. So far as I know, we are still in need of an effective remedy for these persistent and destructive little insects. A parasitic fungus is now propagated and distributed among the western farmers to depose the chinch bug. The name chinch bug is often applied to the tarnished bug, but this is erroneous, as the former is distinct and known in entomology as Blissus leucopterus. Throughout the middle west the tarnished bug is found everywhere during the summer months, puncturing the stem and extracting the sap from a large number of plants and weeds. The chrysanthemum and aster especially are its favorite feeding places. It is to be hoped our institutions of research will discover a remedy, either in the form of parasitic fungus or a parasitic insect that will keep them under control.

Suggestions for Future Action.

There are a few suggestions which I will submit for your consideration. It seems to me the president should be empowered to appoint special committees to examine and pass upon the seedlings at exhibitions in localities which now are not thus favored, provided the interest in seedlings or the exhibits are likely to be of sufficient importance to demand such appointments, the term of office of such committees to expire at the close of the exhibition they are to serve.

An exhibition of considerable magnitude, providing classes and premiums for seedlings, which would attract exhibits from those interested, may be launched upon us at any time in such cities as Pittsburg, Baltimore, St. Louis, Rochester, Detroit and Cleveland. You may deem it advisable to place some limitations upon the president's power in this matter, to guard against any action which would be regarded as favorable to self-interests or those of intimate friends.

Another suggestion is that the Chrysanthemum Society become a standing committee of the Society of American Florists. It is evident that such an affiliation would minimize the expense and would better serve the trade. In taking such a course our records would be turned over for safe keeping, and the clerical functions performed by the secretary of the Society of American Florists.

This suggestion came to me so late that I have not looked up the conditions under which such an affiliation could be enacted, so that definite action cannot be taken at this time.

The Death of John Thorpe.

Since our last meeting we have been deprived, by divine providence, of one of the greatest geniuses of American horticulture, and a most ardent lover and cultivator of the chrysanthemum. The familiar countenance and figure of John Thorpe we shall see no more, and his pleasant address and enthusiastic admiration for nature's gems will lend no charms henceforth. A devoted student, whose keen eye detected the superior qualities at a glance, he loved flowers, and his enthusiasm knew no bounds. He was always elated when fortune smiled on the efforts of others, thus making it possible for the world to have better things.

He was the first to enter the show on the opening day and the last to turn away on the closing night. His was not a passing admiration. You would see him all day long, often with a flower in his hand or possibly tucked away in his hat, —maybe not a whole flower, sometimes a carnation or chrysanthemum petal or even a leaf that would strike his fancy.

I have often heard his rap at my room at five o'clock the morning the show was to open, discontented until he could find some one with whom to converse upon his pet themes, always free to impart his knowledge and advice. It was he who first conceived the need of and later was the prime factor in founding this society. To this man we owe much, for it was his teaching that kindled a desire in others to improve the varieties we had a quarter of a century ago. It is our duty at this meeting to adopt resolutions setting forth our profound respect, as well as regret for his demise.

Affiliated Societies.

Through the efforts of ex-President Loveless plans were devised to secure the affiliation of various horticultural societies. Last year the Lenox Horticultural Society took advantage of this offer, and this year the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has joined us, so we now have two affiliating societies. It is to be hoped this number will be increased each year, as I feel certain the effect will be stimulating not only to this society, but to the ones so affiliating.

In conclusion I wish to thank the members of the several committees appointed to inspect seedlings, for the time and energy so generously spent in our behalf. Their work I consider of great importance, and their findings above reproach. We all heartily thank the horticultural press who have so kindly devoted space for our notices, and the American Institute, who have provided the exhibition hall for this occasion and whose officers have faithfully looked after the many details incident thereto. We are also under obligations to those who have given us support and encouragement by donating special prizes.

NEW WORK FOR THE C. S. of A.

[A paper by I. L. Powell, of Millbrook, N. Y., read before the Chrysanthemum Society of America at its meeting in New York, November 10.]

In considering this question, I realize that it is a big one, and that there are great possibilities of usefulness before us, but I have learned, or at least think I have, that possibility and practicability are often too widely separated to be united. Knowing the numerical and financial strength, or rather weakness, of our society, I shall endeavor to discuss the subject from a practical point only.

In his appeal for increased membership and support for the society, by those who are benefited by its work, our worthy president made the unquestionably true statement that the work being done by this organization is almost entirely of a charitable character. If there are any similar organizations that are doing as much for the general horticultural public as is being done by this society in providing committees for the examination of any and all new varieties that the producers may bring before them, I do not know of them. As you know, the results are given to the general public as freely as to our members.

Increase the Benefits.

Now, I would suggest that the society endeavor to increase the benefits to be derived from membership. I would suggest that a committee to consist of one member be appointed for each of the general growing centers throughout the country. The duties of these committees will be to prepare a brief but thorough report of general conditions respecting the production and marketing of chrysanthemums, of varieties proving most valuable, and the production and dissemination of any new varieties that have not been placed before any of the committees. If deemed advisable, these reports could be collected and printed in the form of a bulletin, which could be sent to the members in time to be of benefit in preparing for the coming year's plantings. If not published in a special bulletin, they should be incorporated in the annual report. I think that such reports from members interested in the work would provide much information not available through the ordinary channels, and would prove interesting and beneficial.

I would suggest that some means be devised for providing new members, who may be novices in the work of growing chrysanthemums, with specific and detailed information upon the subject. Whether some arrangement could be made to supply those who desired to have such information with a treatise upon the cultivation of the chrysanthemum, or whether the publication in the annual report of all the papers treating of cultural matters would be best, would be a matter to be decided by a committee. I think that some such means could be devised, to provide such information at slight cost, and might prove an inducement for some to become members.

Improve the Exhibitions.

While it may not be possible for our society to have direct control of any chrysanthemum exhibition, nevertheless, we should use all the influence possible toward the improvement of the decorative feature of exhibitions. Competition at our exhibitions unquestionably has stimulated efforts to better cultivation that have resulted in the splendid specimen blooms and plants that are now placed before the public, but too frequently the arrangement of the exhibition hall is governed almost entirely by the convenience for the competitive feature, with the result that the general effect of the exhibition is inharmonious and unattractive. Flowers, like humans, were created for the supreme purpose of blending their individual beauty and charms with others of their kinds, and when they, or we, fail to so blend and harmonize, the great purpose of creation is defeated.

We assume to be professors and teachers of one of the most refining arts of civilization, and we should allow nothing but the best of which we are capable to be placed before the public as examples of our art.

I think that this society would do well to offer a prize of some kind each year for the best plans and detailed specifications for the arrangement of exhibition halls, the decorative feature to predominate and determine the awards.

While such plans would necessarily be purely theoretical, I am sure that they would prove educational and ultimately beneficial. That there is a general feeling that radical improvement in the decorative effects of our exhibitions will be appreciated is evidenced by the highly complimentary notices, not only in this country but also in Europe, paid to that feature of the spring exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society held in Boston last March and April. If our society can exert a beneficial influence in this direction, it will surely increase its usefulness.

A Roll of Honor for New Varieties.

I would suggest that in the annual report of this society there be incorporated a roll of honor, containing the names of those who have been conspicuously or extraordinarily influential in advancing the production, cultivation, or use of the chrysanthemum, with a brief history of their most successful and beneficial achievements. I think the least that we, as a society which aims to encourage the production and use of the golden flower, can do to honor those who have produced varieties of superlative merit or have otherwise benefited the chrysanthemum-using world, is to keep their names before our members. Take the instance of two varieties that have been supremely serviceable, namely, Ivory and Col. D. Appleton, which have brought thousands of dollars to the florists of America, and I doubt if ten per cent of those who have benefited by them know the names of the originators.

Should the society ever attain sufficient financial recourse to warrant doing so, I would further suggest that a medal, or some other form of material recognition, be awarded the originator of any variety that has been generally serviceable, for both exhibition and commercial purposes, for a period of five years.

New Members and Enthusiasm Needed.

The most certain way by which the society may increase its usefulness is by increasing its membership, and I think that special efforts should be made to accomplish this end. I would suggest the appointment of a standing committee whose duties shall be the preparation and distribution of literature setting forth the reasons why those interested in the chrysanthemum should become members, and presenting and emphasizing the benefits to be derived from such membership. This work should be carried forward with special effort during the period in which the chrysanthemum exhibitions are being held each year.

I think, also, that further effort should be made toward securing the affiliation of more of the local horticultural societies.

I fully realize that, whatever lines of work the society may undertake in order to increase its usefulness, additional burdens of time and money must be shouldered by some, if not all, the members, and the objection will undoubtedly be raised that the men who are capable of carrying on any additional work are already doing all that they can spare the time for doing. There is, of course, some ground for this objection, but this may be overcome by the appointment of committees for special work, the changing of the by-laws to permit the election or appointment of additional officers, and the hearty cooperation of all the members. All things are progressing, and as an organization we must grow and progress, and the greatest factor in our growth must be the spirit of our members. If we can continue to increase our membership, even though slowly, with energetic, enthusiastic members, there will be no question of the increasing usefulness of our society. In conclusion, I will call the attention of those who may have the appointment of men, for any of the work of the society, to the advice given the public by Elbert Hubbard, namely: "If you want anything done, get a busy man to do it; the other kind haven't time."

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America opened its annual exhibition at the American Institute, New York city, Wednesday afternoon, November 10. It brought out the finest showing of mums ever seen in New York. The attendance was large. The judges were Messrs. Dailedouze, Nicholson, Cartledge, Duff, McKenzie and W. Wells, the latter from England. The awards for the society's special premiums were:

Cup for ten blooms any variety, Wm. Turner.
Buckbee cup for twelve blooms in twelve varieties, Elmer D. Smith & Co.
Vaughan cup for bush plant, W. H. Waite.
Stumpp & Walter cup for ten blooms Miriam Hankey, Wm. Duckham.
Wells medal for six Pickett's Crimson, Thomas W. Head.
Pierson prize for twelve blooms in four varieties, Wm. Turner.
Totty prize for six blooms 1909 introduction, Thomas W. Head.
Skidelsky & Irwin prize for pompons, Mr. Weatherbee.
Foley prize for best undisseeded seedling, W. Duckham.
Traendly & Schenck prize for twelve Appleton, C. H. Totty.

In the general classes C. H. Totty was the only trade exhibitor, winning two firsts, but there was good competition between the private gardeners, who scored firsts as follows: Proctor, one; Wm. Turner, nine; Harry Turner, seven; Butterbach, three; Hale, five; Head, two; Duckham, two; Bell, two; Weatherbee, three; Dowlen, one; Waite, two. There was a fine display of pompons by R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. and by Meehan Bros.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Good, fair, steady business is the report for last week. Demand was a trifle better than in the preceding week, but supply is easier and quality better. Prices range about normal, and as a whole general conditions are satisfactory.

This seems to size up the local situation from the standpoint of both the growers and the retailers. Funeral work is on the increase, and there have been more than the usual number of weddings and early social functions, all of which have added to the volume of business. Mums now hold the center of the stage, and are bringing at retail from $1.50 to $5 a dozen, the average demand being for stock at about $2.50 and $3. White and yellow are the favorites, with pink closely following.

Various Notes.

Eugene McCarron reports a brisk wedding and reception business last week.

John A. Macrae's new home on Fruit Hill was the subject of an illustrated story in the Sunday Tribune, November 6.

George Hunt, of South Providence, was elected a member of the common council of this city November 2.

William Jurgens and wife, of Newport, are in Chicago on a pleasure trip.

Mr. Slattery, with T. F. Galvin, Boston, was a visitor November 3.

O'Connor had the decorations for the Fletcher-Watson wedding November 3. It was one of the swellest events of the fall.

One retailer here had an unusual experience last week. A man came into the store and ordered a large bunch of mums. He said he wanted the best to be had, and, signing a blank check, tore it from his check book and told the retailer to fill in the amount.

M. Sweeney has furnished the decorations for several wedding and house receptions in the last fortnight.

Charles H. Hunt reports the best business during the month of October that he has experienced since he started. He is cutting some fine Enchantress.

William Hay expects to break ground for his new houses on his farm at Oaklawn this week. He has purchased a yoke of oxen for heavy work, and intends beautifying the surroundings of his place.

The display of flowers at the funeral of the young son of John Good, one of the leading brewers of this city, was one of the largest in a long time. Nearly sixty pieces were well distributed.

Joseph Kopelman filled an order for ten dozen Bonnaffons for an east side social event recently.

A. L. Warner has completed extensive repairs and improvements at his Pleasant View Greenhouses, Pawtucket.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

A slump in business over last week, and a corresponding increase in the quantity of stock coming in, was responsible for a drop in prices this week, and even at the lower prices asked it was impossible to dispose of all stock. Chrysanthemums have been with us in quantities and suffered most. Beauties came next, with roses of all kinds following closely. The weather was delightful, so no blame could be attached to it, except that it made stock too plentiful.

The retailers did not complain much, as most of them were doing a fair business outside of decorations and, as they were buying stock cheaper, were not affected as much as the wholesalers.

Club Field Day.

The second annual field or visiting day of the Florists' Club, November 1, was a greater success than the first. Between forty and fifty members met at Phipps Conservatory, Schenley park, where they spent the forenoon, and I am sure Superintendent Geo. Burke and his efficient foreman, John Jones, must feel some satisfaction in hearing so many complimentary remarks from "the men who know."

From Schenley park we went to Randolph & McClements' houses on Stanton avenue, where a substantial lunch was provided and a good portion of the afternoon was spent. Gardenias, crotons, ferns, chrysanthemums and all the other things grown on an up-to-date commercial place came in for inspection and discussion. The crowd separated after leaving there, many having to catch trains, while some visited some of the private places in the neighborhood. The verdict was that visiting days are a good thing, bringing the boys together and enabling them to see and discuss the various methods of handling the kinds of stock they are interested in. All declare it a paying investment as well as a day of pleasure.

Club Meeting.

The club met Tuesday evening, November 2, at the Fort Pitt hotel, with a large attendance and a fine display of chrysanthemum blooms. The general interest was more evident than ordinarily. Two members were elected and one proposed. The members were pledging themselves to each bring in a new member at the next meeting.

A committee composed of H. P. Joslin and T. P. Langhans was appointed by the president to convey to Wm. Falconer the sympathy of the club in the loss of his wife, Mrs. Falconer having died that day. The same committee was also instructed to send a letter of condolence to E. C. Reineman, he having recently lost his mother.

There was a discussion regarding the advisability of Pittsburg having a horticultural hall, and so much interest and enthusiasm was shown that the chairman appointed Wm. Falconer, P. S. Randolph, Samuel McClements and H. H. Negley a committee, with power to add to its membership, to look into the matter.

The private gardeners had in competition twelve blooms of chrysanthemums in twelve varieties and one specimen chrysanthemum plant in an 8-inch pot. The judges were Wm. Allen and Neil McCallum. They awarded the first prize for cut blooms to T. P. Jenkinson, gardener for A. R. Peacock, and second to N. C. Madson, gardener for P. H. Boggs. The prize for chrysanthemum plant went to Frank Crooks, gardener for J. H. Park.

Other displays of cut blooms were by Randolph & McClements, Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., and the Phipps Conservatories, Schenley park and North Side park.

In discussing these flowers there was a sentiment that the largest flowers were not the most artistic, and yet that is what they are all striving to grow. John Jones exhibited a specimen plant of single, Mrs. John Sligh, which was fine.

President Burki sent out a special call for all the committee working in the Carnation Society convention affairs to meet with him, as he wishes to have things well in hand early.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. has given the interior of its store a coat of paint.

Arthur Langhans, of Wheeling, took the gold prize for the best decorated launch at the Business Men's Demonstration on the opening of the dam in the Ohio river.

Visitors: Mr. and Mrs. Chas. M. Weaver, Ronks, Pa.; Wm. Edelfsen, Milwaukee, Wis.; T. Bradford Stroup, New Philadelphia, O.; John Paul, Cumberland, Md.; Chal. Peterson, East Liverpool, O.; Miss Leizmann, Latrobe, Pa.; Mr. De Muth, Connellsville, Pa.; Geo. L. Huscroft, Steubenville, O., and Arthur Langhans, Wheeling, W. Va. Hoo-Hoo.

BOSTON.

The Market.

With mums at their flood tide, the market is at present more or less demoralized, and prices have slumped all around. These conditions seem to occur each year during the first half of November, after which time prices recover gradually. It is hard to quote any prices on chrysanthemums; a few may reach fancy figures, but the purchaser can fix his own price on much that is arriving. Roses have suffered severely, probably more so than any other flowers, and prices on really good stock are absurdly low. Carnations are also in over-supply, and many are cleaned out at low prices, some going below $1 per hundred. There is no great change in violets, which have now almost reached their full winter size.

Some good cosmos, Lady Lenox, is coming in, and selling fairly well. Lily of the valley moves as well as anything on the list. Lilies are not overplentiful, averaging $8 to $10 per hundred. Some mignonette is coming in, but the quality is not what it will be later in the season.

A few Paper White narcissi have appeared. There are quite a few antirrhinums, but demand for these is poor. Orchid blooms of all kinds are quite plentiful. For smilax, asparagus and adiantum there is a moderate demand.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The committee on gardens of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society announces the following awards for 1909. Silver and bronze medals are given this year, in lieu of money prizes, and entries have increased considerably:

George E. Barnard, Ipswich, reported favorably for the second year of the Hunnewell triennial premium; H. E. Converse, D. F. Roy, superintendent, and

A. G. Weeks, of Marion, reported favorably for first and second awards in first year of Hunnewell triennial premium.

Best estate of one to three acres, F. W. Dahl, first, with garden of spring flowering plants; Langwater Gardens, W. N. Craig, superintendent, second.

Garden of summer or fall blooming plants, Miss E. M. Tower, first; George E. Barnard, second.

Garden of peonies, Mrs. James McKissock, first.

Garden of iris, Henry A. Belcher, first. Rock garden, George E. Barnard, first; H. A. Belcher, second.

Fruit garden, F. W. Dahl, first. Vegetable garden, G. E. Barnard, first; F. W. Dahl, second.

Bronze medals were awarded to Robert Cameron, for superb culture of late tulips; W. W. Rawson & Co., for sweet pea garden; Duncan Finlayson, for fine condition of Weld gardens; Robert Rust, Pomfret, Conn., for fine condition of Courtland's estate; B. H. Tracy, for gladiolus culture; C. W. Parker, for condition of Redgate estate.

Honorable mention was given to Mrs. H. R. Foote, for rose garden, and to W. H. Swanton, for his estate.

Various Notes.

W. C. Ward is making a specialty this season of dahlias for winter blooming, and is now commencing to cut some remarkably fine flowers of Jack Rose on long stems, which attract much favorable notice at the Park street market.

W. W. Edgar & Co. are at present handling an exceptionally fine lot of that splendid white chrysanthemum, Merza. Their Bonnaffons are also as good as ever.

Excellent progress is being made with the formation of the new corporation to take the place of the older Park street market.

Among visitors at the recent flower show were: F. C. Green, Providence, R. I.; T. W. Head, Groton, Conn.; George W. Strange, Summit, N. J.; Edward Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; Thomas Vincent, White Marsh, Md.

Mann Bros., who are large mum growers, are making quite a hit with the Baby and Baby Margaret varieties.

Remember the club meeting November 18, with the lecture by Miss L. Louise Hetzer, to which ladies are especially invited. The nominations of officers, action on the proposed life membership clause, and other important business will come up, and the attendance should be a big one.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Trade last week was fairly good, and prices on selected stock have slightly advanced. Chrysanthemums are now in their prime, making a glorious display in store windows. Weather conditions may be responsible for a drop in prices within the next few days, as we are having unusually warm weather just now, and consequently stock is in oversupply. Shipping trade was strong last week. Store trade was good, but the Sixth street flower market Saturday, November 6, was overloaded; the hall presented a veritable flower show. Cheap stuff sold moderately well, but good blooms went begging. There were quantities of first-class stock, which sold at retail for less than what they could have obtained wholesale during the week.

The question of how to overcome this serious problem has been propounded time and again, and it was finally concluded in reviewing the market that the cause is simply oversupply with little demand. Like all things, this glut will pass away in another week, and normal conditions will prevail, at least during the winter months.

Roses have dropped in price, but carnations hold their own. All other seasonable stock, including greens, has been plentiful.

Various Notes.

Some years ago, while William Murphy had his store on Third street, a smooth individual walked in, representing himself as a Mr. Schneider, of Bluefield, W. Va. After giving a small order and paying for it, he left, and soon after appeared again, telling Mr. Murphy that he had been taking in the commission houses and was sure that he could be better suited with his carnations than any place else. He bargained to have 500 carnations shipped to his place twice a week during the season and, as he was in a hurry with an order, had Mr. Murphy pack 500 good blooms at once. The smooth stranger had an excuse in stating that if he could get this box to the depot within half an hour it would go out on the next train, and that the baggage master, who was a friend of his, would take it out for him. Good natured Mr. Murphy let him have the goods, and was waiting for the stranger's return to settle the bill. One hour later some store man up town telephoned Mr. Murphy that a stranger was peddling carnations about town, offering them at half price, and would make contract to fill orders. Well, this stranger has been lingering in Mr. Murphy's mind for the last four years. Last Saturday a man walked into the store about dusk and presented the Schneider business card, of Bluefield, W. Va. After a short talk, Mr. Murphy recognized his man. It took less time to trim him than it takes to tell it. Miss Cora Pherson, the bookkeeper, who witnessed the battle, said, "My, that man got more than was coming to him! I have been taking medicine ever since to steady my nerves." H. SCHWARZ.

A VISIT TO MOUNT CLEMENS.

"Must be a bunch of college boys off for a football game."

"No, sir! There's the mayor; I'll bet they are a lot of politicians."

But it was the Detroit Florists' Club in a special car starting for its eleventh annual visit to the florists of Mt. Clemens. In the party as guests were a number of Toledo florists, besides several florists from other nearby cities, also boiler inspectors and men representing firms with whom we deal.

Some of the party did not board the special car until it passed Charles Plumb's place, but the first stop for inspection was at J. F. Sullivan's. Arrived at Mt. Clemens, visits were paid to Leopold Mallast, J. Breitmeyer's Sons, Robert Klagge, A. L. Stevens, John Carey and August Von Boeselager. At each place the stock was inspected and found to be looking fine, and at each place there were refreshments and more or less speech-making. After the repast at Breitmeyer's, our mayor, on behalf of the club, presented ex-President W. B. Brown with a fine diamond stud. Mr. Brown was so taken aback that he seemed to have lost his tongue altogether, but managed to thank the boys for their remembrance, saying that as long as he lived would he cherish the gift as coming from the best-hearted lot of men he ever met.

S. N. Peck, of Toledo, said he was very sorry that not more of his fellow club members had availed themselves of this grand opportunity to see the fine Mount Clemens establishments. He also called attention to a similar event several years ago, when William Scott addressed us at Mount Clemens on one of our trips. He spoke of Mr. Scott as having done more to further our interests than any man ever had before.

OBITUARY.

John H. Beach.

John Hawley Beach, of Bridgeport, Conn., died at his home, 1984 Park avenue, October 29, at the age of 85 years. His health had been good until two weeks before his death, when he accidentally fell from the piazza of his home and sustained a severe shock to his system. For many years he had conducted a farm and florists' establishment and followed a line of agriculture generally, but retired well-to-do about fifteen years ago, leaving much of his business to his children.

He was a native of Bridgeport, the son of Isaac E. and Eliza Beach, whose fathers were also born in that city. It is said that the family is the oldest connected with the North church, marking seven generations and covering a period of over 200 years. One branch of the family presented to the North church the present parsonage.

Mr. Beach is survived by his widow, two sons, James E. Beach, who has a large range of greenhouses on Park avenue; David S. Beach, who does an agricultural business, and a daughter, Mrs. George S. Childs, of East Orange, N. J.

August Strantz.

August Strantz, an aged florist of Lancaster, Pa., died recently at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. W. Kiphorn, 702 Union street. He had been ill about a week, and his death was due to the infirmities of his age. He was born in Germany eighty-one years ago. He leaves five children.

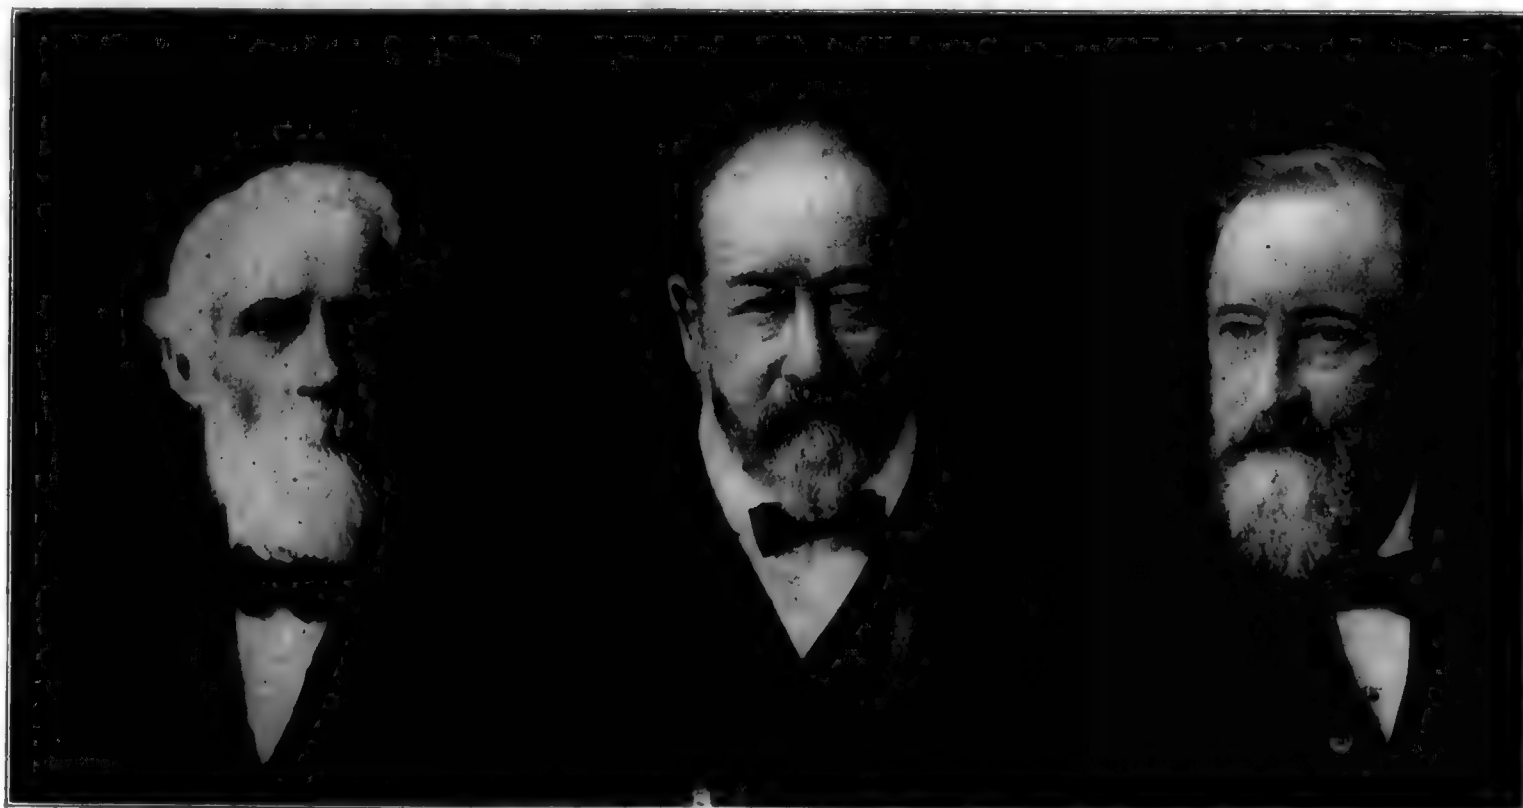

E. H. Schmiedel.

Ernest Heinrich Schmiedel, a florist in the employ of the city of Harrisburg, Pa., died on Sunday, October 31, of cancer of the stomach, at his home, 1837 Rudy street. He was born July 5, 1846, in Doebelin, Saxony, Germany, and came to America twenty-six years ago. For a number of years he had been employed by the city as a florist at the nurseries on the island. He is survived by his widow and one daughter, Mrs. Matilda M. Althouse, and three sons, Paul E., Emil E. and Otto E., all of Harrisburg.

Elmer B. Parmenter.

Elmer Burnside Parmenter died at his home, 147 Sixth street, Providence, R. I., November 5, as the result of injuries received on election day. He was 47 years of age. He recently started in the florists' business.

With three others, he was riding in an automobile Tuesday, November 2, on his way to cast his ballot at the state election. The machine had reached the corner of Hope and Seventh streets when it was struck by an electric car. All four men were thrown out, and Mr. Parmenter struck upon his head. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and was taken at once to his home, where it was found that he had suffered a fracture of the skull and concussion of the brain. A consultation of doctors was held, and it was thought that his chances of recovery were good, but Thursday afternoon he grew worse, and died early the following morning.

L. A. Budlong.

Lyman A. Budlong, who was famed as the world's largest market gardener and who was widely known in the seed trade as a leading grower of onion sets, died quite suddenly on the evening of Saturday, November 6, at his home in Chicago. He was approaching his eightieth birthday anniversary, but was strong and active up to the last few days, and possessed mental strength that was remarkable in one of his years. The cause of death was the hardening of the arteries which frequently comes with advanced age. Mr. Budlong was up and about the morning of the day preceding his death.

Lyman A. Budlong was born at Cranston, R. I., December 22, 1829. In 1857 he removed to Chicago and shortly engaged in market gardening, surmounting obstacles and becoming the largest operator in that line, the L. A. Budlong Co. now working 700 acres. Later he engaged in the pickle business, and from this grew his connection with the onion set industry and the seed trade. In 1888 Mr. Budlong and S. F. Leonard operated the onion set business together, one doing the growing and the other the distributing, and this continued to 1894, when Mr. Budlong became both a grower and distributor. His field of operations gradually extended until he became a leading factor in the onion set market. All Mr. Budlong's affairs were conducted on a large scale and by most modern methods, with the result that he leaves a considerable fortune. The business, now conducted as the L. A. Budlong Co., has for some years been in charge of a son, Joseph J. Budlong, and will continue without interruption or change.

Mr. Budlong left a widow, two sons and three daughters. The sons are Joseph J. and E. L., the daughters Mrs. A. L. Jones, Mrs. H. H. Chester and Mrs. Helen Shares. Of the brothers, Joseph A., who also removed to Chicago and whose greenhouse interests became extensive, died January 14, 1906. The younger brother, William H. Budlong, survives and was for years a leading figure in the vicinity of Providence, R. I.

The funeral was held from the residence Tuesday afternoon, November 9, and was largely attended, there being many flowers. Interment was at Rose Hill cemetery.

C. D. Zimmerman.

C. D. Zimmerman, of Buffalo, N. Y., who, for a number of years, had a retail florists' store on Chippewa street, and later was devoted to the landscape part of the business, committed suicide early one morning last week.

A. W. Steincke.

A. W. Steincke died Friday, November 5, at his home near Woodmere cemetery, Detroit, Mich. Mr. Steincke was 64 years old and had been a sufferer from dropsy for seven or eight months, and his death had been expected for some time. He is survived by his widow, and by two stepsons, Charles and John Warneke. Many fine floral emblems were received for the funeral, among them being a beautiful piece from the Detroit Florists' Club.

William F. Rowald.

William F. Rowald, for several years in the florists' business, died at his home, 1904 Broad street, in Edgewood, R. I., November 3, after a short illness from pneumonia, superinduced by an attack of the grip. He was 59 years of age. Up to a few months ago he conducted a small range of greenhouses on Bluff avenue, near his home.

Thos. McKenna Ulam.

Thomas McKenna Ulam died November 3, aged 47 years, at his home at 507 Edgewood avenue, Edgewood, Pittsburg, Pa. For many years he conducted a floral establishment in Pittsburg, retiring about four years ago. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Harriet Ulam; one brother and two sisters.

Jane Gordon Murchie Falconer.

At her residence, Forty-seventh and Butler streets, Jane Gordon Murchie, wife of William Falconer, superintendent of the Allegheny cemetery, Pittsburg, died of paralysis, Tuesday morning, November 2, aged 62 years. Mrs. Falconer was born near Stranraer, Wigtonshire, Scotland, and came to this country in 1883, and was married to Mr. Falconer, in New York, on the day of her arrival.

Mrs. Falconer had been in failing health for some years. Besides her husband, she leaves a daughter, Miss Jeanie M. Falconer, and three sisters in England, and two sisters and a brother in New Zealand. Mrs. Falconer was strictly a home loving woman, but took a warm interest in church work, the Y. W. C. A., and the like. Being of an exceedingly kind and sympathetic temperament, her influence penetrated far and wide, and she was sincerely beloved by those who knew her.

Many and choice were the flowers sent by sorrowing friends. Both at the residence and in the cemetery, Randolph & McClements had charge of the floral furnishings and arrangements, and in liberality, refinement, elegance and appropriateness the master hand was visible, Mr. McClements attending personally to the whole matter. Besides a wealth of lovely flowers and floral pieces sent by private individuals, many of the florists contributed generous tokens of their respect.

The pallbearers were Henry H. Negley, James J. Booth, Walter G. Crawford, G. Washington Moore, John J. Young and James Hardie.

YOUR paper certainly sells the stuff.—
G. E. FINK, Roselle, N. J.

Bronze medals were awarded to Robert Cameron, for superb culture of late tulips; W. W. Rawson & Co., for sweet pea garden; Duncan Finlayson, for fine condition of Weld gardens; Robert Rust, Pomfret, Conn., for fine condition of Courtland's estate; B. H. Tracy, for gladiolus culture; C. W. Parker, for condition of Redgate estate.

Honorable mention was given to Mrs. H. R. Foote, for rose garden, and to W. H. Swanton, for his estate.

Various Notes.

W. C. Ward is making a specialty this season of dahlias for winter blooming, and is now commencing to cut some remarkably fine flowers of Jack Rose on long stems, which attract much favorable notice at the Park street market.

W. W. Edgar & Co. are at present handling an exceptionally fine lot of that splendid white chrysanthemum, Merza. Their Bonnaffons are also as good as ever.

Excellent progress is being made with the formation of the new corporation to take the place of the older Park street market.

Among visitors at the recent flower show were: F. C. Green, Providence, R. I.; T. W. Head, Groton, Conn.; George W. Strange, Summit, N. J.; Edward Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; Thomas Vincent, White Marsh, Md.

Mam Bros., who are large mum growers, are making quite a hit with the Baby and Baby Margaret varieties.

Remember the club meeting November 18, with the lecture by Miss L. Louise Hetzer, to which ladies are especially invited. The nominations of officers, action on the proposed life membership clause, and other important business will come up, and the attendance should be a big one. W. N. CRAIG.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Trade last week was fairly good, and prices on selected stock have slightly advanced. Chrysanthemums are now in their prime, making a glorious display in store windows. Weather conditions may be responsible for a drop in prices within the next few days, as we are having unusually warm weather just now, and consequently stock is in oversupply. Shipping trade was strong last week. Store trade was good, but the Sixth street flower market Saturday, November 6, was overloaded; the hall presented a veritable flower show. Cheap stuff sold moderately well, but good blooms went begging. There were quantities of first-class stock, which sold at retail for less than what they could have obtained wholesale during the week.

The question of how to overcome this serious problem has been propounded time and again, and it was finally concluded in reviewing the market that the cause is simply oversupply with little demand. Like all things, this glut will pass away in another week, and normal conditions will prevail, at least during the winter months.

Roses have dropped in price, but carnations hold their own. All other seasonable stock, including greens, has been plentiful.

Various Notes.

Some years ago, while William Murphy had his store on Third street, a smooth individual walked in, representing himself as a Mr. Schneider, of Bluefield, W. Va. After giving a small order and paying for it, he left, and soon after appeared again, telling Mr. Murphy that he had been taking in the commission houses and was sure that he could be better suited with his carnations than any place else. He bargained to have 500 carnations shipped to his place twice a week during the season and, as he was in a hurry with an order, had Mr. Murphy pack 500 good blooms at once. The smooth stranger had an excuse in stating that if he could get this box to the depot within half an hour it would go out on the next train, and that the baggage master, who was a friend of his, would take it out for him. Good natured Mr. Murphy let him have the goods, and was waiting for the stranger's return to settle the bill. One hour later some store man up town telephoned Mr. Murphy that a stranger was peddling carnations about town, offering them at half price, and would make contract to fill orders. Well, this stranger has been lingering in Mr. Murphy's mind for the last four years. Last Saturday a man walked into the store about dusk and presented the Schneider business card, of Bluefield, W. Va. After a short talk, Mr. Murphy recognized his man. It took less time to trim him than it takes to tell it. Miss Cora Pherson, the bookkeeper, who witnessed the battle, said, "My, that man got more than was coming to him! I have been taking medicine ever since to steady my nerves." H. SCHWARZ.

A VISIT TO MOUNT CLEMENS.

"Must be a bunch of college boys off for a football game."

"No, sir! There's the mayor; I'll bet they are a lot of politicians."

But it was the Detroit Florists' Club in a special car starting for its eleventh annual visit to the florists of Mt. Clemens. In the party as guests were a number of Toledo florists, besides several florists from other nearby cities, also boiler inspectors and men representing firms with whom we deal.

Some of the party did not board the special car until it passed Charles Plumb's place, but the first stop for inspection was at J. F. Sullivan's. Arrived at Mt. Clemens, visits were paid to Leopold Mallast, J. Breitmeyer's Sons, Robert Klagge, A. L. Stevens, John Carey and August Von Boeselager. At each place the stock was inspected and found to be looking fine, and at each place there were refreshments and more or less speech-making. After the repast at Breitmeyer's, our mayor, on behalf of the club, presented ex-President W. B. Brown with a fine diamond stud. Mr. Brown was so taken aback that he seemed to have lost his tongue altogether, but managed to thank the boys for their remembrance, saying that as long as he lived would he cherish the gift as coming from the best hearted lot of men he ever met.

S. N. Peck, of Toledo, said he was very sorry that not more of his fellow club members had availed themselves of this grand opportunity to see the fine Mount Clemens establishments. He also called attention to a similar event several years ago, when William Scott addressed us at Mount Clemens on one of our trips. He spoke of Mr. Scott as having done more to further our interests than any man ever had before.

The members of the Detroit Florists' Club who went to Mount Clemens were:

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.
THE REVIEW brings results.

THERE is a florist at Pekin, Ill., whose name should be a business asset. It is John Bloompot.

THE white paper consumed in printing this issue of the REVIEW weighed 7,055 pounds, or slightly more than three and one-half tons.

THE granular cyanide of potassium, ninety-eight per cent pure, now so largely used for fumigating greenhouses, is quoted at 33 cents per pound in the general drug markets.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THE population of the United States is growing at the rate of about 1,400,000 a year and the purchasing power of the people is growing faster than the population. And yet some folks think the flower business is overdone.

THE man who hesitates to ask his customers to pay up is usually the one who becomes angry when he finds "Please remit" on the bottom of some statement of account he has himself neglected. Be a good collector and you will soon get a reputation as prompt pay.

DR. VAN FLEET GOES WEST.

Having ceased active work for the Rural New-Yorker and being about to remove to Chico, Cal., I would advise discontinuance of the copy of your excellent periodical which I have received for many years. I have always regarded the REVIEW as the best, brightest and newsiest of all florists' periodicals, and could not dispense with it if still engaged in horticultural writing. I think a copy comes to the United States plant introduction garden, Chico, Cal., where I am to be engaged and I can therefore dispense with the one sent to my present address.

W. VAN FLEET.

Little Silver, N. J.

VALUE OF THE FLOWER SHOW.

Editorializing on the closing day of the flower show, the Chicago Tribune had this to say:

"The flower show, which has reached a successful end, has come to mean more than an exhibition of beautiful plants. To its esthetic and artistic value it is adding, more and more every year, a practical and utilitarian worth. It would be impossible to weigh exactly the increased incentive towards home beautification which hundreds of Chicagoans find in each exhibition, but one seeing the crowds at the show and observing the interest which they take in the displays is conscious that a tremendous influence is exerted.

"When Chicago finally succeeds in its now painful search for rounded and complete municipal beauty it will be because each individual has contributed according to his ability and his opportunity, and these flower exhibitions are doing much to discover the individual ability and the individual opportunity. The horticultural society is striving consciously to bring this about, and not the less effectively because of the element of personal interest which enters into the efforts of flower sellers to create flower lovers."

HEATING DEPARTMENT READ.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

I wish to say that from my previous advertisements in the Review I have received a great many inquiries, much to my satisfaction. —Wm. W. Castle, Boston, Mass., November 2, 1909.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Last week did a great deal to confirm the belief held by some of the wholesalers that flower show week always is a dull one from a market standpoint; but the flower show cannot be blamed for the conditions existing now that the show is passed, and there has been little, if any, improvement thus far.

The trouble last week appears to have been due to a period of unusually warm, bright weather coming on just at the time the chrysanthemum crop was at its height. The result of the bright, warm sun was a great acceleration of production in all lines of stock, just when there was the least demand for flowers. There always is a time when chrysanthemums are on that the shipping trade becomes light. All through the country which draws upon the Chicago market there are local supplies of chrysanthemums, and while these are ready the buyers push the sale of the locally grown mums instead of sending orders to Chicago for mums, roses or carnations. As quickly as the chrysanthemums are cut out the shipping demand springs up again, and it doubtless will be so this year, as heretofore. Seasonable temperature alone will work a great benefit to the market.

Last week the receipts of chrysanthemums were far heavier than the market could use at satisfactory prices and there are reports of sales which would appear ridiculous if it were not for the fact that any sale was a good sale for the less desirable grades; it was a case of taking cheap prices or letting the stock go to waste. Bonnaffon was the best selling variety on the list. A large part of the receipts were of the indifferent grade turned out by those who handle mums merely as a catch crop, and this still is the character of a considerable proportion of the supply. There has been little change thus far this week, but at the rate the stock is rushing in the season seems likely to prove a short one. Singles and pompons have been almost as overabundant as the large blooms, but they are now generally used.

The pressure of the large crops of long Beauties has let up a little, but there still are abundant supplies. The medium-stemmed Beauties are not crowding the wholesalers, and shorts still are in light supply. The absence of shipping orders, combined with the increased receipts, caused a serious accumulation of roses last week, especially of the long, fancy stock, which many growers now are cutting in quantity. When the quantity

Once Tried, You Will Order of Us Regularly

We are shipping large quantities, but our crops are coming on more and more every day, and there are still some buyers we have not yet been able to reach. Our stock runs mostly to good "Selects" (medium to long). This grade you can sell in quantity to your good trade, but we also have enough of the "Special" stock to supply your wants in this line. Our supply will increase from now till Christmas. Get acquainted with our stock now, so you know where to place your orders for the holidays.

BEAUTIES

Our crop of Beauties is remarkably steady, notably fine and especially strong on medium lengths. If your trade appreciates good medium Beauties you should get in touch with us at once. Enough finest long and medium Beauties to fill all orders.

MUMS

Order anything you need in Mums—we have just what you want, big kinds, pompons and singles. Our Bonnaillon (probably the best seller there is) are extra well done in all sizes. All colors, all sizes; send the orders.

Carnations

Carnations are again in full crop with us and we can supply any and all demands at the prices that ordinarily rule at this season. Our Carnations always are the best the market affords. A big supply for Thanksgiving. Push your sales and order of us.

Violets

There is no house in the west that is pushing violets any harder than we are—and we certainly are getting the stock. Our supply of the Cream of the Hudson River Doubles is very large, and we have fine home-grown singles. Our stock for Thanksgiving will be especially good—and moderate in price.

Smilax Strings

Use Smilax in your decorations. We can supply it by the hundred or thousand; $10 per 100; $80 per 1000. Plenty of Asparagus bunches. All other Greens in large supply.

buyer can make the price on the best grade of goods, the average return for all grades must necessarily be low. The supply of Killarney is much greater than that of any other rose and the stock is fine. Excellent My Maryland and Richmond also are in the market. White continues to hold a lead in salability over the colored roses. It is figured that with the passing of the chrysanthemum crop shipping trade will revive with a bound, and will find the market well supplied with roses.

For the first time this season last week saw an oversupply of carnations. Prices weakened all along the line to the extent that the people who conduct the cheap sales were able to buy in quantity at a figure which permitted them to handle carnations once more. The stock is steadily improving in quality, and it looks as though the plants were now in shape to give a continuously good account of themselves. Curiously enough, red seemed to be the slowest sale of all carnations last week; usually red is scarce and goes quickly.

Lilies are again in liberal supply. Valley is plentiful. A few callas are seen. Sweet peas are not yet much of a factor. Small quantities of bouvardia arrive and sell well. There has been little change in violets, receipts not being specially large, nor demand specially brisk. A few outdoor gladioli even were seen last week.

There is just the usual run of business on green goods. Adiantum is used more largely than in previous seasons and some excellent Croweanum is seen. Asparagus strings are not plentiful, but there is an abundance of smilax.

Thanksgiving.

The wholesalers are taking the right course to build up Thanksgiving business—they are keeping prices down. The disposition is to try to move a large quantity of stock at moderate prices, rather than to try to push values up. The wholesalers feel certain that the business for Thanksgiving can be largely developed, just as it has been for Decoration day, Valentine's day and other holidays, by giving the public a chance to get flowers at normal prices; after the use of flowers for Thanksgiving has become an established custom it will be time enough to ask prices above the usual, if market conditions then warrant.

Aphine

A Triumphant Insecticide

"There are insecticides and insecticides, and then again some more. The terrible ravages of insect pests in these latter days have furnished the incentive for the making and exploiting of numberless compounds for special or general purposes in the never-ending warfare upon insect pests. We know of none, however, which has more quickly demonstrated its efficacy than the recently introduced 'Aphine,' which, in the course of a comparatively few weeks, has become a talisman among horticulturists of unimpeachable veracity and unquestioned skill."

Growers will make a serious mistake if they hold back stock for Thanksgiving. If the flowers are marketed as ready, there should be a sale for everything at fair prices Thanksgiving week, but if stock is accumulated, it will break the market when it comes in, just as it did last year.

Various Notes.

John Fuhrman has just completed the erection of two new three-story brick and stone buildings, and an up-to-date greenhouse on his old site at 3160 to 3166 North Clark street and 842 to 846 Fletcher street. The buildings contain sixteen flats and three stores, one of which has been fitted up by Mr. Fuhrman as a modern retail florists' establishment and was opened for business Tuesday, November 9. Mr. Fuhrman occupies one of the oldest greenhouse locations on the north side, the original plant having been built many years ago in connection with a Jewish cemetery that has long since been removed. Mr. Fuhrman took hold of the property about fifteen years ago and that he has made the business a success is ably attested by the improvements above noted.

It is reported that the Fairbanks building at the northeast corner of Wabash avenue and Randolph street, the second floor of which is occupied by the Flower Growers' Market, is to be remodeled in the spring. The market lease expires next May, but the market has an option of renewal.

C. A. Samuelson says the My Maryland rose is sometimes all right, but that it does not compare with Killarney, the latter being king of all roses from a retail point of view.

Vaughan & Sperry say that a number of their growers are sending consignments in a corrugated pasteboard box, manufactured by J. N. Hahn & Co.,

That Milwaukee growers can produce stock of really good quality was again proven at the Chicago show last week. For instance, the C. C. Nic Zweifel, of North Milwaukee, broke his own record this season by receiving five first prizes out of six entries, the failing entry being disqualified for having been entered in the wrong class. Lawson and second on Beacon. There were a mass of smiling faces at the Holton & Hunkel Co. Thursday morning, when they received word that they received first on twenty-five American Beauties. This reflects great credit on their stock, for did they not, with their two 400-foot Beauty houses, have to compete against the large growers around Chicago, who grow them in endless lots?

A. Groth, of North Milwaukee, who took hold of his place late this spring, has the whole establishment in a neat condition at this time. It certainly presents an altogether different appearance than a year ago, and the stock is coming along nicely. This goes to show what system accomplishes. E. O.

Business last week was fair. We have been having our Indian summer for the last two weeks and I do not think this has a tendency to stimulate the flower business. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful, with chrysanthemums in the lead. The larger blooms are now making their appearance, with only fair demand. A number of the growers are going to discontinue growing the larger flowers next year, as they claim the medium grades find more ready sale. Those who continue growing the large flowers should find a ready sale, if this be the case. Beauties, Richmond and Killarney are of good quality and sell well. Maids

He also has a pink chrysanthemum, with a flower similar to that of a water lily, of which he thinks a great deal and expects to put in an entire bench of them next year. Mr. Rieman will have mums up to Christmas this year and will have no trouble in disposing of them, as his own retail business calls for more than the output of his greenhouses. Another thing of interest is his collection of cypripediums, consisting of a dozen varieties, most of them now in bloom. There is also a crop of labiataes, now, and some fine blooms are to be seen. Mr. Rieman also takes great interest in his seedling carnations and I would not be surprised if he puts a winner on the market soon, as he has a couple of pinks and a red that look good. The pot chrysanthemums deserve special mention, as do his cyclamen, poinsettias and Gloire de Lorraine.

The Market.

We have just passed through a week of good business. Several important weddings, a number of receptions, a whole lot of funeral work, and a good sale for pot plants has kept every one busy.

Stock of all description is plentiful. The prices obtained at the commission houses are not quite equal to those of last year at this time.

There seems to be a scarcity of chrysanthemum plants on this market. Some years the few available could not be disposed of, but this year there is a ready sale for all we can get.

ber 9 to 13. He showed cyclamen, ferns and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. He also exhibited for competition vases of O. P. Bassett and White and Pink Enchantress carnations. Mr. Ellis has only been engaged in the florist business for about six years. Previous to that time he grew vegetables. Most of his carnations are consigned to the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, and are considered far above the average. He, at present, has about 13,000 square feet of glass, and plans are under way for the erection of three more houses, two of which will be 30x100 and one will be 26x100. The houses are after his own designing.

A large refrigerator with walls of cement blocks attracted much notice at Robert Klagge's at Mount Clemens recently. The roof is of zinc and tar paper with 1-inch boards above to protect the paper.

A remark which the writer overheard on the car, en route to Mount Clemens the day of our outing, was to the effect that the emergency pipe clamp, placed on the market by the Anderson Manufacturing Co., of this city, is a splendid article, and should be on hand in every greenhouse in case of a sudden leak.

The Bemb Floral Co. executed the quite elaborate decorations for the wedding of Miss Ida Schmidt, November 6. The wedding took place in Grosse Pointe. The ceremony was performed in front of a pergola covered with southern smilax and Asparagus plumosus. The table decorations and mantel decorations consisted of lavender orchids, valley and violets most artistically arranged.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The height of the chrysanthemum season has been reached and the effect on the market is depressing, for there are too many of all kinds of flowers. Prices, except on a limited quantity of fancy flowers, have fallen. Chrysanthemums that brought $3 a dozen ten days ago frequently sell for $2 a dozen today, with figures to correspond on the lower grades. The warm weather prevailing through the early days of November has brought forward the late varieties more rapidly than usual; White and Golden Chadwick, White and Yellow Eaton, Major Bonnaffon and even the white Mrs. Jerome Jones have made their appearance a week or more in advance of the usual time. To offset this, a capable judge like Leo Niessen says that the quantity of late varieties to be flowered this fall is larger than usual, seemingly assuring a good cut for Thanksgiving. The quantity of pompons put on the market this season is greatly in excess of previous years. They are popular and the market appears to take them, but it cannot be said with enthusiasm.

Carnations are arriving in greater quantities than at any time this season and prices have a downward tendency natural under the load of chrysanthemums. Roses are still plentiful, excepting only American Beauties, that are so scarce as to suggest the probability of a large crop at Christmas. The feature of the rose market is the appearance of the first specials or fancies in nearly all varieties of the so-called small roses, Richmond, Killarney, My Maryland, Mrs. Jardine and White Killarney. They are not yet bringing prices proportionate to their quality. Cattleyas are still scarce, some of the other orchids have dropped out. Violets are now in winter form. Both singles and doubles have color, size, fragrance, stem—violet that are violets, as the buyers say. The demand for them is improving, but the prices have not yet advanced. There is no marked change in the other flowers quoted on the list. The best are selected for special orders; the balance are jobbed off or remain unsold. Expert judges believe that the market conditions will improve next week.

The Exodus Over the River.

For a year or more the westward journeys of our retailers have been the talk in florist circles. The crowd that thronged Sixtieth street, the crush on the Elevated at Fifty-second street, have acted as an irresistible magnet to the projectors of new shops and to those desiring better locations for old ones. The Novelty, the West Philadelphia, John Jensen, Felix Myers, M. J. Callahan, Frank Ross, J. F. Leary, one after the other joined the already respectable West Philadelphia contingent. When Robert Crawford, Jr., opened his new store last month the list seemed complete for the season. Fancy, then, the astonishment in the trade when it became known that H. H. Battles had purchased 136 and 138 S. Fifty-second street. The store is now occupied by a shoe dealer, who is rapidly closing out his stock. It has an excellent front for display purposes, with moderate depth and possibilities in the rear that it is believed Mr. Battles will quickly turn to advantage. The time of opening, name and management of the new shop have not yet been announced, but it is understood that it will be opened as soon as possible, that it will be of the Century type, with a leader graduated from that progressive business school.

The street asserts that West Philadelphia now has enough first-class florists to rival the older city on this side of the river.

The Overbrook Show.

Edward A. Stroud issued 500 invitations to flower lovers in and about Overbrook, inviting them to the Golf Club on the afternoon and evening of November 6 to view the chrysanthemum exhibition of the Overbrook Gardens. Phil was fortunate enough to see a card and went gladly, thoroughly enjoying the dainty and artistic arrangement of plants and flowers. The show was held in the first floor and on the balcony adjoining. It consisted of specimen plants and selected flowers arranged for effect. The striking features of the show were the contrast in form and color, and the anemone-flowered varieties, Japanese type. Mr. Stroud and his manager, J. W. Prince, first pointed out a superb seedling from Garza, a beautiful soft pink, flowers large and of uniform size completely covering the plant. This seedling was shown at the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's exhibition on November 9. There were other seedlings from Garza, showing a range of color that Mr. Prince said clearly demonstrated the variety of colors possessed by the ancestors of Garza. The curious part was that each variety had a single color or shade, although all were obtained from one seed pod. The anemone flowers were interspersed with vases of Maud Dean (Dear Friend), Bonnaffon, Brutus, and the white Maud Dean sport. Baby was there, and also seedlings obtained therefrom, notably a pink. There, too, were the Japanese singles, grown in sprays, pleasing in effect, wide in range of color.

The Strafford Flower Farms, Mr. Stroud's other place, were prime factors in a mantel decoration—Enchantress, with Lady Bountiful and White Perfection on either side, bordered at the end with two fine vases of Beacon.

The show was educational in its best sense; such shows do much to cultivate the taste of the flower-loving public.

Chestnut Hill Show.

The Chestnut Hill Agricultural Society had its tenth annual exhibition, November 4 and 5, in Joslin Hall, Chestnut Hill. Chrysanthemums, roses, carnations, violets, plants and vegetables were shown in perfect colors and form. Among the chrysanthemums the following varieties were noticed for their beauty and perfection: Glenview, Brutus, Beatrice May, Nellie Pockett, Mortonet, Timothy Eaton, Mary Mason, Mary Donnellan, Dr. Enguehard, William Duckham, Silver Cloud, Mrs. Partridge and Colonel Appleton. The roses include American Beauties, White and pink Killarney, Mrs. Jardine and Golden Gate; and among the carnations were Winsor and Enchantress. There were also selected begonias, crotons, ferns, stove and greenhouse plants, all much admired by the critics.

John Little, gardener for Mrs. John Lowber Welsh, captured several first prizes for plants, vegetables, and vase of Beauties, also winning a silver cup for the best collection of cut flowers. James Bell, gardener for Mrs. J. W. Geary, was first on crotons, ferns and roses. James Bustard, John Ward, Thomas Rowe and R. Morrow were also successful in winning prizes and admiration for their choice exhibits.

David Murray & Sons, of Ridge View Farm, Perkasié, Pa., had a splendid prize-winning collection of vegetables. Two that were exceptionally interesting were peach tomatoes and vegetable oranges. A certificate of merit was given to John Ward for his magnificent big bunch of grapes, of which California could well be jealous. The Gardeners' Chronicle of America offered a silver cup, which was won by Edward J. Day, for the best paper on "Why I am a Gardener." Some useful gardeners' utensils were attractively shown by the Henry F. Michell Co.

Various Notes.

Smith, Lineaweaver & Co. report an active demand for anthracite coal, the domestic sizes being most in demand. The holidays, Mitchell day, All Saints' day and Election day, have interfered with production. In the bituminous coal field there is a marked scarcity of cars, making it necessary to place orders considerably in advance.

R. J. Irwin, of Skidelsky & Irwin Co., attributes the shortage in the large sizes of Japanese bulbs to the drought, the bulbs usually reaching 7x9 and 8x10 having failed to attain that size. The stock received is in excellent condition. A shortage in the best lily of the valley seems probable.

Charles H. McKubbin, of Henry A.

Dreer Co., reports that the shortage in eatable pea seed is as serious as anticipated, but his company has been able to secure sufficient seed to supply the demands of all its regular customers.

The Germantown Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting in the lecture room of Association hall, Monday evening, November 8. George B. Kaiser gave an able talk on "Botanical Observations in New England and New York." Premiums were awarded for cut and pot chrysanthemums. PHIL.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—Andrew D. Gallivan, of the firm of Gallivan Bros., and Miss Julia Hallissey, of Davis street, were married Tuesday morning, October 26, at the Sacred Heart church. The couple went to New York and Washington to spend their honeymoon. Their home will be at 3 Davis street.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Trade last week was good, with quite a bit of funeral work to clean up the short stock, and a wedding or party, now and then, calling for first-class stock.

Mums are not in abundance, therefore few go to waste, which speaks well for the retailers.

Roses are coming better each week, the supply of firsts still being limited, with My Maryland taking the lead in pink, Brides in white, and Richmond in red. Carnations are improving each week, bringing 3 and 4 cents. Violets and valley are in fine shape.

Various Notes.

E. J. Fancourt, of Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, was a caller here last week.

At a fire Sunday, November 7, $20,000 damage was done, including a carload of Sunlight double glazed sash for the D'Alcorn Bulb Farm at Congress Heights.

Fred H. Kramer is holding a formal opening this week, November 8 to 14, which is attracting nearly as much attention as the annual show of the Florists' Club. Mr. Kramer's new store, at 916 F street N. W., covers 10,000 square feet, about half of which is given over to a conservatory, 26x100, in the rear of the showrooms proper. Mr. Kramer has spared no pains to make this one of the finest and most pretentious stores in the country, and during the opening week an orchestra will render selections every afternoon. The conservatory is cement floored, steam heated, well ventilated and sunny, and is arranged with a view to getting the best results. The sales and showroom has plastered walls, attractively painted, a sheet metal ceiling and with the new furnishings and balcony offices makes as fine a store as can be found anywhere.

The entire basement is fitted up as a work and storage room, comfortably arranged for the filling of orders, and has a driveway leading directly to it from the rear of the property. Mr. Kramer started in business eight years ago with a basement storeroom of 700 square feet. His rapid and complete success is largely

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Indian summer continues and the market is overwhelmed with chrysanthemums. There is enough of everything and until the cold weather arrives there will be little if any improvement. The demand is growing, however, quite encouragingly and prices will soon harden and advance, so that by Thanksgiving we may look for the commencement at least of the good times coming.

Roses are now splendid in quality and in variety. We have now a dozen grand kinds to pick from, with Richmond, Killarney and My Maryland most aggressive and popular. The chrysanthemum supply is immense, but prices are not up to merit and much of the 25-cent stock of other years goes at 10 cents to 12 cents. The best carnations remain below their deserts and one big grower last week said: "What's the use! I'll put all my glass but one house into roses next year. I'm not in the business for fun and I know where the money is." So rose growers here listen to the voice of one of the biggest of the brotherhood.

Orchids and gardenias are in good demand. The new theater, the finest in the world, the opera house and the horse show will all help things this week. Violets also are looking up. The special bunches of 100 sell readily.

It is interesting to note the prices and market conditions of a year ago. Then Beauties were selling at 30 cents; mums were growing less in shipments and selling at $3 per dozen; violets were 50 cents to $1 per hundred, and carnations were advancing, with a cheerful outlook for Thanksgiving. Let us hope that history may repeat itself. The promise of a successful season seems brighter than for years. Never have the retail stores developed such enterprise and artistic decoration as now and the number of new ones would be appalling did we not know the growth of the city is phenomenal and the spending power of its

Club Meeting.

The attendance at the club meeting November 8 was large, every seat being occupied. The only exhibit was a vase of a new chrysanthemum, a sport from Yellow Chadwick, a fine large flower with red lines in the inner side of petal. This vase was shown by A. C. Zvolanek, Bound Brook, N. J. Resolutions of sympathy because of the death of a son of J. B. Nugent, Jr., and a sister of J. K. Allen were read and adopted. A. L. Miller, for the market committee, reported progress. Patrick O'Mara, on the resolution in behalf of increased pay for city gardeners, reported that this was not in the province of the club's privileges. J. I. Raynor and F. R. Pier-son were the other members of the committee. The report was unanimously accepted.

The nominating committee made the following recommendations for the various offices: For president, Harry Turner, A. L. Miller, W. E. Marshall; vice-president, Joseph A. Manda, Robert E. Berry; secretary, John Young, A. M. Henshaw; treasurer, W. C. Rickards, J. K. Allen, A. H. Langjahr; trustees for one year, Wm. Duckham, F. R. Piorovsky, J. Rassbach; three trustees for two years, Harry A. Bunyard, Philip Kessler, Adolph Jaenecke, W. J. Elliott, F. R. Pierson, F. A. Bolles, J. Hauck, R. M. Schultz, John E. Lager.

S. A. Leuba, Wm. Kessler, Geo. Scott, M. C. Ebel, H. A. Mahran and S. B. Wertheimer were elected to membership and Louis Reuter, Albert Demeusy and Ed Persan were nominated. Messrs. Ebel, McKenzie and Leuba, the new members present, were introduced to the club and each made an address of loyalty and appreciation of the honor.

From the floor after recess a fusion ticket was nominated, as follows: President, R. M. Schultz; vice-president, J. A. Manda; secretary, John Young; treasurer, W. B. Rickards.

W. Wells, of England, now a guest of C. H. Totty, gave an interesting address, tracing the history of the chrysanthemum from its earliest days. He spoke gratefully of the welcome he has met everywhere since arriving in this country. Now he feels he is no longer a stranger in a strange land, but much at home. He told of the varieties sent him by Mr. Spalding, of Summit, in 1890, Ada Spalding, Mrs. Alpheus Hardy, Col. Smith, George W. Childs, Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Tuxedo, Lincoln, Golden Wedding, Western King, C. B. Whitnall and many others, Childs, Whitnall, Lincoln and Tuxedo still being grown in England successfully. He also referred to the shipments made him in 1894 to 1903 and 1906 to 1909 of the Pocket varieties and other popular kinds. He said the English grow some kinds finely that cannot be grown in America, and that they have a finish of which this country has no conception. He thinks we have a rough and ready way of exhibiting here, with size the apparent object.

James T. Scott, of Elmsford, spoke of his acquaintance with Mr. Wells in England and inquired, "What about Col. Appleton?" Mr. Wells replied that neither Col. Appleton, Glenview nor Golden Wedding could be successfully grown in England, and that Dr. Enguehard and Merza were only grown for Christmas and January.

F. R. Pierson gave an account of the flower show last week in the Museum of Natural History, calling it a great success and thanking the club members for their coöperation. Next season, he said, we will have a show that New York will be proud of and that will be commensurate with its greatness. He also referred to the rose show in the spring. A general discussion of the New York shows followed. H. A. Bunyard gave reminiscences of the last show in Madison Square Garden and the difficulty of securing proper newspaper notices because of the fall elections. C. H. Totty also spoke on the subject of press notices and Patrick O'Mara said the newspapers follow public opinion, and the time will come when they will be forced to take notice because of the large attendance and enthusiasm of the public. R. E. Berry and Harry Turner also spoke on the subject, the president advocating a large premium list as the strongest of all incentives to insure attendance.

Mr. Furst, from the West, a guest of L. W. Kervan, also addressed the club, and incidentally mentioned Burbank and his accomplishments, which of course brought P. O'Mara to his feet again with some interesting data as to Luther Burbank and his records, magazine and

Various Notes.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America exhibits at the American Institute this week. W. Wells, of England, the disseminator of many of the leading varieties, is here for the show. W. C. Rickards is manager.

The auction season will soon be over. This week decorative palms will be the feature. The attendance continues large and a great deal of surplus stock is disposed of.

Dame Ramor was busy a year ago concerning the big new building on West Twenty-eighth street, between Sixth and Seventh avenues. She is busy again, and the ground floor and basement have been considered as a center for the plant growers and allied industries. It is certainly a fine building and an ideal location for any branch of the wholesale flower business.

Carrillo & Baldwin are now settled in their new home at Mamaroneck, N. Y. Facilities for growth are unlimited. The location is close to the Sound and ideal in outlook.

Herman R. Scounnodan, formerly traveler for Russin & Hanfling, is now with J. F. Sharkey, 36 East Twenty-eighth street.

Bonnet & Blake, Brooklyn, have now one of the largest and most convenient stores in the wholesale business, with ornamental front and windows. They handle the stock of A. Demeusy, of Flatbush, and many other Long Island and Jersey growers.

The Greater New York Florists' Association, Brooklyn, is handling the new carnations Georgia, Winona and May Day from J. D. Cockcroft, of Northport; also Beauties from Pennsylvania growers and rose stock from Jersey and Long Island. Manager Crawbuck says business is steadily growing. The leading retailers of the city of churches are members of the association.

Moore, Hentz & Nash are receiving grand My Maryland from Edw. Beher, of Madison, N. J., and the Brides, Maids and Beauties from H. Hentz, Jr., are all prize winners.

The offices of Aphine at Madison are elegantly fitted up and M. C. Ebel, George Saltford is handling some excellent stock from his own violet range at Rhinebeck.

The nurserymen are happy in the prolonged planting season. Great shipments go out of Rutherford daily. All the nurseries in this vicinity have had the best fall of their history and predict a great spring trade.

The fern, wild smilax and evergreen men are busy all the time. The Kervan Co., George Cotsonas & Co., N. Lecakes & Co. and J. J. Fellouris are seldom closed. It is day and night work with most of them. Harry Crawbuck, in Brooklyn, is just as busy. The demand seems to be constantly increasing. Looks like a big Thanksgiving and Christmas for the holly handlers.

W. H. Kuebler got his fancy delivery rig none too soon. The supply department of this enterprising Brooklynite alone keeps the rig engaged. He has built up a fine business, with his two big brothers as lieutenants.

Kessler Bros. are building up a steadily increasing business. Palm rental for decorations is their specialty and they are now painting their entire front in olive green to be in keeping with their display.

Mrs. W. C. Krick, of Brooklyn, says business is growing finely and the letter manufactory is working overtime.

J. J. Coan, manager of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., says business has grown rapidly since the second year began and many new growers have been added to the combination. The unity of interests seems to have demonstrated satisfactorily here under Mr. Coan's aggressive management. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

ASBURY PARK, N. J.—A wagon belonging to N. A. Corlin, the florist, was struck by an express train on the Pennsylvania railroad, at Deal Beach, November 1. As a result, one of the occupants of the wagon was killed and the other was injured, probably fatally. Both men were employees of Mr. Corlin. The dead man was Alexander Benson, 40 years old. The injured man is Gustaf Venstrand, 20 years old. Both were natives of Sweden.

CUT out our geranium advertisement; it has done the business.—HOPKINS & HOPKINS, Chepachet, R. I.

WE were pleased to receive some good orders the first week our advertisement appeared in the REVIEW.—W. G. MOULTON & SON, York Village, Maine.

PLEASE cut out our advertisement, for we are sold out of stock. Please attend to this at once, as we do not want to answer any more letters. Thanking you for past favors.—SCHARFF BROS., Van Wert, Ohio.

THE ad we had in your paper the last two months certainly kept us what they call "humping," for orders came in every day and they are coming yet. I am certainly more than satisfied.—WILLIAM EHMAN, Corfu, N. Y.

Vegetable Forcing.

VEGETABLE GROWERS ORGANIZE.

The Grand Rapids Vegetable Growers' Association, including in its membership twenty-six of the leading growers under glass in and near that city, was formed November 6, with the following officers: President, Louis R. Davis; vice-president, R. Yonker; secretary-treasurer, Frank DeKline; directors, Eugene Davis, John Wierenga, Jacob Moelstra, Edward Taylor, F. J. Cook, R. V. Huff and Henry Blanksma. A portion of the warehouse of the C. D. Crittenden Co., 71 Market street, has been leased for use as a central depot, where all produce will be delivered, to be sorted, graded and packed for shipment. An expert will oversee this work. Business will be done on a pro rata basis. The members represent about 500,000 square feet of glass.

INSECTS ON LETTUCE.

I should like to know the quantity of salt to use in making a spray. Would it be good for lettuce? I have not found anything very effective for insects on lettuce. I do not have any success with smoke. J. M. W.

Salt solution for spraying on plants is of no particular value as an insecticide and much injury may be done to the crop by letting the plants get too much of it. Better not use it.

Perhaps you have some kind of insects on your lettuce that are not easily killed. Aphis or green lice can be kept in check easily by smoking, but it must be kept up each week regularly, whether you have any green fly or not. If the flies are extremely numerous, you should fumigate two or three nights in succession.

The best way to smoke with tobacco stems is to start the fire in an old wash boiler or metal bushel measure and drag it through the house by a short rope, going slowly, so as to produce a good, thick smudge. Then, when you reach the end of the house, you take your fumigator outdoors, so as not to get the smoke too strong in the house and injure the edges of the leaves. If you have poor luck with stems after using them regularly, then try some of the Aphis Punk fumigating papers. They are quite satisfactory and much handier to use. You can get them of any supply house. Some kinds of fumigating papers are not a success, but this brand I have found excellent. H. G.

PROFITS IN MUSHROOMS.

Can mushrooms be grown as profitably as some advertisers claim? And in general, which is the easiest to grow, most profitable and least expensive? Would you think that growing mushrooms here in Colorado would differ much from growing them in the east? M. J. C.

The cultivation of mushrooms under artificial conditions is somewhat similar the world over, and it takes considerable experience in the way of skill and contrivance to bring good results. The most expert and successful occasionally meet with the most significant failures.

As regards their profitability, there is no question if they are successfully grown, and especially in Colorado. As in

No Grower of Vegetables under glass can afford to do without the Wittbold system of Watering

—because with it a boy can do as much as two men can do in a whole day with the hose—and do it better.

The system is equally valuable outdoors, and for many other crops besides vegetables—wherever you need water.

all other branches of our profession, success or failure is the result of how practically we carry on the work. If M. J. C. is a beginner in the work, without any knowledge of the mode of procedure, I would recommend that he take a course of study with some practical grower in the line which he wishes to follow, and in the meantime read some of the treatises by practical men, as advertised in the REVIEW. J. B.

GREEN FLY ON VEGETABLES.

As a result of the dry season we had here, in northern Ohio, my outside cauliflower and Brussels sprouts are full of green fly and are mostly unfit for market. I have been using Slug Shot, wood ashes, salt, lime, etc., to kill the pest, but without success. Kindly give me your advice. S. M.

The recent cold wave has probably killed off the insects, or if it has not, they will probably do no more harm this season, so that using any more insecticides would be a waste of time and money. When the vegetables are cut to be sold, turn the hose into them and wash away the remaining insects from them. I would suggest, if they appear to be getting a start another year, that you use some of the tobacco extracts, diluted in water and sprayed onto the plants with a small compressed air spraying can. H. G.

GREEN FLY ON LETTUCE.

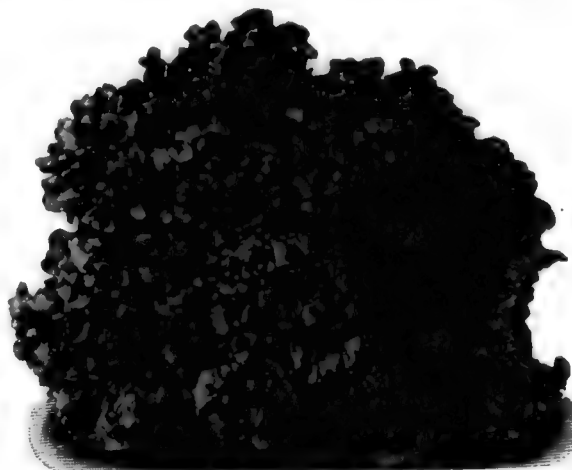

What is best to do for green flies on lettuce? E. W. O.

For aphis on lettuce I know of nothing better than the Aphis Punk fumigating papers. They are of heavy brown paper soaked in extracts of tobacco. When rolled up loosely and lighted like a cigar, they give off powerful fumes. Three or four papers are enough for 100-foot houses of good width.

Some kinds of fumigating papers are entirely unsatisfactory.

Tobacco stems from the cigar factories will answer well if used every week regularly, but not too strong. Get them to burning in an old wash boiler or galvanized iron bushel basket. Then tie a rope to one handle and drag it slowly through the house. Keep the stems from blazing by wetting them, and when you get to the end of the house it will have a good fog in it.

There is only one effective way to handle aphides or any other insects, and that is to keep them from getting started.

GRAND RAPIDS LETTUCE

is without doubt the best sort for greenhouse culture during the winter. Gardeners everywhere are delighted with its selling qualities and dealers and shippers will have no other kind. We realized the importance of this variety years ago and have steadily aimed to have the finest strain going.

Our Extra-Selected Private Strain has been evolved by years of patient effort and selection until we have it now at the top-notch. We sell hundreds of pounds annually to the most critical trade, and it gives uniformly best results. Plant it for big profits from your greenhouse. Oz., 10c; ¼ lb., 35c; lb., $1.35 postpaid. You, no doubt, know that we have many other extra fine strains and specialties for market gardeners. Weak doses will kill the young insects, but if fumigating is neglected until they get mature, much damage is done and they are much more difficult to kill. Sometimes severe injury to the plants from too heavy fumigating will be the outcome. H. G.

ALBANY, N. Y.

The Albany Florists' Club is holding its first flower show this week, November 11 to 13, in the state armory, with afternoon and evening programs. During the summer a special committee, headed by Fred A. Danker, made thorough preparations for the show.

Arrangements were made to divide the proceeds, fifty per cent to the Hospital corps, with whose cooperation the holding of the show has been made possible; twenty-five per cent to the several hospitals and well known charitable institutions of the city, and twenty-five per cent to the Florists' Club to enable that organization to close the exhibition free from debt.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. O. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

BEANS are not threshing out as well as was expected and some of the varieties will be far short of needs.

ONE wholesaler says he would like nothing better than to meet a few responsible buyers who hold the same ideas of the values of small seeds as do the directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League.

THERE seems to be quite a variation in the percentages of pea deliveries being made by representative growers. The average buyer will perhaps remember the one who gives the largest quantity, and then again perhaps he won't.

CHICAGO VISITORS: Thos. Landrum, representing C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco; J. W. Jung, of Randolph, Wis.; B. F. Brown, Fitchburg, Mass., of bag filling machine fame; Alfred Emerich, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris.

THE trade generally believes that the purchasers of what are termed farmers' stocks of seed peas are well aware of what they are bargaining for and that it is their own fault if the resulting production from such seed is not satisfactory.

A FAIRLY good crop of radish seed is reported from the Michigan sections. California is also said to have had good crops. However, if there are any surpluses of the turnip-shaped sorts from either of the sections they will be needed to make up the shortages of the varieties in European sections.

THE question of the scarcity of vine seeds is yet to be determined. There seems to be no question as to the scarcity of some varieties of cucumber and squash, but as regards melons, it may be different. There are some sources of supply from which no definite reports have come and until such time as they do the true situation will be doubtful.

THE Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, will move its market gardeners' store to 810 West Randolph street shortly. The new store will be one block west of the present location. The enlarging of the west market makes the move judicious, the new location being directly in the center of the market place. This firm has had its main market gardeners' store in the center of this market for twenty-five years.

AT CHICAGO: Onion sets continue to be in seasonable demand. The quantity in storage is nearly equal to what it was at this time last year and the shipments out have not been so large. This shows a clear gain over last year from the standpoint of the holders. The unusually warm condition of the weather has delayed the shipments, as the buyer has asked that his cars be held back until cooler weather. A moderately cool spell, when it arrives, will tax the capacities of the shippers, as then the buyers will all want their sets pushed out at once. There is every indication that the market will remain steady and that later prices will go up.

IN the west the Dutch bulbs are pretty closely cleaned up, but eastern houses have some surplus. The season is by no means over.

THE Gurney Seed Co., of Yankton, S. D., has purchased the Yankton Nursery, which for years has been conducted by C. W. Gurney.

THE sudden death of L. A. Budlong, the Chicago onion set grower, is reported in the obituary column of this issue. See page 39.

W. Z. PURNELL, Snow Hill, Md., says that, owing to the heavy cutting of holly for the last two years, fancy stock will be scarce in the east this season.

JACKSON & PERKINS Co., Newark, N. J., have done a large business in bulbs, although it is their first season in that line and their trade is wholesale only.

THE directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League will have another meeting at the Hardware Club, New York, November 17, that should prove interesting.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the incorporation of the J. F. Noll Seed Co., doing business at 115 Mulberry street, Newark, N. J., with an authorized capital stock of $100,000. The president is GERMAN SEED CROPS.

The German seed growing districts have reported steadily throughout the year weather conditions unfavorable to their crops, and each mail has brought advices more discouraging than the preceding. The result is that the harvest finds short supply in most of the leading crops, with a disposition on the part of holders to realize the utmost values for any unsold portions of their stock.

At Quedlinburg it is said the season was the worst ever known within the memory of the oldest grower. The winter caused serious damage, the spring was abnormally cold, and then came drought which lasted until September 11, being broken by storms of such severity as to work still further damage, many of the late varieties that in normal years would have been harvested being still in the field. It is estimated that the average yield has been not more than one-half of the normal, and the growers face a financial loss on the season. Cucumber, chervil and corn salad turned out poorest of all, but brassicas, carrots, lettuce and turnips were exceedingly poor, and the demand for peas and beans is far ahead of the supply. Melon, pumpkin, onion, parsnip and radish gave about half the normal crop, spinach a little better. The flower seed crop is equally poor, biennials and perennials having been devastated by the winter. Pansies and asters both did better than was thought possible in the middle of the season, but each is a short crop.

At Erfurt the season was hardly less unfavorable than at Quedlinburg, but cauliflower gave something like an average yield, other brassicas being short. Parsley is poor and carrots varying. Spinach, parsnips, beets and endive did better than most crops. The lettuces and radishes suffered through the wet harvest. In the flower seed department the sorts which ripen early have given fair results, but the late ripening sorts have yielded poorly. Mignonette gave a fair return, but phloxes are short. The single dianthus varieties are good, while the doubles have yielded poorly. Verbena, being late, is an uncertain quantity, and the same is true of nasturtium. The German sweet peas are not up to the usual

Are you a Florist or a Dealer in Flowers?

The Century Dictionary defines a florist as "One who cultivates flowers; one skilled in the raising of flowers, especially one who raises flowers for sale."

Did you ever see a skilled carpenter buy a cheap hammer? The skilled mechanic buys the best tools he can get to work with, because he knows they are necessary for success. The idea of cheap tools is farthest from his mind. How many florists consider well the quality of bulbs? Good Bulbs are as necessary as good tools, for success. The skilled buyer of bulbs always buys the best.

It had been his intention to continue his voyage from California to Japan, China, etc., returning via Suez Canal, but this had to be postponed, owing to extensive building operations at Stuttgart, which necessitated his presence. SEED BUSINESSES MERGED.

H. D. Garwood, of Rocky Ford, Colo., has sold his seed business to the Elbert Seed Co. and bought half of the stock in that corporation. The combined businesses will now be conducted under the name of the Elbert Seed Co., Mr. Creager and Mr. Garwood each owning half of the stock, except a small interest retained by R. S. Beall.

The new officers of the company are: A. W. Creager, president; R. S. Beall, vice-president, and H. D. Garwood, secretary and treasurer.

Mr. Garwood has been a resident of Rocky Ford for fifteen years, and is well and favorably known throughout the county, having served as county clerk and recorder seven years. During the other years of his residence there he has been engaged in the cantaloupe business and this has put him in touch with the large cantaloupe and market garden sections of the west, the south and the southwest, and he has studied conditions and selected and placed large quantities

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

Business the first part of last week was a little slow, with just enough doing to keep stock on the move and enable the florist to lay in a good supply for All Saints' day, and, according to reports from all quarters, the demand for flowers for All Saints' day cleared up everything. Saturday morning, October 30, as the market gardeners and farmers came in to market, they brought with them great quantities of outdoor chrysanthemums. This, of course, naturally made the florists feel a little doubtful as to how they would dispose of their stock, but as the afternoon and evening came on prospects brightened; consequently, all were satisfied with their trade; so, taking business in general, last week was a good one.

Funeral designing in the last few days has been quite plentiful, as several prominent citizens have died. While at the present time there is an abundance of chrysanthemums of all qualities on the market, they sell remarkably well. Carnations and roses are also holding their own. There are but few Lilium giganteum on the market now, and it is just as well, as the growers are anxious to dispose of their chrysanthemum crops. Callas are again putting in their appearance. The election last week was greatly beneficial to the florist, as there was a splendid demand for first-class stock. Nothing was too good for the newly-elected officers. It is said that the reelected mayor's office was completely swamped with flowers.

Various Notes.

Word has been received from William C. Hood, who left Dayton October 10 for Los Angeles, Cal., that he has reached his destination safely and is taken up with the country out there.

Mrs. C. M. Schaefer, who for the last few weeks has been suffering with inflammatory rheumatism, is able to be out again.

Miss Minnie Johnson is still confined to her home with bronchial trouble.

Elson Helwig, of Marion, O., and John C. Reinhart, of the Reinhart Greenhouses, Bellefontaine, O., were visitors at the Miami Floral Co. last week.

H. H. Ritter is well satisfied with last week's business and Saturday's trade especially. He says it was surprising to note the way in which roses sold, judging from the amount of chrysanthemums there were on the market. He also reports a good outlook for this week, as he has several dinner parties booked.

The Miami Floral Co. extends an invitation to all florists to come and visit its plant and see its new carnation, Miami Queen, growing. The carnation was exhibited at the recent flower show in Chicago.

George Bartholomew was a visitor to Herman Haerlin, head gardener of the National Military Home, November 3, and reported everything to be in fine condition and well stored away for cold weather. Among other choice varieties of stock he has a sport chrysanthemum in a bridesmaid shade of pink, which looks most promising.

Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs reports trade for All Saints' day to have been satisfactory with her.

M. Anderson had a fine display of stock in his store November 6.

R. A. B.

THE REVIEW sends Scott's Florists' Manual postpaid for $5.

NEW CANAAN, CONN.—Stephen B. Hoyt has recently completed his new greenhouses on South Main street and during the week beginning November 3 held an opening for the inspection and criticism of the establishment by the public.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—Burt & Coggan held a fine display of cut flowers and plants at their Arcade store, Saturday, November 6, all the flowers shown being the product of the greenhouses of this one firm. All ladies visiting the show between 1:30 and 9 p. m. were given a souvenir of a potted plant or flower of some sort. This firm has just installed a new, large refrigerator, so arranged that customers may step inside and there make selections of cut flowers.

From the Editor of Floral Life

GENTLEMEN:—Having for a long time felt the need of a good plant food, I was pleased last winter to take to my home a supply of your Nipona, for use on some of our many house plants. And I am pleased to say that our plants have reached the spring season in better condition than we had ever before been able to bring them through a winter season. At the close of winter they appeared to possess all the brightness and life enjoyed at the beginning of the season. I can heartily recommend it to flower lovers everywhere.

Enclosed please find remittance for another supply of Nipona, which I will use in our garden this summer.

Very truly yours,

PACIFIC COAST.

OAKLAND, CAL.—Hugh Kirk, formerly with the C. C. Morse Seed Co., is now connected with the Mountain View nursery of Oakland, Cal., having charge of the growing and selling of the nursery stock.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.—The San Diego Floral Association gave a remarkably successful flower show beginning Thursday, October 21. A great deal of interest was shown, chrysanthemums forming the main display.

EUGENE, ORE.—F. B. Chase is erecting two greenhouses for growing vegetables. One of the houses is 20x200 feet; the other is the same length and just a little narrower. The boiler has already been installed. Mr. Chase's place is just east of town.

PORTLAND, ORE.—An unusually attractive show window display of dahlias was seen October 12 at the store of Woodard, Clarke & Co. One variety which attracted special attention was the Souvenir de Gustav Douzon, each flower being fully ten inches in diameter.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Business seems fairly good for this time of year, most of the store men reporting good sales. Flowers, of all kinds, are plentiful, both those grown under glass and outside. The chrysanthemums grown outside are large and perfect and compare favorably with those grown under glass in the east. Prices range from 75 cents to $2 per dozen. Some exceptionally good, indoor grown mums bring $3 and $4. Roses are good and sell from 75 cents to $2.50 per dozen. Beauties are rather short stemmed as yet. Carnations, in the stores, are 25 to 75 cents per dozen. On the street stands, which are on every corner, they sell for 5 and 10 cents per dozen. Violets are seen everywhere at from 5 to 15 cents a bunch.

The seed stores report good sales, but say trade will come with a rush after rains, which are much needed.

The fumigation of all citrus trees is now being carried on, the work being done at night. Each tree is entirely covered with canvas, under which acids are vaporized.

Various Notes.

H. N. Gage, wholesaler, has enlarged his store, making it nearly double its former size, and has installed a new, large refrigerator. He has branched out into the jobbing business and, besides a large stock of flowers, will carry all kinds of florists' supplies. Heretofore there has been no florists' supply house in Los Angeles. A new sign adorns the front of his store.

Wolfskill uses nothing but hothouse flowers and has a good sale for them. He grows his own, having 125,000 square feet of glass. Recently he sent three carloads of plants and flowers to Mexico for a society wedding there.

At Wright's Flower Shop there is always a beautiful display of water lilies, of all colors, grown by Mr. Sturtevant, of Hollywood, who makes a specialty of them.

The Roth-Reymond Floral Co. will move, in the near future, from its present location on West Third to Broadway and Seventh streets.

The Germain Seed Co. has an attractive window display. It is laid out as a garden with a graveled walk leading to a cottage porch in the rear, on which are two Dutch children. Along the front of the porch are artificial tulips, narcissi, etc., which look as though they were growing naturally. The indispensable windmill is in one corner. The garden space is filled with baskets containing all kinds of Dutch bulbs. They carry an immense stock of everything in their line.

S. A. C.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business conditions for the last week have shown a slight improvement. Cool weather and heavy rains have put a quietus on the outside stock. Frost, so far, has not been disastrous. Roses have become a scarcity. Kaisers and Carnots show the ravages of the season, being soft and lacking in vitality. Brides and Maids are firmer, but show room for improvement. Mildew is the worst enemy of the rose, and the long rainy seasons require continuous firing to offset the pest. Carnations are commencing to show quality, but the demand exceeds the supply. The mums are at high tide, but not an overflow, and as the quality is nearly perfect, they realize top prices. Major Bonaffon, Touset and Buckbee seem to head the list. Cyclamen, primroses and chrysanthemums constitute the bulk of the blooming plants. Inquiries for ferns and house plants are more numerous as the season advances. Hallowe'en was the occasion of a few dinner parties, but nothing unusual was expended for flowers.

Heavy consignments of bulbs are in evidence on all sides. Judging from the advance orders, city and rural, there will be no surplus. The scarcity of holly is a source of considerable worry to the florists, as the indications are that the available supply will be short of the demand.

Various Notes.

The funeral of Mrs. W. S. Ladd created a demand for flowers, and many choice offerings were in evidence. Martin Forbes handled the family order, including a handsome casket cover of lilies and orchids.

Rahn & Herbert have a choice lot of Amerpohlii ferns, which for grace and form are unexcelled. This variety is highly spoken of on all sides.

G. Kloninger, the dahlia specialist, of Washougal, Wash., reports business beyond his expectations, and says it taxes his force to the limit to supply the demand.

A city ordinance recently passed, eliminating flower stands from the street, has caused a general smile among the florists, as they were usually conducted by a floating population, which had no local interest, and migrated with the seasons.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business continues fair, although it does not maintain the volume that it did during Portola week. Flowers of all kinds, with the possible exception of fancy roses, are in big supply, thanks to the continued mild autumn weather. Never have carnations or chrysanthemums been in greater evidence, or in better color and form. The prices during the last ten days have shown a tendency to decline somewhat. The best outside mums can be purchased at from $1.50 to $3 per hundred, with a few fancy Bonaffons at $4. Carnations can be had in any quantity at from $1.50 to $3 per hundred. Roses sell at from 25 cents to 75 cents per dozen for Brides, Maids and Liberty. Beauties cost the retailers up to $2.50 per dozen. Violets are apparently in their prime, although there is no question but that a good shower would help the stems somewhat. Princess of Wales is the only variety grown here, it having superseded all the double sorts, as well as the smaller-flowered single kinds.

Gladioli and dahlias have gone out of existence until next year. The former flower proved to be one of the best sellers among the outside stock this year. Dahlias had quite a demand early in the season, but toward the last they were hard to dispose of. A few scattered sweet peas are being brought into town, but they are of poor stem and flower and clearly show the results of the long nights. Other outdoor stock is practically out of the game.

Over in Oakland and Berkeley the retailers say that business is about equal to that of one year ago. Funeral orders have not been so plentiful as they were, but there is a good line of society functions constantly being celebrated, and the store men get good results from them.

Various Notes.

W. H. Hutchings, formerly of Hutchings & James, Elmhurst, has come to the fore as a grower of choice ferns, and has a splendid assortment at his new grounds on Liese avenue, Fruitvale, Cal.

C. C. Navlet, of San Jose, Cal., is in town on a short visit. He reports prospects for the coming season to be excellent.

Charles Leyval, of Forbestown, Cal., is paying a visit to some of the local dealers.

H. M. Sanborn has completed his new retail store in Berkeley, Cal., and reports a good, steady trade.

Domoto Bros., of Elmhurst, have just completed the planting of one rose house to Liberty and Killarney.

Claude H. Schmidt, recently of Chicago, Ill., is in town with the intention of locating permanently in the neighborhood of San Francisco. G.

SEATTLE.

Nearly every visitor to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition noticed three large beds of roses planted on the lawn of the Oregon building. Each bed contained about 100 plants, respectively, of Frau Karl Druschki, Richmond and Miss Kate Moulton. It was quite late last spring before the ground was ready for planting, but the roses were well cared for and succeeded beyond expectation. The plants made splendid growth, and were continuously in bloom from the opening to the close of the exposition. The contrast of color was admirable, and the beds were a source of pride to many Oregonians who visited the Oregon building.

In recognition of their superior excellence and fine blooming qualities, the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition has awarded the grand prize for roses to the Sibson Rose Nurseries, of Portland, Ore., by whom the plants were furnished. By special request of the board of regents of the University of Washington, the beds are to be left intact on the grounds of the Oregon building, as a permanent decoration.

McMINNVILLE, ORE.

Business is opening up in good shape this month, with a demand for everything that is ready to cut, and it will not be long till all the boys will have to get busy.

The weather here has been fine, and up to October 23 there was not frost sufficient to kill the most tender plants. Enough rain has fallen to make the grass fresh and green, and the soil moist enough for the planting of the fall crops.

W. B. Sims, of Newberg, while visiting here the other day, said that his greenhouse crops were in fine condition and that he was expecting a good crop of aster seed.

Mr. Frost, of Bellevue, is building a greenhouse 25x80, so the lumbermen say. This will be the first greenhouse in that part of the country. H. T. F.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Last week showed that mums are surely having their season now, and other flowers, except violets and carnations, suffered materially. There was no rush for roses of any kind, although Beauties sold fairly well. Carnations are more plentiful than heretofore. Lilies of all kinds were a drug, as were the cheaper grades of mums. Violets, both single and double, were cleaned up each day, the demand for them being good. There were not enough pompons to fill orders at any time, and they seem to be taking a good hold in this market.

Various Notes

Mr. Bodiek, of Alliance, and Mr. Cogill, of Salem, were here last week, visiting the large places in and about the city.

Knoble Bros. report having sold large quantities of mums at their Saturday sale, and say that trade is showing a healthy increase with them over a year ago.

Mr. Rock, of Woodland avenue, reports trade picking up. He was a heavy buyer all the week.

Carl Hagenburger has opened a retail store at the corner of Euclid avenue and East One Hundred and Fifth street.

C. M. Wagner has been showing some attractive windows recently and reports trade good.

Westman & Getz, of Euclid avenue and Fifty-fifth street, were heavy users of double violets last week.

Mr. Renard, of Philadelphia, has severed his connection with the Gasser Co.

Wilhelmy Bros., of Lorain avenue, have opened a branch store at Lakewood, on Detroit street near Highland avenue.

Mr. Chapple, of Chapple & Son, Garrettsville, was a visitor here last week. This firm is sending out a fine cut of carnations.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERMEN.
Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

LET'S PULL TOGETHER.

[A synopsis of a paper by J. H. Dayton, secretary of the Storrs & Harrison Co., read before the American Association of Nurserymen in June, and so well liked by the southerners who heard it that it was read again at the recent meeting of the Southern Nurserymen's Association, at Huntsville, Ala.]

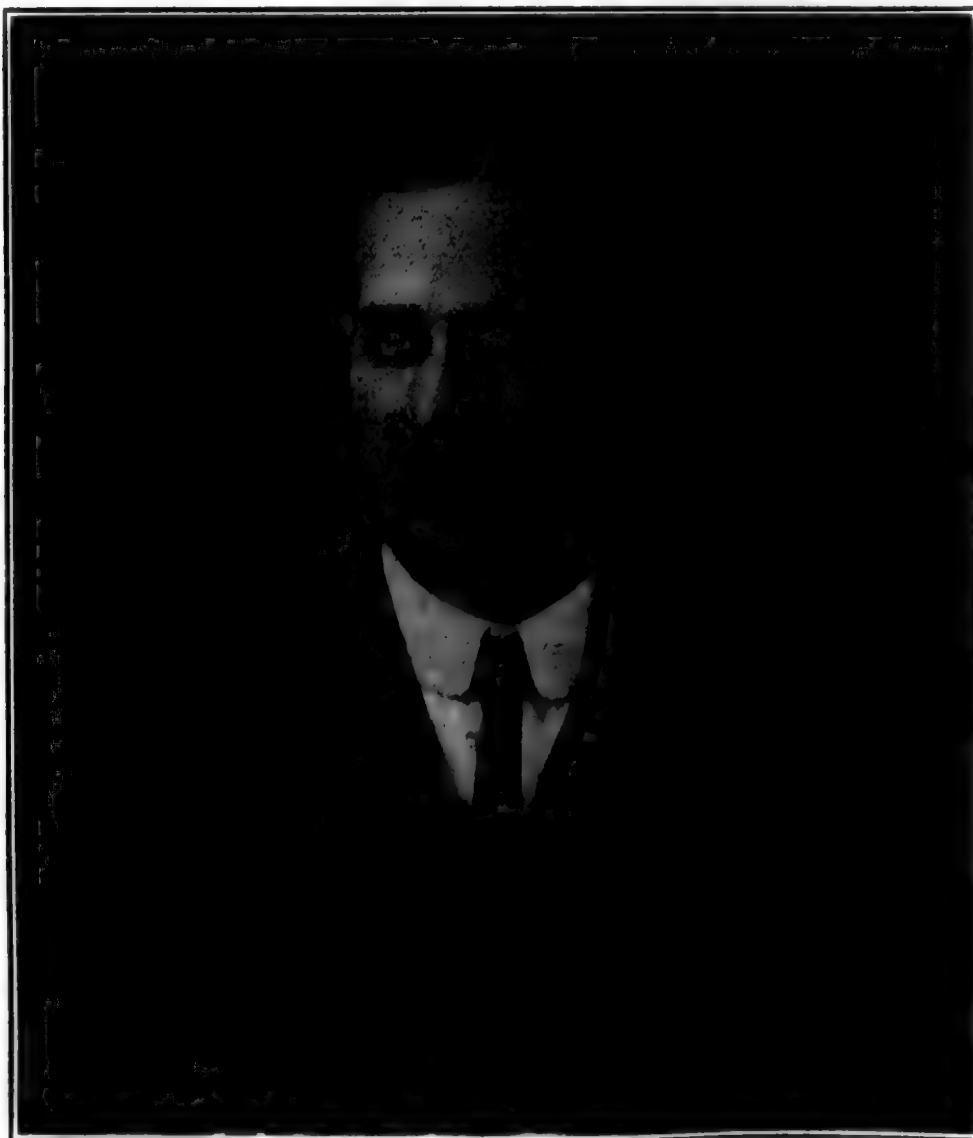

To judge from the letters published, the papers read at some of the fruit growers' and horticultural societies, the remarks made and laws introduced into some of our legislatures, the sole object man is able to carry on his operations only by the ignorance or cupidity of the buyer. The consumer who will use as much brain work in buying nursery stock as his wife does in buying clothing for the kids, will get what he buys and pays for.

However well established our reputation seems to be for deeds that are dark, do you not think a little honest striving together might eliminate some abuses, destroy some bad habits and set us a little nearer right in the eyes of the consumer?

Unsatisfactory Returns.

We will all agree, when we take into consideration the inevitable task of growing and handling perishable stock, the experience and care that must be exercised to produce good stock, the capital that must be provided and locked up in of every nurseryman is to do up his customers, mislabel and kill as many of his trees as possible before shipment. The truth is, that, outside of the few genuine mistakes that are bound to occur in any business, the swindling dealer or nursery-growing blocks for from one to ten years or more, that the returns are not and have not been at all commensurate, and that in any series of years more stock leaves the actual grower's hands at an actual loss than at a profit. Who ever heard of a rich nurseryman who obtained his filthy lucre from the profits in growing stock?

Who is to blame? Well, you and I, if we are honest about it, will shoulder the responsibility and acknowledge it is our own fault. We cannot figure to a certainty the cost of our products, as does the manufacturer, who is able to control conditions and to insure both his finished product and raw material, but can we not establish a table of values and fix a basis below which everyone will understand he is selling at a loss? Can we not educate ourselves as to the true value of our stock and the prices we must obtain, if it is sold at a profit? In fact, do you not know that active, intelligent coöperation among nurserymen could be made to establish us on a genuine business basis and establish confidence among ourselves and in our dealings with the public?

A Solemn Choice.

Commerce is not war and the good bargain benefits both parties. I understand the first fruit trust was organized in the Garden of Eden, with his satanic majesty as promoter. Perhaps the disastrous result of that speculation is one of the reasons why it seems almost an impossibility to secure active, honest coöperation among the growers of agricultural and nursery products. I remember hearing Mr. Collingwood make a statement something like this: "If you should lock up seven farmers (he might have said nurserymen) in a room, give them a week to deliberate and their choice of coming out to pool their issues, buy and sell their products as one, directing one or two of their number to attend to their business as officers; or to be hung, there would be seven hangings on the seventh day."

Is not now a good time for concerted action in a common cause? Cannot we agree on some things we know and acknowledge to be wrong, eliminate and bury them so deep that their specters will never again trouble even the dreams of our trade? Cannot a few things, that we all know would improve our business and put money in our pockets, be adopted and lived up to by enough of our mem-

RAFFIA

ALL COLORS

RAFFIA IN HORTICULTURE

A skein of raffia is an everyday necessity wherever floriculture or horticulture are carried on. Raffia is the favorite tying material with the plantmen for several reasons. Not the least of these is its comparative inexpensiveness, but greatest of all is the fact that it neither stretches nor shrinks under the influence of heat or moisture. Once properly adjusted, a tie of raffia does not loosen, releasing that which it was intended to hold; neither does it shrink and cut the plant, perhaps to ruin it. It is soft and pliable, and does not break or ravel when folded or knotted. These qualities bring raffia into general use for many purposes in nurseries and green-houses, where heat or moisture are always found. Raffia is also especially adapted for grafting.

Running Down Prices.

What about price lists? Like some ministers' texts, are they not often used only as a point of departure, only we run prices down, while the reverend is trying to elevate? What about the price list of steel or iron, or a thousand other manufactures? In what other convention in the world could I step from the platform and receive such a variety of prices on what purported to be the same article, and on what other commodity would there be such a diversity in grade or value when delivery was made?

If you knew nothing about our business and were made a trustee of some institution which desired a bill of trees for its grounds; if you made up a list, asked prices and received bids, offering exactly the same lot of stock at from $318 to $675, and every offer from a reliable house, long in the business, well quoted in commercial reports and capable of filling their contracts, what would you think of the business sense and sagacity of the organized nurserymen? If a tree is worth $1 of any planter's money the first day of April, is it worth only 20 cents the first day of May? Have we not deliberately educated buyers to the fact that our products have no fixed value and that our estimated value fluctuates from day to day during the season, according to the way our mail opens up, or our food agrees or disagrees with us?

can grow and sell as cheap as the other fellow, or indeed go him one better, can we expect anything but meager returns, or none? Are not the cut rates, reduced lists and cheap offers that flood our mails late every season, simply an admission of our incapacity to dispose of our stock at fair and reasonable profits? —

What about grades? Perhaps no one standard will be adapted to every section, but is it beyond the capacity of this body of men to fix and put in operation a system of grading that any man can learn and apply, and that will make us reasonably sure of what we shall find in our cars and boxes when delivered?

Who Are Entitled to Trade Rates?

What about buyers at wholesale? Who are entitled to trade prices? Would it not be possible to have a list of actual wholesale traders, revised from year to year? Is the man who occasionally buys a few trees from his neighbor, or who every year disposes of the products of a few acres of small fruits, entitled to trade rates and surplus lists?

Take our own state, Ohio. Last year 567 applications were made for certificates, 509 issued. Of these eighty-seven cultivated ten or more acres; one, one-eighth of an acre; eighty-two, one acre or less. The large majority are small fruit growers and sell nothing but their surplus plants, yet their names find their way into our mailing lists as nurserymen.

Are the public institutions, parks, etc., who buy one to three large bills for the planting of their grounds, entitled to the same rates as fellow nurserymen? Why not decide and have some ruling that we could all know and understand, instead of, as at present, allowing everyone to be a law unto himself? What about the man who buys an estate and pays the landscape architect a large price for planting plans and supervision? Should we supply the stock at lowest trade rates, assuming, as we must, all the risk and rebates expected by the retail purchaser? Ought not we to fix our own terms and methods of handling this business, instead of allowing another organization to dictate them to us?

We trust each other in every way until we come to the marketing of our products, when we usually act as though we thought every competitor had the principles of a Sioux Indian and was out with his little tomahawk to do us up, and hang our bleeding scalps in the sacred precincts of the bankruptcy court.

Wide Scope for Co-operation.

No nurseryman can live to himself alone; anything that hurts one firm hurts all; any method adopted by one or more that elevates the business and standing of one firm elevates all. Should we not stand together, or rather move forward together, coöperating not only with one another, but with all kindred organizations, not only to receive some of the results hinted at here, but in connection with civic improvement bodies, the Council of Horticulture, or any or all agencies, of which the object is to make a cleaner, brighter and better planted America? Every back yard cleaned and planted, every scholar interested in a school garden, every farmer shown the possibilities of fruit culture, are bound to extend our business and make a better outlet for our stock.

Do not think I have no faith in our business or in my fellow tree man. Every one on the program has a dispensation to knock a little. All of us who have for years been trying to reach an automobile income, and have been sweetened by adversity until we now have all faith in walking, as an exercise and a sure way to get there, all know that through our organization much has been accomplished, that there is a better understanding, more of a disposition to look at things with the other fellow's eye, a strong desire here and there to get together and put the nursery interest on its proper plane. We have done many things; we can do many more.

DES MOINES, IA.

The Market.

Trade for the last week has been good, notwithstanding the summer weather we are having. Large numbers of mums were used up Saturday for the Drake-Iowa football game. Carnations are coming in more plentifully, although not enough so to satisfy the demands. Roses are sufficiently numerous to supply all demands. Paper White narcissi are now ready to cut and help out for variety. Early and midseason mums are nearly all gone and the later ones are not yet ready, thus causing a shortage for a few days.

Various Notes.

Frank Stevens has bought a half interest in the Rush Floral Co., near the street railroad waiting-room, and reports business good.

J. S. Wilson Floral Co. has installed a Morehead steam trap in its heating plant.

C. N. Page and Frank Riley, both of the Iowa Seed Co., left here Wednesday night for Chicago, to see the big flower show.

There is some talk of reviving the old Florists' Club here, and discussing plans for a flower show here in the fall of 1910. BOOSTER.

CALL AND SEE IT GROWING Miami Queen

In dissemination of this new carnation, the introducer feels confident it excels all similar varieties in the following respects:

It has a strong constitution and will thrive with ordinary culture.

The color is a grand cerise pink and very double, shows up fine under artificial light.

The blooming qualities are of the best, commencing in early Fall and continuing throughout the season.

During the dark days of Winter, this carnation, having a strong calyx, does not split to any extent, like other pinks.

The form is ideal, the flower being from 3 inches to 4 inches; the plant compact, with no surplus grass; the stem is long and graceful; keeping qualities are excellent; a good shipper; and we feel confident that this is one of the best commercial carnations sent out in years; we have given it five years' trial, and it is better this year than ever.

We are booking orders for January, 1910, delivery, at $10.00 per 100, $85.00 per 1000. Orders filled in strict rotation. For sale by

AZALEAS FOR EASTER.

When should azaleas be started to be in bloom for Easter? What temperature should they be grown in and what treatment do they need?

R. H. L. & B.

It is much too early to think about starting azaleas for Easter yet. Watch the "Seasonable Suggestions" for hints as to when they should be started. Plants placed in a moderate heat, 50 to 55 degrees at night, about the middle of January will flower in good season. They can be started even later and some varieties will flower within five to six weeks, but hard forcing is not to be recommended. Easter comes March 27, and if plants required in flower then are placed in heat about January 15, they will be all right. Some varieties, like Simon Mardner, Hexe, Deutsche Perle, etc., known as Christmas varieties, will need no forcing at all. Hold your plants just clear of freezing until they are to be started.

C. W.

NAME OF PLANT.

I send you under separate cover a plant which I should like you to tell me the name of. I have been calling it a sun cactus and have advertised it under that name.

E. O. P.

The plant is Mesembryanthemum conspicuum. A common name for mesembryanthemums is fig marigolds. The ancient Greeks named them midday flowers, owing to the flowers being expanded when the sun shone on them at that time.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Business has been fine for several weeks, till warmer weather came on, when it slackened considerably. Roses, carnations and mums had been rather scarce and, with a number of weddings and lots of funeral work on hand, a general scurry was made for enough flowers. Since the warm spell stock has increased and demand decreased to such an extent that there is a glut. Chrysanthemums are coming on fast, also roses. Carnations are not so plentiful, but are of good quality. Sweet peas are good and bring a fair price.

Various Notes.

Benj. Kramer has used large quantities of mums, roses and carnations. Business has been good with him, but a little quiet lately.

Austin Wallace sold all of his mums to good advantage. Benj. Kramer handled about half of them and the rest were consigned to St. Louis. He has several benches of sweet peas that are looking good. They are full of buds. E. C. Amling, of Chicago, will handle his cut.

Henry Seymour has some nice carnations and a large supply of mums. Stock here is looking well.

J. C. Elsperman has been kept busy. He has used a large amount of roses and mums, also all the carnations he could get.

Louis Fritsch says his carnations are doing better than expected. This is his second season and he looks for an excellent trade.

E. L. F.

ADMIRATION

This carnation we offer to the trade as being one of the finest Carnations of any color that we know of up to date. Being a beautiful shade of pink, somewhat lighter than Winona, having that beautiful satin finish, always showing up well either in natural or artificial light. Plants benched in August are now coming into full crop, carrying from 10 to 20 buds. We have been cutting since September 10th. As a money maker you will find no equal.

The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, excellent form, well built up in the center, with the petals so arranged as to make it stand the general requirements of a good fancy commercial variety. A grand keeper and shipper.

The habit is ideal, upright with no surplus grass and every shoot going into flower. Its freedom and earliness make it nearly the ideal carnation. The calyx is very tough and seldom bursts. Can be handled with great success either from the field or grown inside all summer. No one has to be an expert to handle this variety. It scored 86 points at the American Carnation Society meeting at Indianapolis, January 27 to 28, 1909.

Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

250 at 1000 rate.

Send for catalogue of all other new and standard varieties of carnations. We are always pleased to have visitors come and inspect our stock and varieties.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOVELTIES

Best in the World as Usual

The splendid showing of my last year's varieties at all the Eastern shows proves how the standard is maintained.

As the American agent of W. Wells & Co., of Merstham, England, I have arranged for simultaneous distribution of their novelty list of 1910, so that the American cultivators for the first time in history can obtain the Wells-Pockett novelties at the same time as the British grower. That list will include Mrs. David Syme, the gold medal winner, and other splendid kinds not yet named. The 1909 list comprises some grand varieties for the exhibition grower: R. F. Felton, the deepest shade of yellow. Wells' late pink, a grand thing on the style of Brighthurst. Mrs. H. Stevens, Gladys Blackburn, W. Mease, W. Hotston, and other splendid varieties.

In American raised seedlings I will offer Mrs. A. R. Peacock, Mrs. W. Arnold (white), Mrs. W. Wincott (pink), all certificated by the C. S. A., and a yellow sport of the well known Ivory.

If your name is not on my mailing list, write me.

DENVER.

The Market.

The weather has been unseasonably warm, so the best results have not been obtained by either the grower or the retailer; however, business has been fairly satisfactory during the last fortnight. One store man also said the weather was altogether too healthful, as funeral work had been a little scarce. The warm weather has brought in a large quantity of flowers to the market, but most of them found a place, with perhaps the exception of roses, which were abundant, and were sold at a lower figure than usual. Chrysanthemums are not so plentiful, and if the weather continues warm there will be but few left for Thanksgiving. Although carnations are more plentiful, the prices remain about the same, and are not out of proportion, as they were a few weeks ago.

Various Notes.

J. A. Valentine and J. A. Sked have been in attendance at the flower show at Chicago.

Chrysanthemums have been on exhibition the last week at the City Park greenhouses, and made a fine display under the direction of Frank Rushmore.

A. C. Sinram advertises a fine flower show with music November 12 and 13.

Charles Benson is cutting some of the finest yellow mums seen here, the General Hutton.

A meeting of the Florists' Club will be held Thursday evening, November 11, at 1433 California street. E. S. K.

CLIFTONDALE, LYNN, MASS.—William Sim has just started his eleventh greenhouse. The new house is by far the largest of the group, and will be about 500 feet long, 400 feet of the length being forty-five feet wide and 100 feet of length being about thirty feet wide, making a floor space of nearly one-half acre. It is to be devoted to violets and sweet peas.

WATERFORD WORKS, N. J.—Frank Thomas has two nice houses of carnations, from which he has been cutting a good crop since the beginning of the season. He also has a fine looking lot of callas, which give promise of an excellent yield of blooms.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The cut flower market of the town was quite lively last week, owing to several weddings, parties, and successful candidates. Chrysanthemums are now in superb condition and sell well. Beauties and Killarney have the call on the roses and at the present time are exceptionally fine. Violets and valley always keep in demand. Bush mums are selling better than ever, and are now decidedly necessary to the floral store.

Various Notes.

Stafford has been showing some fine plants recently.

Two of the largest weddings of the season were held last week, the work for both being done by W. J. Palmer & Son.

L. H. Neubeck and Jacob Wiese are to take a trip east next week to buy palms.

William Grever has again started his Ever Ready pot cover on the road. This cover is surely well named.

A visit to the Rochester flower show convinced us that that city has some live florists. The show was a huge success in every way. Lots of everything, and best of all, lots of people. The opening day there were estimated to be 2,500 people present, and the second day 7,000. Surely this is gratifying to the management and should be a lesson to the Buffalo florists to start early next year and do the same thing. R. A. S.

CROMWELL, CONN.—A. N. Pierson is erecting another large greenhouse on plant No. 2.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Indian summer weather prevailed last week and, as is usual with unseasonably fine weather, there was little demand for flowers and, in accordance with all precedents, there was an immense amount of stock on the market. Fine large mums, usually bringing $3 to $4 per dozen, sold for 8-cents each. Roses could be had at any price, and even carnations were not reported short of the demand.

Various Notes.

The park board's annual chrysanthemum show opened Sunday morning, November 7, in their greenhouses at Bryant avenue south and Thirty-eighth street. The display, comprising about 1,200 plants, occupies two greenhouses; the larger varieties are in one house and the smaller varieties in the other. Louis Boeglin says the display is much better than last year, and comprises a value of about $1,000, all stock being grown by the park board. Among the new varieties exhibited is Queen of Japan, a thin petaled bloom, unlike any other variety. The show will continue daily for two weeks, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

O. C. Swanson has had a busy week, despite the general depression. Receptions, etc., have kept him busy and depleted his daily stock.

William Gray is now with James Souden. M. E. M.

McCOOK, NEB.

Martch & Johnson have bought the range of houses formerly known as the McCook Greenhouses and owned and operated by L. M. Best. They comprise about 6,000 square feet of glass.

Mr. Best has been in the railroad service since he was a boy, and for many years has been one of the Burlington's conductors between McCook, Neb., and Denver, Colo. He has resigned his position with the Burlington and, like many others, has gone to seek his fortune in the northwest. He has bought a few acres of land just outside the city limits at Sheridan, Wyo., and has let the contract for four modern greenhouses, each 25x100 feet. He was always a great lover of flowers. He made his first start as a florist seven years ago, and soon built up a splendid business. He was also elected superintendent of city parks, which position he filled to the satisfaction of all. Nephrolepis Elegantissima Compacta

Another New Fern Originating with us

To be introduced fall 1909

Of all the valuable introductions in ferns that we have sent out, beginning with the Pierson (Nephrolepis Piersoni), we consider the Elegantissima compacta the most valuable of all, particularly from a commercial standpoint.

While this resembles Elegantissima in a general way, it is far superior to that variety on account of its perfect habit. Yet it can hardly be compared with Elegantissima in a general way, because it occupies a place by itself and is as distinct from Elegantissima as that variety is from Piersoni—in fact, it bears the same relation to Elegantissima that Scottii does to Bostoniensis. Elegantissima compacta has an ideal habit. The fronds are considerably shorter than those of Elegantissima, and it is a more compact plant. It throws a great many more crowns naturally, making a very bushy, dwarf, compact plant. The difference between the two varieties may be seen at a glance.

Fine, strong plants, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100; 4-in. pots, $7.50 per doz., $50.00 per 100; 6-in. pans, $1.50 each; 8-in. pans, $3.00 each.

We make a specialty of all kinds of Nephrolepis, carrying a large stock of all sizes and all times—Piersoni, Elegantissima, Superbissima, Bostoniensis, Scottii, Whitmani, Amerpohlii, etc.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

There has been a good business done in chrysanthemums this fall, but that the supply has exceeded all demands is indicated by the low average prices maintained. Stores and market stalls have been full, and the street dealers have had quantities to sell through the entire season. There seems to be a scarcity of extra fine stock, the general run being of medium grades. There will be one common note of satisfaction when they are over. In quality and size some have exceeded anything seen here before. As to the profits in their cultivation, many growers believe the smaller sizes are more satisfactory than the giants, which find few uses, except for large decorations.

Roses are in excess of daily demands, but the quality is advancing, and several shippers are sending in stock they are entitled to be proud of. Carnations are more plentiful, and move fairly well. Violets are neither abundant nor fine.

The weather has been variable, but generally bright some portions of each day. There have been no rains and few fogs. We have had several heavy frosts which nearly caught some of the growers who were taking chances on the weather report.

There have been some large weddings, which called for some extra fine stock. The fashionable balls will soon begin. The funeral work makes up a large proportion of the daily business. Q.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Lewis Daniel Robinson, Jr., was married November 3 to Miss Edna Smith Nash, of Ludlow, Mass. They will return, after the wedding trip, to their home at 175 North Main street and will be at home to their friends after January 1.

Prepare For Thanksgiving

—AND—REMEMBER

A good TUNE COMES out of AN OLD FIDDLE

Do you want to be suited?

Do you need advice? To whom will you go? Certainly to the wise, experienced, well-known head, who got gray-headed in the many years of service in his profession, the florist business. Godfrey Aschmann, the Philadelphia hustler, is the man who makes a special study of the wants of his customers. He always hits the nail on the head, he knows the pocket book, the means and the exact wants of his customers and raises his plants for them accordingly.

TESTIMONY FROM MICHELL.

I personally visited Mr. Aschmann's greenhouses September 21, 1909, and found that the Araucarias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Boston, Whitmani, Scottii, Amerpohlii, Todeaoides ferns, Rubber Plants, Kentias and Arecas are indeed A No. 1. Have never seen any better plants. The Gloire de Lorraine begonias in 6-in. pots are a perfect wonder, bushy and clean. Have never seen his greenhouses filled with plants as good as they are now.

F. J. MICHELL, of the firm of Henry F. Michell Co., 1018 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Greenhouse Heating.

DON'T let the coal bins run low; it's false economy to buy fuel on the from hand to mouth plan.

REPAIRING FURNACE COILS.

We have a small hot water heating plant, of 1-inch pipe and return bends, which needs repairing. We can repair it most cheaply and effectively, it seems to me, by using 2-inch pipe in the furnace, with three return bends connected with the headers, and by using rusted joints. We should like you to inform us if rust joints, properly made, with cast-iron fittings and pipe, would withstand the expansion and contraction which would likely take place when the bottom pipe is twelve to fifteen inches above the fire and when used for hot water.

G. M.

If the joints are carefully made and the pipes are put together as indicated, there should be no trouble from the breaking of the joints owing to the unequal expansion. It will, however, be even easier to make the coils by using wrought iron pipes and screw joints, as will be possible by connecting with the headers by means of long threads and lock-nuts. The danger of the cracking of the headers will also be lessened if they are built up of tees and close nipples.

A SMALL OHIO HOUSE.

We repaired our house this year and put in new piping. The house is 29x44x 10, with one gable glass. We have ten runs of 1-inch pipe, one run of 3-inch pipe and seven runs of 2-inch pipe. The boiler is a ten horse-power traction, with twenty-two 2-inch flues and a fire-box 23x36. Now, we should like to know if that amount of pipe will heat the house, with hot water, for carnations and geraniums, in our Ohio climate. L. F. C.

To heat a house 29x44 feet to 50 degrees in zero weather, which is approximately what is needed, there should be about 8.75 square feet of radiating surface for each foot in length of the house.
The present piping affords 8.67 feet, which is sufficiently close for all practical purposes.

One-inch pipe is rather small to use with hot water, unless the coils are well above the water level of the boiler.
Whether sufficient heat can be obtained from the piping cannot be told from the data given, but if it is not satisfactory five lines of 2-inch pipe could be substituted for the ten 1-inch pipes.

CONSTRUCTION AND HEATING.

We intend to put up a small, even-span house, 20x100, running east and west.
We will use 12-foot bars. Will bars
1 3/8 x 2 1/4 inches carry 16 inch B double glass? If not, what size of bars will be needed? What should be the height at the ridge and at the sides to give proper slope to the roof?

What number of feet would a coil of 2-inch pipe contain, to heat this house to 50 degrees when the outside temperature is 20 degrees above zero, and when 10 degrees above zero? There will be no glass on the north side. How much 2-inch pipe will be needed to heat the house, using two flows? State the best

A GREAT SUCCESS EVERYWHERE.

Another Thing About Quick Repair

We have said, "In case of any accident to the sections of Improved Capitol Boilers, quick repairs can be accomplished more quickly and easily than with any other boiler."

There is something else, though.

Should it be necessary to make use of the quick repair feature, the permanent repair can be made with less expense. Why? Because Capitol Boilers have divided sections. The sections being in halves, it is not necessary to purchase a section for the entire width of the boiler, but for only one half.

location of the pipes, which we desire to be all overhead, as we do not want any bottom heat and use solid beds. We are located in Virginia. R. G.

The size mentioned for the sashbars is as large as will be required, provided a purlin is used to strengthen them. The height of the walls of the greenhouse should be five or six feet, according to the use to which it is to be put. For many purposes it is also well to have at least two feet of glass in the side walls. In a house of this width it is generally customary to have the ridge about six feet above the plates or the gutters.

To provide the heat required at 20 degrees above zero outside, two 2½-inch flow pipes and five 2-inch returns should be furnished. When the temperature drops as low as 10 degrees above zero it will be advisable to have two 2½-inch flow pipes and seven 2-inch returns, to give a temperature of 50 degrees.

The Market.

The report comes from the majority of the florists that business last week was not at all encouraging. The cause of this was an unusual spell of warm weather; Sunday, November 7, was more like an August day than a November day. Had it not been for a great deal of funeral work it would have been extremely dull. In turn the wholesalers suffered also and stock piled up in great abundance. Even carnations became too many for the first time this season. The chrysanthemums are now crowding the other stock and it is beginning to look as though the whole-salers are in for a glut this week. The stock of cut mums is good, with all fancy grades selling best. Small white varieties in bunches sold well for funeral work, but too many came in.

Beauties are in plenty in all grades, also other roses. These are selling cheaper than any time this year. Good fancies in the smaller roses sell well. Carnations are becoming fine and they are plentiful now, with prices greatly reduced. Violets, both double and single, are more than the demand can handle. Valley sells well, as usual. An extra good demand for greens was reported.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., May 15, 1906.
 GENTLEMEN:—Yours of the 11th at hand. The Wilks heater bought from you last fall has done finely. We burned coke and it has done just fine. By filling up the magazine about 9 or 10 o'clock and closing it up all around, we found a good fire in it by 7 a. m. The grate is one of the best arrangements we ever saw for an ordinary sized plant. It is one of the best heaters I have ever seen.

last week with the local trade, and left Thursday night for Chicago.

The Mullanphy Flower Co. will vacate its old store on 2439 North Grand avenue and in the future will do all its business in its new location at 3514 North Grand avenue.

Louis Schwartzkopf is now with Oster-tag Bros., on Washington avenue, having taken the position vacated by Jule Koenig, who is now with the city forester department.

Adolph Brix reports several large wedding decorations recently and a good run of funeral work. He is cutting a nice lot of chrysanthemum blooms at present.

William Bouche, one of our best local landscape gardeners, has just finished plans for the large private place of G. L. Holman, vice-president of the Laclede Gas Light Co., on Warson and Clayton roads. Emil Rotenhoefer has the contract for all trees and shrubs.

Ed Gerlach, manager at C. A. Kuehn's, reports plenty of stock last week, but demand not so good. Roses and mums were somewhat overstocked.

F. W. Humphrey, a retired clothing merchant, who died recently, was a great lover of flowers. In his will he left $1,000 to be used for the purchase of flowers for his grave.

The Engelmann Botanical Club's monthly meeting took place Monday evening, November 8, in the botanical laboratory of the Central high school. The feature of the meeting was a lantern talk by H. P. Chandler, of the department of geography of Principia school, on "The Experiences of a Botanical Collector in California." Secretary W. W. Ohlweiler reported a good attendance.

A visit to the new establishment of Grimm & Gorley, at 702 Washington avenue, found one of the best stocked stores in the downtown district. The two large show windows were tastefully dressed. Mr. Gorley says their trade has been good since the opening. John Barnard is now in their employ.

You can't afford to have sluggish steam lines, because they greatly increase your coal bills, cause an inferior growth of flowers and give you extra work. Morehead Return Steam Traps return all condensation to the boilers as fast as it accumulates, thus maintaining dry returns and an even temperature throughout the houses. FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are now the factor of the market and indeed the quality, generally speaking, is far better than last season. It is also a noticeable fact that more of them are being grown each year. Incidentally they are cheaper and more profitable. The continued warm weather still piles up stock that more than meets the demand. Most retailers are looking forward to a brisk trade this season.

Financial conditions were never so good as at present, the bank clearings showing a big increase over previous records and maintaining Kansas' position in the financial world, that of sixth place in the amount of clearings.

Country trade is especially brisk, and it is generally conceded that when the farmers have money to spend for such luxuries the season will be prosperous indeed.

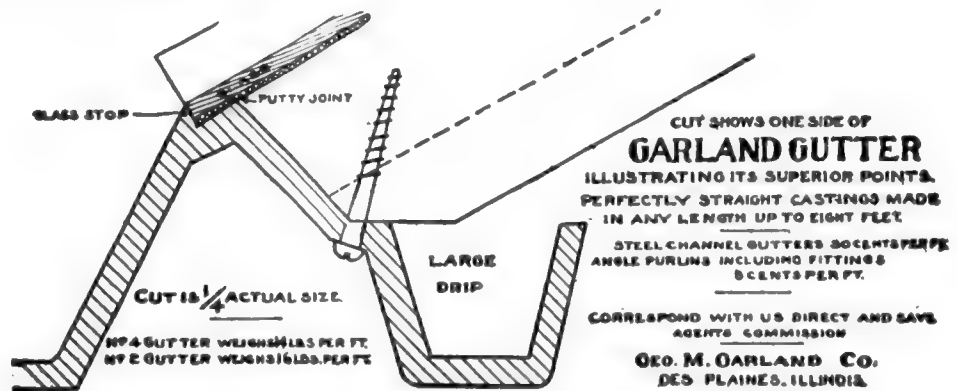

Various Notes.

The William L. Rock Flower Co. is now cutting large quantities of stock. The roses in the new range which was erected this summer are in tip-top condition and Mr. Heite, the manager, is anxiously awaiting the coming of cooler weather and better stock.

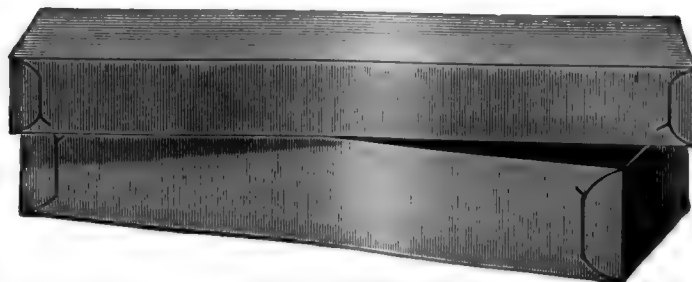

Ed A. Humfeld says that business, so far this fall, has been splendid and that he expects a continuance, climaxed by one of the most rousing Christmas trades we have had the good fortune to experience. Mr. Humfeld has booked some nice orders for weddings.

Walter Heite, of Merriam, Kan., is again on hand with a good crop of chrysanthemums. R. B.

ABILENE, KAN.—Miller Bros. have had an unusually busy fall season. Besides attending to an active trade, they have just completed the erection of two greenhouses, each 27x100. Recently their dwelling house was destroyed by fire, and that event, of course, made the situation more strenuous. Raymond Miller, the former proprietor, died in November, 1908, and since then the business has been conducted by his two sons.

ARE YOU WASTING MONEY?

As truly stated by Prof. A. C. Beal, late of the Illinois Experiment Station:

"The point to keep in mind is that the value of these insecticides (nicotine solutions) depends on the amount of nicotine in them, and the price should be governed accordingly." (Prof. Beal's Article on "Insecticides for Thrips," in "The Weekly Florists' Review," October 29, 1908.)

In short, Professor Beal's article fully substantiates our claim that our "Nico-Fume" products are furnishing the purchaser much more nicotine per dollar invested than is offered by other preparations. For Example:

"Nico-Fume" Liquid, guaranteed to contain not less than 40% nicotine, sells at $10.50 per gallon, in single gallon lots. Yet, through lack of information, some florists are paying $15.00 per gallon for competing preparations, of which the highest claim by any is 45% nicotine.

Don't you see how these florists are wasting money?

For, if 40% nicotine-solution can be bought for \$10.50 per gallon, it is folly to pay \$15.00 per gallon for only 45% nicotine-solution, because, as 45% is only $\frac{1}{5}$ more than 40%, there is consequently only $\frac{1}{5}$ more nicotine in a gallon of 45% nicotine-solution than in a gallon of 40% solution; therefore, the price of the 45% preparation should not be more than $\frac{1}{5}$ greater—namely, not more than \$11.81 per gallon in single gallon lots, instead of \$15.00 per gallon.

Likewise, as to smaller packages: If you can buy a pint of "Nico-Fume" Liquid (40% nicotine) for \$1.50, is it wise to pay the same price for an article containing only 30% nicotine, or to pay \$2.00 to \$2.50 per pint for other preparations when the most nicotine claimed for any of these latter is only $\frac{1}{5}$ more than is in a pint of "Nico-Fume" Liquid? For $\frac{1}{5}$ more than \$1.50 is \$1.69, and not \$2.00 and \$2.50.

QUANTITY DISCOUNTS. We have arranged to allow florists special discounts on quantity orders for "Nico-Fume" Products, our complete schedule of prices being as follows, net cash, f. o. b. Louisville, Ky.

"Nico-Fume" Liquid

$\frac{1}{4}$ Pint.....	\$ 0.50	5 Gallons.....	\$ 47.25—(a saving of 10%)
1 Pint.....	1.50	10 Gallons.....	89.25—(a saving of 15%)
$\frac{1}{2}$ Gallon.....	5.50	20 Gallons.....	168.00—(a saving of 20%)
1 Gallon.....	10.50	40 Gallons.....	315.00—(a saving of 25%)

All quantities in excess of $\frac{1}{2}$ gallon are packed in One Gallon Cans—and not in kegs or barrels—but without increased charge for the cans; the cans being much easier to handle in greenhouse work than kegs or barrels, besides affording less tendency to waste through accident or carelessness.

PURITY. As the question of purity is one of great importance to florists, we guarantee that "Nico-Fume" Liquid contains only nicotine and water, blended in the proportion we deem best for general florist usage, namely, a 40% nicotine solution.

"Nico-Fume" Tobacco Paper

This product, having been put upon the market some time before we offered "Nico-Fume" Liquid, is so well known to florists and horticulturists throughout the country that detailed comment is doubtless unnecessary; our claim being that "Nico-Fume" Paper is the "strongest, best packed, and easiest-applied" tobacco paper on the market—the sheets being folded and punched, ready for use; thus saving labor and loss of strength through evaporation while handling.

Our complete schedule of prices for "Nico-Fume" Paper is as follows, net cash, f. o. b. Louisville, Ky.:

Can containing 24 sheets, $0.75	6 Cans, 288 sheets ea., $ 35.10—(a saving of 10%)
Can containing 144 sheets, 3.50	12 Cans, 288 sheets ea., 66.30—(a saving of 15%)
Can containing 288 sheets, 6.50	24 Cans, 288 sheets ea., 124.80—(a saving of 20%)

INSECT PESTS.

Really hard firing has not yet been necessary, and until the time for such arrives we will be less troubled with insect pests than will be the case later. There is an increasing tendency to steer clear of tobacco stems as much as possible. The time was when tobacco stems were everyone's fumigant. That day has passed. The smoke hung to the plants for days and often caused geraniums, begonias and other flowers to fall in showers, to say nothing of damage done by scorching foliage. Various tobacco papers and extracts of a liquid nature are now largely used, and in careful hands will hold about all greenhouse pests in check. Spraying is becoming more and more popular, in preference to fumigation, and some large growers now depend on it for keeping green and black aphids and thrips in subjection.

A fumigation or spraying once a week will keep plants clean and make it difficult for any pests to get a foothold. Danger of injury from hydrocyanic acid gas is much less now than that the nights are cooler, and even the smaller growers can safely try this, particularly if mealy bug and white fly are a menace. To grow successful crops we must keep the plants absolutely clean, and it is just as necessary to attend to the spraying or fumigating as to watering and ventilating.

JAMESTOWN, N. D.—The Wheeler Floral Co. has completed the rebuilding which was made necessary by a recent fire, and has been cutting fancy blooms of Pacific Supreme, Robinson and Perfection mums. The Perfections are remarkable for size of flower and length of stem. Mr. Wheeler returned lately from a trip to Montana.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

The Newburgh Floral Co., of Newburgh, N. Y., is preparing for a big demand for rooted cuttings. The past season has been a banner one for carnations, both cuttings and plants.

The Schaefer Floral Co., of Newburgh, has the new houses completed and stocked. It is the intention of George Chadburn to rebuild the whole plant. Business is reported good.

The Hallowe'en window of the Yuess Gardens Co., at Newburgh, was conceded to be the prettiest ever seen in these parts. Artist Peattie got in his best work. A photograph would not do the subject justice, owing to much plate glass. I met Percy Herbert, the clever grower for the company. He had just returned from a visit to his old home at Madison and the great show there. He says that White Perfection, exhibited by C. H. Totty, was a marvel among carnations, with stems four feet long and blooms four inches across. No wonder they won the first prize and made one's eyes sparkle when looking at them. Mr. Herbert showed me a fine lot of schizanthus for Christmas sales. The new Nephrolepis Scholzeli is a good seller. In mums A. J. Balfour is here considered a first-class commercial pink; the color is pleasing and the shape perfect. The old favorite white, Minnie Wanamaker, and Eaton, both white and yellow, are standards. Peter Kay will be discarded. Passing through the new shed, which is a model, to the flower room below, connected with a large root cellar, I saw a collection of plants and blooms ready to ship to the Poughkeepsie show.

When I arrived at Poughkeepsie the chrysanthemum show had begun, and promised to be the best on record. The local craft had a fine lot of stock. Conrad C. Gindra had a large collection of single varieties; these are especially popular this season.

A. Laub & Son have a house of Mrs. Jones and Enguehard that are money-makers. Adam Laub, Sr., celebrated his fifty-seventh birthday October 30. May he be around when the concrete walls now being built for the houses will need re-newing.

The window of the Saltford Flower Shop, in yellow and blue, showed artistic taste in the blending of colors. M.

HERSHEY, PA.—The erection of the large greenhouse and laundry by the Hershey Improvement Co. is progressing. The roofs of both are nearly completed.

TO CONTROL GLASS MARKET.

Trade authorities report that unsatisfactory conditions have prevailed in the market for window glass for a long time because of overproduction. This naturally caused great competition and price cutting. A meeting of representatives of practically all the independent glass factories in the country that operate without machine blowers was held at Pittsburg last month. It was planned to organize the Imperial Glass Co., with $10,000,000 capital, to represent about ninety per cent of the factories outside of the $20,000,000 American Window Glass Co., which controls the machine made glass. According to statements made in usually well informed quarters, the latter corporation will work in harmony with the new combination. If the deal is put through along the lines mapped out, more than seventy-five factories will figure in the scheme, with a combined capacity of something like 2,000 pots.

"You know the trade has been in throes of demoralization for a long time, chiefly due to overproduction. As the situation stands now, the hand-made interests can supply all the window glass that is used in this country, while the American Window Glass Co. can supply about fifty per cent of the consumption. In other words, fifty per cent more glass is being turned out than the country can take care of. This accounts for the desire on the part of manufacturers generally, therefore, to regulate the output, which will serve to maintain prices. According to the plan, the new company will have a central office, where it will receive all orders and in turn distribute them among the various factories that will figure in the combination. The impression prevails quite generally that we must adopt measures for the preservation of the industry."
